Pardon(a).

[27 Edw. III. c. 2; 13 Rich. II. st. 2, c. 1; 5 Wil. c. 13; 12 & 13 Wil. c. 2; 20 Geo. II. c. 52; 30 Geo. III. c. 47; 37 Geo. III. c. 140; 58 Geo. III.
c. 29; 6 Geo. IV. c. 25; 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 13; 9 Geo. IV. c. 32.]

A PARDON is a work of mercy, whereby the king, either before the What.
attainder, sentence, or conviction, or after, forgiveth any crime, offence, punishment, execution, right, title, debt, or duty, temporal or ecclesiastical.
(3 Inst. 233.)

The power of pardoning offences is inseparably incident to, and is the Granted by king.
most amiable prerogative of, the crown; and this high prerogative the king is entrusted with upon a special confidence that he will spare those only whose case (could it have been foreseen) the law itself may be presumed willing to have been excepted out of its general rules; which the wisdom of man cannot possibly make so perfect as to suit every particular case. (1 Show.

(a) As to pardons in general, see 1 Chit. 3 Inst. 233 to 240; 2 Hawk. c. 37
C. L. 762 to 777, where the law relative Com. Dig. Pardon.
thereto is very fully considered; and see VOL. V.

By the 30 Geo. III. c. 47, the king may empower the governor or lieutenant-governor of any place to which convicts are transported, to remit the term of transportation.

General pardon.

Pardons are either general or special: general, are by act of Parliament; of which, if they are without exceptions, the court must take notice ex officio: but if there are exceptions therein, the party must aver that he is none of the persons excepted. (3 Inst. 233. Hale's Sum. 252.)

By the 20 Geo. II. c. 52, for the king's general pardon, all persons are pardoned and discharged from certain crimes committed prior to June 15, 1647; with certain exemptions in the said act mentioned.

And the like for the most part hath been enacted by former statutes of general pardon; together, also, with the exceptions of several persons by name.

Special pardon.

Special pardons are either of course, as to persons convicted of manslaughter, or se defendendo, and by divers statutes to those who shall discover their accomplices in several felonies; or of grace, which are by the king's charter, of which the court cannot take notice ex officio, but they must be pleaded. (3 Inst. 233.)

What pardonable.

As to what offences are pardonable in general, see 1 Chit. C. L. 672.

Offence before committed.

The king cannot pardon an offence before it be committed; and such pardon is void. (2 Haw. c. 37, s. 28.)

Nuisances.

And in some cases, even where the king is sole party, some things there are which he cannot pardon: as, for example, for all common nuisances, as for not repairing bridges or highways, the suit (for avoiding multiplicity of suits) is given to the king only for redress and reformation thereof; but the king cannot pardon or discharge either the nuisance, or the suit for the same; because such pardon would take away the only means of compelling a redress of it. But it hath been holden by some, that a pardon of such offence will save the party from any fine for the time precedent to the pardon. (3 Inst. 237. 2 Haw. c. 37, s. 33.)

Fines.

And surely, a fine being a mulct to the king, and not a forfeiture to the party grieved, may be by the king remitted.

Impeachment.

By the act of settlement, 12 & 13 Wil. III. c. 2, no pardon, under the great seal of England, shall be pleadable to an impeachment by the Commons in Parliament. But it seems, after the impeachment solemnly heard and determined, the royal grace is not farther restrained or abridged; for that to pardon delinquents convicted on impeachment is as ancient as the constitution. (4 Blac. Com. 400, n. 2.)

But in the case of an impeachment, after the Lords have delivered their sentence of guilty, the Commons can pardon the party by declining to demand judgment against him; for no judgment can be pronounced by the Lords till it be demanded by the Commons. (4 Blac. Com. 400, n. 2.)

Recognisances.

Thus also, if one be bound by recognisance to the king to keep the peace against another by name, and generally all other lieges of the king, in this case, before the peace be broken, the king cannot pardon or release the recognisance, although it may be made only to him, because it is for the benefit and safety of his subjects. (1 Inst. 238.)

Information qui tam.

Likewise, after an action popular is brought as well for the king as for the informer, according to any statute, the king can but discharge his own part, and cannot discharge the informer's part; because by bringing the action the informer hath an interest therein: but before the action brought, the king may discharge the whole, (unless it be provided to the contrary by the act,) because the informer cannot bring an action or information originally for his part only, but must pursue the statute. And if the action be given to the party grieved, the king cannot discharge the same. (3 Inst. 231.)

By non-payment of money on 7 & 8 G. 4, c. 29.

By 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 69, it shall be lawful for the king to extend his royal mercy to any person imprisoned by virtue of this act (relating to larceny, &c.) ante, Vol. III. "Larceny," although he shall be imprisoned for non-payment of money to some party other than the crown.

Suit in spiritual court.

It seems to have been always agreed that the king's pardon will discharge any suit in the spiritual court, ex officio. Also, it seems to be settled at this day, that it will discharge any suit in such court at the instance of the party, for the reformation of manners, or welfare of the soul, as for defamation, or laying violent hands on a clerk, and such like; for such suits are in truth the suits of the king, though prosecuted by the party. Also, it seems to be agreed that, if the time to which such pardon hath relation be prior to the award of costs to the party, it shall discharge them. And it seems to be the general tenor of the books, that though it be subsequent to the award of the costs, yet if it be prior to the taxation of them, it shall discharge them; because nothing appears in certain to be due for costs before they are taxed. (1 Haw. c. 37, s. 41.)

But it seems agreed that a pardon shall not discharge a suit in the spiritual court any more than in the temporal, for a matter of interest or property in the plaintiff; as for tithes, legacies, matrimonial contracts, and such like. (Id. s. 42.)

If the king release to a man all debts, this shall not discharge his co-debtor; but otherwise it is in case of a subject, for in that case the release to one discharges both. (3 Inst. 239.)

A pardon could not formerly be pleaded, unless it were by act of Parliament or under the great seal; and the king's warrant under the sign-manual was not pleadable, as was held in the case of R. v. Beaton, 1 Bl. Rep. 479; Lord Warwick's case, 13 How. State Trials, 1015; Rex v. Gully, 1 Leach, 98. King's sign-manual to pardon not requisite.

But now by 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 13, "Where the king's majesty shall be pleased to extend his royal mercy to any offender convicted of any felony, punishable with death or otherwise, and by warrant under his royal sign-manual, countersigned by one of his principal secretaries of state, shall grant to such offender either a free or a conditional pardon; the discharge of such offender out of custody in the case of a free pardon, and the performance of the condition in the case of a conditional pardon, shall have the effect of a pardon under the great seal for such offender, as to the felony for which such pardon shall be so granted."

"Provided always, that no free pardon, nor any such discharge in consequence thereof, nor any conditional pardon, nor the performance of the condition thereof in any of the cases aforesaid, shall prevent or mitigate the punishment to which the offender might otherwise be lawfully sentenced on a subsequent conviction, for any felony committed after the granting of any such pardon."

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 25 (which is not repealed), is similar to the first part of the above provision, except that the 6 Geo. IV. applies only to cases of felony excluded the benefit of clergy, whereas the above provision extends to all felonies.

The 9 Geo. IV. c. 32, s. 3, reciting, "It is expedient to prevent all doubts respecting the civil rights of persons convicted of felonies not capital, who have undergone the punishment to which they were adjudged;" enacts, "that where any offender hath been or shall be convicted of any felony not punishable with death, and hath endured or shall endure the punishment to which such offender hath been or shall be adjudged for the same, the punishment so endured hath and shall have the like effects and consequences as a pardon under the great seal, as to the felony whereof the offender was so convicted. Provided always, that nothing herein contained, nor the enduring of such punishment, shall prevent or mitigate any punishment to which the offender might otherwise be lawfully sentenced, on a subsequent conviction for any other felony." Punishment for felony, after endured, to have effect of pardon under great seal.

By the 27 Edw. III. c. 2, in every charter of the pardon of felony, the suggestion, and the name of him that maketh the suggestion, shall be comprised; and, if it be found untrue, the charter shall be disallowed. Pardon to contain the suggestion.

For, wherever it may reasonably be presumed that the king was deceived, the pardon is void. Therefore, any suppression of truth or suggestion of falsehood in a charter of pardon will vitiate the whole. (2 Hawk. s. 37, c. 12; 3 Inst. 238.)

Pardon to specify the offence, if murder, treason, or rape.

And, by stat. 13 Rich. II. st. 2, c. 1, no charter of pardon shall be allowed for murder, treason, or rape, unless the offence be specified therein.

Lord Coke says, the intention of this act was not that the king should grant a pardon of murder by express name in the charter, but because the whole Parliament conceived that he would never pardon murder by special name. And he says, he hath never seen any pardon of murder by any king of England by express name. (2 Inst. 233, 236.)

It was, however, determined in the Court of King's Bench, that the king may pardon on an indictment for murder, as well as a subject may discharge an appeal. (R. v. Parsons, 1 Salk. 499.)

Person pardoned may be bound to good behaviour.

By stat. 5 Wil. III. c. 13, when a pardon is pleaded by any one for felony, the justices may at their discretion remand him to prison till he enter into recognisance, with two sureties, for his good behaviour, for any time not exceeding seven years.

Pardon doth not restore lands or goods forfeited.

It seems to be a settled rule that no pardon by the King, without express words of restitution, shall divest either from the King or subject an interest either in lands or goods vested in them by an attainder or conviction precedent; yet it seems agreed, that a pardon prior to a conviction shall prevent any forfeiture either of lands or goods. (2 Hawk. c. 35, s. 54.)

Doth not restore the corruption of blood.

A pardon after the attainder doth not restore the corruption of blood; for this cannot be restored but by act of Parliament. (3 Inst. 233.)

But, as to issue born after the pardon, it hath the effect of the restitution of blood. (1 Hale, 358.)

Doth restore the credit.

It seems to be settled at this day, that the pardon of treason or felony, even after a conviction or attainder, doth so far clear the party from the infamy and all other consequences of his crime, that he may not only have an action for a scandal in calling him traitor or felon after the time of the pardon, but may also be a good witness, notwithstanding the attainder or conviction; because the pardon makes him, as it were, a new man, and gives him a new capacity and credit. (2 Hawk. c. 37, s. 48. See Vol. II. "Evidence.")

In perjury.

But it seems to be the better opinion that the pardon of a conviction of perjury doth not so restore the party to his credit as to make him a good witness; because it would be an injury to the people in general to make them subject to such a person's testimony. (Anon. 1 Vent. 349.)

Touching a pardon for perjury, this difference is to be taken, that where a party is convict upon the statute, it is part of the judgment to be disabled; but, at common law, it is only a consequential disability. Therefore, in the latter case, the King may pardon, and that restores the party to his testimony; otherwise in the former, for in that case he must reverse the judgment, or cannot be restored. (Rex v. Greepe, 2 Salk. 574.)

Fees for pardons to be paid by the Treasury.

By stat. 58 Geo. III. c. 29 (for regulating the payment of fees for pardons under the great seal), it is enacted, "that no fee, gratuity, or other dues, paid or payable for or in respect of any grant of a pardon by his Majesty, his heirs and successors, or for or in respect of any letters patent, charter, warrant, bill, docket, or other instrument appertaining thereto, or the transcript of any such instrument, shall be paid or payable by or on behalf of the person or persons in whose favour or to whom such pardon shall be granted; but that all fees which are now paid and payable for the granting and passing of any such pardon or pardons, shall be paid by the Lords Commissioners of his Majesty's Treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, in the same manner and by the same persons as other law expenses on behalf of his Majesty are paid."

Exemption from stamp-duties.

Sect. 2 enacts, that from and after the passing of this act, no such letters patent, charter, warrant, bill, docket, instrument, or transcript, as aforesaid, shall be subject to or liable to be charged with any stamp-duty or duties whatever.

Pardon to persons sentenced to death by a naval court-martial.

By stat. 37 Geo. III. c. 140. s. 1, if his Majesty shall be pleased to extend his mercy to any offender liable to the punishment of death, by the sentence of a naval court-martial, upon condition of transportation, or of transporting himself beyond seas, or on condition of being imprisoned within any gaol in Great Britain, or on condition of being kept to hard labour in any gaol, or house of correction, or penitentiary house, or on any river, it shall be lawful for any justice of the King's Bench, chief baron or baron of the Exchequer, of the degree of the coif, upon such intention of mercy, as aforesaid, being notified in writing by one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, to allow to such offender the benefit of such conditional pardon as shall be expressed in such notification, in the same manner as if a conditional pardon had passed for that purpose under the great seal. And, if the condition be of transportation, or of transporting himself, such justice or baron shall make order as he might in cases under stat. 24 Geo. III. s. 2, c. 56. If the condition be of imprisonment, or being kept to hard labour, the pardon shall be allowed, as aforesaid; and such justice or baron shall order imprisonment or hard labour, according to the notification of pardon from such secretary, as he might do by the 19 Geo. III. c. 74.

37 Geo. 3, c. 140.

By sect. 2, the justice or baron who shall allow such pardon, and make such order under such notification, shall direct the notification and his own order to be filed in the office of the Clerk of the Crown of the Court of King's Bench.

The pardon, &c. to be filed in K. B.

By sect. 4, the said clerk of the Crown shall, upon the application of any such offender who shall accept his majesty's pardon, or of any other person applying on his behalf, or on application of any person on the behalf of his majesty, deliver a certificate in writing under his hand, containing an account of the christian name and surname of such offender, of his offence, of the place where the court was held, before whom he was convicted, and of the terms and conditions on which pardon was given him; which certificate shall be sufficient proof of the conviction and sentence of such offender, and also of the terms on which such pardon was granted, in any court, and in any proceeding in which it may be necessary to inquire into the same.

Certificate from clerk of crown to be proof of pardon.

Parent and Children.

AS to the maintenance of children, see "Bastards," Vol. I.; "Poor," Vol. IV.

As to how far an assault may be justified in defence of parent and child, see "Assault," Vol. I.

Parish and other Registers.

AS to proof of marriages, see "Evidence," Vol. II.; "Marriage," Vol. III.

As to proof by registers, see "Evidence," Vol. II.

By stat. 52 Geo. III. c. 146, after reciting that "the amending the manner and form of keeping and of preserving registers of baptisms, marriages, and burials of his majesty's subjects in the several parishes and places in England, will greatly facilitate the proof of pedigrees of persons claiming to be entitled to real or personal estates, and be otherwise of great public benefit and advantage," it is enacted, "that from and after the 31st of December, 1812, registers of public and private baptisms, marriages (a), and burials, solemnized according to the rites of the united Church of England and Ireland, within all parishes or chapelries in England, whether subject to the ordinary, or peculiar, or other jurisdiction, shall be made and kept by the rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister, of every parish (or of any chapelry where the ceremonies of baptism, marriage, and burial, have been usually and may, according to law, be performed), for the time being, in

52 Geo. 3, c. 146.

Ministers to keep registers of baptisms and burials.

(a) By stat. 4 Geo. IV. c. 76, s. 28, marriages are to be in the presence of two witnesses, and by that act they were to be registered and signed, &c., see the act in full, ante, "Marriage," Vol. III.; but the 6 & 7 Wil. IV. c. 86, post, repeals the above act of 52 Geo. III. c. 146, and the 4 Geo. IV. c. 76, so far as they relate to the registration of marriages.

52 Geo. 3, c. 146.

Parishes to provide suitable books for that purpose.

King's printer to transmit to each parish a printed copy of this act, and register-books adapted to the forms herein prescribed.

Registers to be in separate register-books.

Certificate of baptism or burial, when performed in any other place than the parish church or church-yard, to be according to schedule (D.) and the entry of such baptism or burial to be distinguished accordingly (a).

books of parchment, or of good and durable paper, to be provided by his majesty's printer, as occasion may require, at the expense of the respective parishes or chapelries; whereon shall be printed, upon each side of every leaf, the heads of information herein required to be entered in the registers of baptisms, marriages, [see 6 & 7 Wil. IV. c. 86, post,] and burials, respectively; and every such entry shall be numbered progressively from the beginning to the end of each book, the first entry to be distinguished by number 1; and every such entry shall be divided from the entry next following by a printed line, according to the forms contained in the schedule (A. B. C.) hereto annexed; and every page of every such book shall be numbered with progressive numbers, the first page being marked with the number 1, in the middle of the upper part of such page, and every subsequent page being marked in like manner with progressive numbers, from number 1 to the end of the book."

Sect. 2. "And, for better insuring the regularity and uniformity of such register books, a printed copy of this act, together with one book so prepared, as aforesaid, and adapted to the form of the register of baptisms prescribed in the schedule (A.) to this act annexed; and also one other book so prepared as aforesaid, and adapted to the form prescribed for the register of marriages in the schedule (B.) to this act annexed; and also one other book so prepared as aforesaid, and adapted to the form prescribed for the register of burials in the schedule (C.) to this act annexed, shall be provided and transmitted by his majesty's printer to the officiating ministers of the several parishes and chapelries in England respectively, who are hereby required to use and apply the same in and to the purposes of this act; and such books respectively shall be proportioned to the population of the several parishes and chapelries, according to the last returns of such population made under the authority of parliament; and other books of like form and quality shall, for the like purposes, be furnished from time to time by the churchwardens or chapelwardens of every parish or chapelry, at the expense of the said parish or chapelry, whenever they shall be required by the rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister, to provide the same; and all such books shall be of paper, unless required to be of parchment by such churchwardens or chapelwardens respectively."

Sect. 3. "Such registers shall be kept in such separate books aforesaid; and every such rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister, shall, as soon as possible after the solemnization of every baptism, whether private or public, or burial respectively, record and enter, in a fair and legible handwriting, in the proper register-book, to be provided, made, and kept, as aforesaid, the several particulars described in the several schedules hereinbefore mentioned, and sign the same; and in no case, unless prevented by sickness or other unavoidable impediment, later than within seven days after the ceremony of any such baptism or burial shall have taken place."

Sect. 4. "Whenever the ceremony of baptism or burial shall be performed in any other place than the parish church or church-yard of any parish (or the chapel or chapel-yard of any chapelry, providing its own distinct registers), and such ceremony shall be performed by any minister not being the rector, vicar, minister, or curate, of such parish or chapelry, the minister who shall perform such ceremony of baptism or burial shall, on the same or on the next day, transmit to the rector, vicar, or other minister of such parish or

(a) An entry in a register of baptism, as to the time of a child's birth, is not evidence of the age, (Wiher v. Law, 3 Stark. 63; Rex v. Clapham, 4 Car. & P. 29.) Nor is the register of the christening of a child in a particular parish evidence, when unaccompanied by other circumstances, that the child was born in that parish, (Rex v. North Petherton, 5 B. & C. 508, 4 D. & R. M. C. 79, S. C.) And an entry in the register-book by the minister of the parish of the baptism of a child, which had taken place before he became minister or had any connection with the parish, of which he received information from the parish-clerk, is not admissible in evidence, nor is the private memorandum of the fact made by the clerk who was present at the baptism. (Doe d. Warren v. Bray, 3 B. & C. 812; and see further, ante, "Evidence," Vol. II.)

chapelry, or his curate, a certificate of such baptism or burial, in the form contained in the schedule (D.) to this act annexed; and the rector, vicar, minister, or curate, of such parish or chapelry, shall thereupon enter such baptism or burial, according to such certificate, in the book kept pursuant to this act for such purpose, and shall add to such entry the following words: "According to the certificate of the Rev. _____, transmitted to me on the _____ day of _____."

Sect. 5. The several books wherein such entries shall respectively be made, and all register-books heretofore in use, shall be deemed to belong to every such parish or chapelry respectively, and shall be kept by, and remain in the power and custody of, the rector, vicar, curate, or other officiating minister, of each respective parish or chapelry, as aforesaid, and shall be by him safely and securely kept in a dry, well-painted iron chest, to be provided and repaired, as occasion may require, at the expense of the parish or chapelry; and which said chest, containing the said books, shall be constantly kept locked in some dry, safe, and secure place, within the usual place of residence of such rector, vicar, curate, or other officiating minister (if resident within the parish or chapelry), or in the parish church or chapel; and the said books shall not, nor shall any of them, be taken or removed from or out of the said chest, at any time, or for any cause whatever, except for the purpose of making such entries therein, as aforesaid, or for the inspection of persons desirous to make search therein, or to obtain copies from or out of the same, or to be produced as evidence in some court of law or equity, or to be inspected as to the state and condition thereof, or for some of the purposes of this act; and, immediately after making such respective entries, or producing the said books respectively for the purposes aforesaid, the said books shall forthwith again be safely and securely deposited in the said chest.

Sect. 6. At the expiration of two months after the 31st of December, 1812, and at the expiration of two months after the end of every subsequent year, fair copies of all the entries of the several baptisms, marriages, and burials, which shall have been solemnized, or shall have taken place, within the year preceding, shall be made by the rector, vicar, curate, or other resident or officiating minister (or by the churchwardens, chapelwardens, clerk, or other person duly appointed for the purpose, under and by the direction of such rector, vicar, curate, or other resident or officiating minister), on parchment, in the same form as prescribed in the schedules hereunto annexed (to be provided by the respective parishes); and the contents of such copies shall be verified and signed in the form following, by the rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister, of the parish or chapelry to which such respective register-book shall appertain:—

I, A. B., rector [or, as the case may be] of the parish of C. [or, of the chapelry of D.], in the county of E., do hereby solemnly declare, that the several writings hereto annexed, purporting to be copies of the several entries contained in the several register-books of baptisms, marriages, and burials, of the parish or chapelry aforesaid, from the _____ day of _____ to the _____ day of _____, are true copies of all the several entries in the said several register-books respectively, from the said _____ day of _____ to the said _____ day of _____; and that no other entry during such period is contained in any of such books respectively, are truly made, according to the best of my knowledge and belief. (Signed) A. B.*

Which declaration shall be fairly written, without any stamp, on the said copy, immediately after the last entry therein; and the signature to such declaration shall be attested by the churchwardens or chapelwardens, or one of them, of the parish or chapelry to which such register-books shall belong.

Sect. 7. Copies of the said register-books, verified and attested as aforesaid, shall, whether such parish or chapelry shall be subject to the ordinary, peculiar, or other jurisdiction, be transmitted by such churchwardens or chapelwardens, after they, or one of them, shall have signed the same, by the post, to the registrars of each diocese in England, within which the church or chapel shall be situated, on or before the 1st of June, 1814, and on or before the 1st day of June in every subsequent year.

Register-books to be kept in custody of the officiating minister, in an iron chest, to be provided at parish expense.

Annual copies of registers to be made, and to be verified by the officiating minister.

* Sic.

Annual copies of register-books to be transmitted to the registrars of each diocese by the churchwarden.

52 Geo. 3, c. 146.

Registrars to make reports to bishops whether the said copies have been sent in.

On neglect or refusal of minister to verify copies of register-books, churchwardens to certify the default.

Where there is no church or chapel, a memorandum of baptism or burial may be delivered to the minister of adjoining parish.

Letters and packets, containing annual copies of register-books, to go free of postage.

Annual copies of register-books, when transmitted to registrars, to be safely kept from damage; and alphabetical lists to be made.

Report to the Privy Council on or before 1st March, 1813,

Sect. 8. The registrar of every diocese in England shall, on or before the 1st of July, 1814, and on or before the 1st of July in every subsequent year, make a report to the bishop of such diocese, whether the copies of the registers of the baptisms, marriages, and burials, in the several parishes and places within such diocese, have been sent to such registrar, in the manner and within the time herein required; and, in the event of any failure of the transmission of the copies of the registers, as herein required, by the churchwardens and chapelwardens of any parish or chapelry in England, the registrar shall state the default of the parish or chapelry specially in his report to the bishop.

Sect. 9. In case the rector, vicar, or other officiating minister or curate, of any parish or chapelry, shall neglect or refuse to verify and sign such copies of such several register-books, and such declaration as aforesaid, so that the churchwardens or chapelwardens shall not be able to transmit the same, as required by this act, such churchwardens or chapelwardens shall, within the time required by this act for the transmission thereof, certify such default to the registrar of the diocese within which such parish or chapelry shall be, who shall specially state the same in his report to the bishop of such diocese.

Sect. 10. And, for the obtaining of returns and registers of baptisms and burials in extra-parochial places in England, where there is no church or chapel, it is enacted that, in all cases of the baptism of any child, or the burial of any person, in any extra-parochial place in England, according to the rites of the Established Church, where there is no church or chapel, it shall be lawful for the officiating minister, within one month after such baptism or burial, to deliver to the rector, vicar, or curate, of such parish immediately adjoining to the place in which such baptism or burial shall take place, as the ordinary shall direct, a memorandum of such baptism or burial, signed by such parent of the child baptized, or a memorandum of such burial, signed by the person employed about the same, together with two of the persons attending the same, according as the nature of the case may respectively require; and every such memorandum respectively shall contain all such particulars as are herein-before required; and every such memorandum delivered to the rector, vicar, or curate, of any such adjoining parish or chapelry, shall be entered in the register of his parish, and form a part thereof.

Sect. 11. The superscription upon all letters and packets containing the copies of such parish or other registers, to be transmitted by the post to the several offices of the said registrars, as aforesaid, shall be indorsed and signed by the churchwardens or chapelwardens of every respective parish and chapelry in England, in the form contained in schedule (E.); and all such letters and packets shall be carried and conveyed by means of his majesty's post-office to, and be delivered at the offices of, the said registrars, without postage or other charge being paid or payable for the same.

Sect. 12. When and so often as the copies of the said register-books of baptisms, marriages, and burials, as aforesaid, and also the said lists of births, baptisms, marriages, or burials, as aforesaid, shall be transmitted to the office of the said registrars respectively, as aforesaid, pursuant to the directions herein-before contained for that purpose, the said registrars shall respectively cause all the said books and lists to be safely and securely deposited, kept, and preserved, from damage or destruction by fire or otherwise, and to be carefully arranged, for the purpose of being resorted to, as occasion may require; and the said registrars respectively shall also cause correct alphabetical lists to be made, and kept in books suitable to the purpose, of the names of all persons and places mentioned in such books and lists as shall have been transmitted to the said registrars respectively; which alphabetical lists and books, and also the copies of registers and lists so transmitted to the said registrars, as aforesaid, shall be open to public search at all reasonable times, on payment of the usual fees.

Sect. 13. And whereas in many dioceses the places wherein the copies of the parochial registers of baptisms, marriages, and burials, as well as the original wills proved within the same respectively, are kept, are insufficient for their being preserved with due care, for which a remedy should be applied in those dioceses where it shall be found necessary, it is enacted that, in order to a due examination thereof, the bishop, together with the custodes rotulorum of the several counties within each diocese, and the chancellor thereof, shall, before the 1st of February, 1813, cause a careful survey to be made of the several places in which the parochial registers, and the wills proved within the diocese, are kept, and shall make a report to his majesty's most honourable Privy Council of the state of the same, on or before the 1st day of March following, setting forth in each case whether the buildings are in all respects fit and proper for the preservation of papers of the above description, as well with respect to space as to security from fire, and to protection from damp, and if not, at what probable expense they can be made so; and where the instruments and papers before mentioned are kept in dwelling-houses, or other places, which cannot be made fit and secure for the due preservation thereof, then, and in such case, the persons before named shall inquire and report in like manner at what expense proper buildings may be provided, and in what places, so as to have one place within each diocese for the due preservation of all such registers and wills, together with their opinion upon the most suitable mode of remunerating the officers employed in each registry, for their additional trouble and expense in carrying the provisions of this act into execution.

respecting proper places for the preservation of copies of register-books, as well as original wills, in each diocese, and for remuneration of registrars' officers.

Sect. 16. Nothing in this act contained shall in any manner diminish or increase the fees heretofore payable or of right due to any minister for the performance of any of the before-mentioned duties, or to any minister or registrar for giving copies of such registrations, but that all due, legal, and accustomed fees on such occasions, and all powers and remedies for recovery thereof, shall be and remain as though this act had not been made.

Fees heretofore payable not altered by this act.

Sect. 17. No duplicate or copy of any register of baptism, marriage, or burial, made under the directions and for the purposes of this act, shall be chargeable with any stamp duty thereon; any act now in force to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding.

Annual copy of register-books not subject to stamp duty.

Sect. 18. One half of the amount of all fines or penalties to be levied in pursuance of this act, shall go to the person who shall inform or sue for the same; and the remainder of such fines as shall be imposed on any churchwarden or chapelwarden shall go to the poor of the parish or place for which such churchwarden or chapelwarden shall serve; and the remainder of such fines as shall be imposed on any rector, vicar, minister, or curate, or registrar, shall be paid and applied to such charitable purposes, in the county within which the parish or place shall be, as shall be directed by the bishop of the diocese.

Application of penalties.

Sect. 19. The rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister of every parish and chapelry in England, whether subject to the ordinary, peculiar, or other jurisdiction, shall transmit to the registrar of the diocese in which the parish or chapelry shall be situated, before the 1st day of June, 1813, a list of all registers which now are in such parish or chapelry respectively, stating the periods at which they respectively commence and terminate, the periods (if any) for which they are deficient, and the places where they are deposited.

Lists of all extant register-books to be transmitted by the officiating minister to the registrar before 1st June, 1813.

Sect. 20. All the provisions in this act shall extend, so far as circumstances will permit, to cathedral and collegiate churches, and chapels of colleges or hospitals, and the burying grounds belonging thereto; and to the ministers who shall officiate in such cathedral or collegiate churches, and chapels of colleges or hospitals, and burying grounds respectively, and shall baptize, marry, or bury any person or persons, although such cathedral or collegiate churches or chapels of colleges or hospitals, or the burying grounds belonging thereto, may not be parochial, or the ministers officiating therein may not be, as such, parochial ministers, and there shall be no churchwarden or churchwardens thereof; and in all such cases, the books herein-before directed to be provided, shall be provided at the expense of the body having right to appoint the officiating minister in every such cathedral or collegiate church or chapel of a college or hospital; and copies thereof shall be transmitted to the registrar of the diocese within which such cathedral or collegiate church or chapel of a college or hospital shall be, by the officiating minister of such by churchwardens : provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to repeal any provision contained in an act passed in the twenty-sixth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Second, intituled An Act for better preventing Clandestine Marriages.

The 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Will. IV. c. 66 (which repeals the 14th and 15th sections of 52 Geo. III. c. 146, s. 20), enacts, " that if any person shall knowingly and wilfully insert, or cause or permit to be inserted, in any register of baptisms, marriages, or burials, which hath been or shall be made or kept by the rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister of any parish, district-parish, or chapelry in England, any false entry of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial ; or shall forge or alter in any such register any entry of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial ; or shall utter any writing as and for a copy of an entry in any such register of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial, knowing such writing to be false, forged, or altered ; or if any person shall utter any entry in any such register of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial, knowing such entry to be false, forged, or altered, or shall utter any copy of such entry, knowing such entry to be false, forged or altered, or shall wilfully destroy, deface, or injure, or cause or permit to be destroyed, defaced, or injured, any such register or any part thereof ; or shall forge or alter, or shall utter, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any licence of marriage ; every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for life or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years, nor less than two years."

Sect. 21. No rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister of any parish, district-parish, or chapelry, who shall discover any error in the form or substance of the entry in the register of any baptism, marriage, or burial respectively by him solemnized, shall be liable to any of the penalties herein mentioned, if he shall, within one calendar month after the discovery of such error, in the presence of the parent or parents of the child baptized, or of the parties married, or in the presence of two persons who shall have attended at any burial, or in the case of the death or absence of the respective parties aforesaid, then in the presence of the churchwardens or chapelwardens, correct the entry which shall have been found erroneous, according to the truth of the case, by entry in the margin of the register wherein such erroneous entry shall have been made, without any alteration or obliteration of the original entry, and shall sign such entry in the margin, and add to such signature the day of the month and year when such correction shall be made ; and such correction and signature shall be attested by the parties in whose presence the same are directed to be made as aforesaid : provided also, that in the copy of the register which shall be transmitted to the registrar of the diocese, the said rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister, shall certify the corrections so made by him as aforesaid.

Sect. 22, after reciting that " copies of the registers of baptisms, marriages, and burials, such copies being signed and verified by the written declaration of the rector, vicar, curate, or officiating minister of every parish, district-parish, and chapelry in England where the ceremonies of baptism, marriage, and burial may lawfully be performed, are directed by law to be made and transmitted to the registrar of the diocese within which such parish, district-parish, or chapelry may be situated : " enacts, " that if any person shall knowingly and wilfully insert, or cause or permit to be inserted, in any copy of any register so directed to be transmitted as aforesaid, any false entry of any matter relating to any baptism, marriage, or burial, or shall forge or alter, or shall utter, knowing the same to be forged or altered, any copy of any register so directed to be transmitted as aforesaid, or shall knowingly and wilfully sign or verify any copy of any register so directed to be transmitted as aforesaid, which copy shall be false in any part thereof, knowing the same to be false, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years, nor less than one year." 52 Geo. 3, c. 146. transportation for seven years, &c.

By the 6 & 7 Wil. IV. c. 86, intituled, "An Act for registering Births, Deaths, and Marriages in England," [17th August, 1836,] reciting, "Whereas it is expedient to provide the means for a complete register of the births, deaths, and marriages of his majesty's subjects in England: and whereas an act passed in the fifty-second year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Third, intituled, 'An Act for the better regulating Parish and other Registers of Births, Baptisms, Marriages, and Burials in England,' and also an act passed in the fourth year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, intituled, 'An Act for amending the Laws respecting the Solemnization of Marriages in England,' are insufficient for the purpose aforesaid: it is therefore enacted, "that after the 1st day of March, in the year 1837, so much of the said acts as relates to the registration of marriages shall be repealed." 6 & 7 Wil. 4, c. 86. 52 Geo. 3, c. 146. 4 Geo. 4, c. 76.

Sect. 2. "It shall be lawful for his majesty to provide a proper office in London or Westminster, to be called 'The General Register Office,' for keeping a register of all births, deaths, and marriages of his majesty's subjects in England, and to appoint for the said office under the great seal of the United Kingdom a registrar-general of births, deaths, and marriages in England, and from time to time at pleasure to remove the said registrar-general, and appoint some other person in his room." So much of recited acts as relates to registration of marriages repealed. General registry office to be provided in London or Westminster.

Sect. 3. "The lord treasurer or lords commissioners of his majesty's treasury, or any three of them, or the registrar-general, subject to the approval of the said lords commissioners, shall appoint from time to time such officers, clerks, and servants as they shall deem necessary to carry on the business of the general registry office, and at pleasure remove them or any of them; and the said lord treasurer or lords commissioners shall fix the salary of the registrar-general, so that the same shall not at any time exceed the sum of 1000*l*. yearly, and shall fix the salaries of the officers, clerks, and servants in fit proportion according to the duties they may have to perform." Lord treasurer or lords commissioners of his majesty's treasury to appoint officers and fix salary.

Sect. 4. "The salaries of the registrar-general, and of the said officers, clerks, and servants, and the amount of the sums hereinafter provided to be paid to the superintendent-registrars for every entry in the certified copies of the registers, and all expenses of carrying on the business of the general registry office not herein otherwise provided for, shall be paid by the said lord treasurer or lords commissioners of his majesty's treasury out of the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland." Salaries to be paid out of the consolidated fund.

Sect. 5. "One of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, or the registrar-general with the approbation of such principal secretary, from time to time may make regulations for the management of the said register office, and for the duties of the registrar-general, clerks, officers, and servants of the said office, and of the registrars, deputy-registrars, and superintendent-registrars hereinafter mentioned, in the execution of this act, so that they be not contrary to the provisions herein contained; and the regulations so made and approved shall be binding on the said registrar-general, clerks, officers, and servants, and on the registrars, deputy-registrars, and superintendent-registrars." Regulations for conduct of officers to be framed under direction of secretary of state.

Sect. 6. "The registrar-general shall send once in every year to one of the principal secretaries of state a general abstract of the numbers of births, deaths, and marriages registered during the foregoing year, in such form as the said secretary from time to time shall require; and every such annual general abstract shall be laid before parliament within one month after receipt thereof, or after the meeting of parliament." Annual abstract of registers to be laid before parliament.

Sect. 7. "The guardians of every union declared under the provisions of an act passed in the fifth and sixth years of his present majesty, intituled, 'An Act for the Amendment and better Administration of the Laws relating Districts to be formed, and registrars and superintendent-re-to the Poor in England and Wales,' and also of every parish or place in which a board of guardians shall have been established under the provisions of the last-named act, shall, on or before the 1st day of October in this year, if the said board of guardians shall have been established before the passing of this act, or within three calendar months next after the establishment of the board, if the said board shall not have been established before the passing of this act, divide the union or the parish or place of which they are the guardians into such and so many districts as they, subject to the approval of the registrar-general, shall think fit; and every such division when made shall be published by the guardians within the union, parish, or place of which they are guardians, in such manner as the said registrar-general shall direct; and every such district shall be called by a distinct name, and shall be a registrar's district; and the guardians shall appoint a person, with such qualifications as the registrar-general may by any general rule declare to be necessary, to be registrar of births and deaths within each district, and in every case of vacancy in the office of registrar shall forthwith fill up the vacancy; and the clerk to the guardians of every such union, parish, or place shall, if he shall think fit to accept such office, and have such qualifications as the registrar-general may by any general rule declare to be necessary, be the superintendent-registrar thereof; and in the event of his refusal or disqualification to act in that capacity, the guardians shall appoint a person, with such qualifications as the registrar-general may by any general rule declare to be necessary, to be the superintendent-registrar of each union, or of such parish or place, and in every case of vacancy of the office of superintendent-registrar shall forthwith fill up the vacancy; and every registrar and superintendent-registrar shall hold his office during the pleasure of the registrar-general."

Officers of unions, &c., being dismissed by guardians, &c., to cease to act under this act.

Sect. 8. "Provided always, that in every case in which the clerk to the guardians of any union, parish, or place, or any other officer of any such union, parish, or place, shall hold any office under this act, and shall be removed by the poor law commissioners from his office in such union, parish, or place, and in every case in which any registrar or superintendent-registrar shall be removed by the registrar-general from his office under this act, notice of such removal shall be forthwith given by advertisement in some newspaper circulating in the county wherein the district for which such officer may act shall be; and every such person shall thenceforth cease to hold his office under this act, and shall be incapable of being re-appointed thereto: provided also, that the appointment of any officer of any such union, parish, or place to any office under this act shall be subject to the approval of the poor law commissioners, except as hereinbefore directed with respect to the clerk to guardians of any such union, parish, or place."

Register offices to be provided in each union.

Sect. 9. "The guardians shall provide and uphold, out of the monies coming to their hands or control as such guardians, a register office, according to a plan to be approved by the registrar-general, for preserving the registers to be deposited therein, as hereinafter provided; and the care of the said office and the custody of the registers deposited therein shall be given to the superintendent-registrar of the union or parish or place having a board of guardians as aforesaid."

Temporary registrars and superintendent registrars to be appointed for parishes not under the poor law act.

Sect. 10. "The poor law commissioners for England and Wales shall, as soon as may be after the said first day of October, form all the parishes, townships, and places in England, in or for which a board of guardians shall not have been then established under the provisions of the said act for the amendment of the laws relating to the poor, into temporary districts, having regard in the formation thereof to the boundaries of parishes and townships, and shall appoint a registrar to each of such temporary districts, subject to being displaced as hereinafter provided; and the registrar-general shall appoint a sufficient number of fit persons to be superintendent-registrars for such temporary districts, subject to being displaced as hereinafter provided, and shall appoint the districts which each shall superintend."

In case of subsequent unions pre-

Sect. 11. "In every case in which a board of guardians shall be established, under the provisions of the said act for the amendment of the laws relating to the poor, in or for any parish, township, or place forming part of any temporary district in or for which a registrar or superintendent-registrar shall have been previously appointed as last aforesaid, and as soon as a registrar or registrars shall have been appointed for the districts into which the guardians shall have divided the union or parish or place of which they are guardians as aforesaid, and the clerk of the guardians of such union, parish, or place shall have accepted the office of superintendent-registrar, or the said guardians shall have appointed a superintendent-registrar for such districts, in like manner as in the unions formed before the passing of this act, every such parish or place shall cease to be a part of the temporary district to which it was so annexed by the poor law commissioners, and every registrar, deputy-registrar, and superintendent-registrar appointed before the election of such board of guardians as aforesaid in or for such parish, township, or place shall cease to hold their respective offices, so far as relates to such parish, township, or place, unless re-appointed."

vious appointments to be vacated.

Sect. 12. "For every district for which a registrar of births and deaths shall be appointed by the guardians as aforesaid, the registrar shall have power, subject to the approval of such guardians, and for every district for which a registrar shall be appointed by the said poor law commissioners, such registrar shall have power, subject to the approval of such commissioners, to appoint by writing under his hand a fit person to act as his deputy in case of the illness or unavoidable absence of such registrar; and every such deputy-registrar whilst so acting shall have all the powers and duties and be subject to all the provisions and penalties herein declared concerning registrars, and in case of the death of the registrar shall act as registrar until another registrar is appointed; and every registrar shall be civilly responsible for the acts or omissions of his deputy."

Deputy registrars to be appointed.

Sect. 13. "The appointments of registrars, deputy-registrars, and superintendent-registrars, and the duplicates and certified copies of registers hereinafter mentioned, shall be exempt from all stamp duties."

Appointments to be exempt from stamp duties.

Sect. 14. "The registrar-general shall furnish to every superintendent-registrar, for the use of the registrars under his superintendence, a sufficient number of strong iron boxes to hold the register books to be kept by such registrar; and every such box shall be furnished with a lock and two keys, and no more; and one of such keys shall be kept by the registrar, and the other key shall be kept by the superintendent-registrar; and the register books of each district, while in the custody of the registrar and not in use, shall be always kept in the register box, and the register box shall always be left locked."

Register boxes to be provided.

Sect. 15. "In every case in which any registrar or superintendent-registrar shall be removed from or cease to hold the said office, all register boxes, keys, books, documents, and papers in his possession as such registrar or superintendent-registrar shall be given as soon as conveniently may be to his successor in office; and if any person shall refuse to give up any such box, key, books, documents, or papers in such case as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace for the county or other jurisdiction where such person shall be or reside, upon application made for that purpose, to issue a warrant under his hand and seal for bringing such person before any two justices of the peace for the said county or other jurisdiction, and upon such person appearing, or not being found, it shall be lawful for such justices to hear and determine the matter in a summary way; and if it shall appear to the justices that any such box, key, books, documents, or papers are in the custody or power of any such person, and that he has refused or wilfully neglected to deliver the same, the said justices are hereby required to commit such offender to the common gaol or house of correction for the said county or jurisdiction, there to remain without bail until he shall have delivered up the same, or until satisfaction shall have been given in respect thereof to the person in whose custody the same ought to be; and the said justices may grant a warrant to search for such box, key, books, documents, or papers, as in the case of stolen goods, in any dwelling-house or other premises in which any credible witness shall prove upon oath before them that there is reasonable cause to suspect the same to be; and the same when found shall be delivered to the person in whose custody they ought to be."

Sect. 16. "Every registrar and deputy-registrar shall dwell within the district of which he is registrar or deputy-registrar, and shall cause his name, with the addition of registrar or deputy-registrar (as the case may be) for the district for which he shall be so appointed to be placed in some conspicuous place on or near the outer door of his own dwelling-house; and the superintendent-registrar shall cause to be printed and published in the districts which he shall superintend a list of the name and place of abode of every registrar and deputy-registrar under his superintendence."

Sect. 17. "The registrar-general shall cause to be printed on account of the said register office a sufficient number of register books for making entries of all births, deaths, and marriages of his majesty's subjects in England, according to the forms of schedules (A.) (B.) (C.) to this act annexed; and the said register books shall be of durable materials, and in them shall be printed upon each side of every leaf the heads of information herein required to be known and registered of births, deaths, and marriages respectively; and every page of each of such books shall be numbered progressively from the beginning to the end, beginning with number 1; and every place of entry shall be also numbered progressively from the beginning to the end of the book, beginning with number 1; and every entry shall be divided from the following entry by a printed line."

Sect. 19. "The father or mother of any child born, or the occupier of every house or tenement in England in which any birth or death shall happen, after the said first day of March, may, within forty-two days next after the day of such birth or within five days after the day of such death respectively, give notice of such birth or death to the registrar of the district; and in case any new-born child or any dead body shall be found exposed, the overseers of the poor in the case of the new-born child, and the coroner in the case of the dead body, shall forthwith give notice and information thereof, and of the place where such child or dead body was found, to the registrar; and for the purposes of this act the master or keeper of every gaol, prison, or house of correction, or workhouse, hospital, or lunatic asylum, or public or charitable institution, shall be deemed the occupier thereof."

Sect. 20. "The father or mother of every child born in England after the said first day of March, or in case of the death, illness, absence, or inability of the father and mother, the occupier of the house or tenement in which such child shall have been born, shall, within forty-two days next after the day of every such birth, give information, upon being requested so to do, to the said registrar, according to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, of the several particulars hereby required to be known and registered, touching the birth of such child."

Sect. 21. "If any child of an English parent shall be born at sea on board of a British vessel, the captain or commanding officer of the vessel on board of which the said child shall have been born shall forthwith make a minute of the several particulars hereinbefore required to be inserted in the register touching the birth of such child, so far as the same may be known, and the name of the vessel wherein the birth took place, and shall, on the arrival of such vessel in any port of the United Kingdom, or by any other sooner opportunity, send a certificate of the said minute through the post office to the registrar-general, who shall file the same, and enter a copy thereof under his hand in a book to be kept for that purpose in 'the General Register Office,' to be called the 'Marine Register Book,' and shall keep the said book with the other registers, according to the provisions of this act."

Registry of children born at sea.

Sect. 22. "After the expiration of forty-two days following the day of the birth of any child it shall not be lawful for any registrar to register such birth, save as hereinafter is next mentioned; provided that, in case the birth of any child shall not have been registered according to the provisions hereinbefore contained, it shall be lawful for any person present at the birth of such child, or for the father or guardian thereof, at any time within six calendar months next after the birth, to make a solemn declaration of the particulars required to be known touching the birth of such child, according to the best of his or her knowledge and belief, and it shall thereupon be lawful for the said registrar then and there, in the presence of the superintendent-registrar, to register the birth of the said child according to the information of the person making the said declaration; and in every such case the superintendent-registrar before whom the said declaration is made shall sign the entry of the birth as well as the registrar, and for every such registry as last aforesaid the superintendent-registrar shall be entitled to have a fee of two shillings and sixpence from the person requiring the same to be registered; and the registrar, over and above the fee hereinafter enacted in respect of every birth registered by him, shall be entitled, unless the delay shall have been occasioned by his default, to have a fee of five shillings from the person requiring the same to be registered; and no register of births shall be given in evidence to prove the birth of any child wherein it shall appear that forty-two days have intervened between the day of the birth and the day of the registration of the birth of such child, unless the entry shall be signed by the superintendent-registrar; and every person who shall knowingly register or cause to be registered, the birth of any child, otherwise than hereinbefore is last-mentioned, after the expiration of forty-two days following the day of the birth of such child, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence a sum not exceeding 50*l*."

As to registry after the expiration of forty-two days from the birth of the child.

Sect. 23. "After the expiration of six calendar months following the birth of any child it shall not be lawful for any registrar to register the birth of such child, and no register of births, except in the case of children born at sea, shall be given in evidence to prove the birth of any child wherein it shall appear that six calendar months have intervened between the day of the birth and the day of the registration of the birth of such child; and every person who shall knowingly register or cause to be registered the birth of any child after the expiration of six calendar months following the day of the birth of such child shall forfeit and pay for every such offence a sum not exceeding 50*l*."

Births not to be registered after six months.

Sect. 24. "If any child born in England whose birth shall have been registered as aforesaid shall, within six calendar months next after it shall have been so registered, have any name given to it in baptism, the parent or guardian of such child, or other person procuring such name to be given, may, within seven days next after such baptism, procure and deliver to the registrar or superintendent-registrar, in whose custody the register of the birth of the child may then happen to be, a certificate, according to the form of schedule (G.) to this act annexed, signed by the minister who shall have performed the rite of baptism, which certificate such minister is hereby required to deliver immediately after the baptism, whenever the same shall be then demanded, on payment of the fee of 1*s*., which he shall be therefore entitled to receive; and the said registrar or superintendent-registrar, upon receipt of such certificate and on payment of the fee of 1s., which he shall be therefore entitled to receive, shall, without any erasure of the original entry, forthwith register therein that the child was baptized by such name, and the registrar shall thereupon certify upon the said certificate the additional entry so made, and shall forthwith send the said certificate through the post office to the registrar-general."

Some person present at death, or occupier of house, required to give particulars of death, so far as known.

Registrar to make entry of finding of jury upon coroners' inquests.

Registry of persons dying at sea.

Registrar to give certificate of registry of death to undertaker, who shall deliver the same to the minister or officiating person.

Coroner may order body to be buried, and give certificate thereof.

No dead body to be buried without certificate of registry or of inquest.

Penalty, 10l.

Register to be signed by the informant.

Registrars to make out accounts quarterly.

Sect. 25. "Some person present at the death, or in attendance during the last illness of every person dying in England after the said first day of March, or in case of the death, illness, inability, or default of all such persons, the occupier of the house or tenement, or if the occupier be the person who shall have died, some inmate of the house or tenement in which such death shall have happened, shall, within eight days next after the day of such death, give information, upon being requested so to do, to the said registrar, according to the best of his or her knowledge and belief of the several particulars hereby required to be known and registered, touching the death of such person: provided always, that in every case in which an inquest shall be held on any dead body the jury shall inquire of the particulars herein required to be registered concerning the death, and the coroner shall inform the registrar of the finding of the jury, and the registrar shall make the entry accordingly."

Sect. 26. "If any of his majesty's English subjects shall die at sea on board of a British vessel, the captain or commanding officer of the vessel on board of which such death shall have happened shall forthwith make a minute of the several particulars hereinbefore required to be inserted in the register touching such death, so far as the same may be known, and the name of the vessel wherein the death took place, and shall, on the arrival of such vessel in any port of the United Kingdom, or by any other sooner opportunity, send a certificate of the said minute through the post office to the registrar-general, who shall file the same, and enter a copy thereof under his hand in the marine register book, and keep the same with the other registers, according to the provisions of this act."

Sect. 27. "Every registrar, immediately upon registering any death, or as soon thereafter as he shall be required so to do, shall, without fee or reward, deliver to the undertaker or other person having charge of the funeral a certificate under his hand, according to the form of schedule (E.) to this act annexed, that such death has been duly registered, and such certificate shall be delivered by such undertaker or other person to the minister or officiating person who shall be required to bury or to perform any religious service for the burial of the dead body, and if any dead body shall be buried for which no such certificate shall have been so delivered, the person who shall bury or perform any funeral or any religious service for the burial shall forthwith give notice thereof to the registrar: provided always, that the coroner, upon holding any inquest, may order the body to be buried, if he shall think fit, before registry of the death, and shall in such case give a certificate of his order in writing, under his hand, according to the form of schedule (F.) to this act annexed, to such undertaker or other person having charge of the funeral, which shall be delivered as aforesaid; and every person who shall bury or perform any funeral or any religious service for the burial of any dead body for which no certificate shall have been duly made and delivered as aforesaid, either by the registrar or coroner, and who shall not within seven days give notice thereof to the registrar, shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding 10l. for every such offence."

Sect. 28. "Every person by whom the information contained in any register of birth or death under this act shall have been given shall sign his name, description, and place of abode in the register; and no register of birth or death, according to this act, shall be given in evidence which shall not be signed by some person professing to be the informant, and to be such party as is herein required to give such information to the registrar."

Sect. 29. "Every registrar shall make out an account four times in every year of the number of births and deaths which he shall have registered since the last quarterly account, and the superintendent-registrar shall verify and sign the same, and the guardians or overseers of the parish, township, or place in or for which he shall be registrar, on production of the said account so verified and signed, shall pay to the said registrar, out of the monies in their hands or power as such guardians or overseers, such sums as he shall be entitled to receive on the said account according to the following scale; (that is to say,) for the first twenty entries of births and deaths in every year which he shall have registered, whether the same be of births or of deaths indiscriminately, 2s. 6d. each, and 1s. for every subsequent entry of births or deaths in each year; and in the case of an union the said several sums shall be charged to the account of the parishes in which such births or deaths respectively shall have occurred."

6 & 7 Wil. 4, c. 86.

Guardians or overseers to pay registrars.

Sect. 30. "The registrar-general shall furnish or cause to be furnished to the rector, vicar, or curate of every church and chapel in England wherein marriages may lawfully be solemnized, and also to every person to whom the recording clerk of the society of friends commonly called Quakers, at their central office in London, shall from time to time certify in writing under his hand to the registrar-general to be a registering officer in England of the said society, and also to every person whom the president for the time being of the London committee of deputies of the British Jews shall from time to time certify in writing under his hand to the registrar-general to be the secretary of a synagogue in England of persons professing the Jewish religion, a sufficient number in duplicate of marriage register books, and forms for certified copies thereof, as hereinafter provided; and the cost of all such books and forms shall be paid by the churchwardens and overseers of the parish or chapelry out of the monies in their hands as such churchwardens and overseers, or by the registering officer or secretary respectively, to whom the same shall be furnished."

Marriage register books to be provided.

Sect. 31. "Every clergyman of the church of England, immediately after every office of matrimony solemnized by him, shall register in duplicate in two of the marriage register books the several particulars relating to that marriage according to the form of the said schedule (C.); and every such registering officer of the Quakers, as soon as conveniently may be after the solemnization of any marriage between two Quakers in the district for which he is registering officer, and every such secretary of a synagogue, immediately after every marriage solemnized between any two persons professing the Jewish religion, of whom the husband shall belong to the synagogue whereof he is secretary, shall register or cause to be registered in duplicate in two of the said marriage register books the several particulars relating to that marriage according to the form of the said schedule (C.); and every such registering officer or secretary, whether he shall or shall not be present at such marriage, shall satisfy himself that the proceedings in relation thereto have been conformable to the usages of the said society, or of the persons professing the Jewish religion, as the case may be; and every such entry as hereinbefore is mentioned (whether made by such clergyman or by such registering officer or secretary respectively as aforesaid) shall be signed by the clergyman or by the said registering officer or secretary as the case may be, and by the parties married, and by two witnesses, and shall be made in order from the beginning to the end of each book, and the number of the place of entry in each duplicate marriage register book shall be the same."

Marriage registers to be kept in duplicate.

Sect. 32. "In the months of April, July, October, and January, on such days as shall from time to time be appointed by the registrar-general, every registrar shall make, and deliver to the superintendent-registrar of his district, on durable materials, a true copy, certified by him under his hand according to the form of schedule (D.) to this act annexed, of all the entries of births and deaths in the register book kept by him since the last certificate, the first of such certificates to be given in the month of July in the year 1837, and to contain all the entries made up to that time; and the superintendent-registrar shall verify the same, and if found to be correct shall certify the same under his hand to be a true copy; and if there shall have been no birth or death registered since the delivery of the last certificate the registrar shall certify the fact, and such certificate shall be delivered to the superintendent-registrar as aforesaid, and countersigned by him; and the registrar shall keep safely each of the said register books until it shall be filled, and shall then deliver it to the superintendent-registrar, to be kept by him with the records of his office."

Duplicates and certified copies of registers of marriages to be sent to superintendent-registrar.

Sect. 33. "The rector, vicar, or curate of every such church and chapel, and every such registering officer and secretary, shall, in the months of April, July, October, and January respectively, make and deliver to the superintendent-registrar of the district in which such church or chapel may be situated, or which may be assigned by the registrar-general to such registering officer or secretary, on durable materials, a true copy certified by him under his hand of all the entries of marriages in the register book kept by him since the last certificate, the first of such certificates to be given in the month of July, 1837, and to contain all the entries made up to that time, and if there shall have been no marriage entered therein since the last certificate, shall certify the fact under his hand, and shall keep the said marriage register books safely until the same shall be filled; and one copy of every such register book, when filled, shall be delivered to the superintendent-registrar of the district in which such church or chapel may be situated, or which shall have been assigned as aforesaid to such registering officer or secretary, and the other copy of every such register book kept by any such rector, vicar, or curate, shall remain in the keeping of such rector, vicar, or curate, and shall be kept by him with the registers of baptisms and burials of the parish or chapelry within which the marriages registered therein shall have been solemnized; and the other copy of every such register book of marriages among the people called Quakers, and among the persons professing the Jewish religion respectively, shall remain under the care of the said people or persons respectively, to be kept with their other registers and records, and shall, for the purposes of this act, be still deemed to be in the keeping of the registering officer or secretary for the time being respectively."

Superintendent-registrars to send certified copies of registers to the general register office.

Sect. 34. "Every superintendent-registrar shall, four times in every year, on such days as shall be therefore named by the registrar-general, send to the registrar-general all the certified copies of the registers of births, deaths, and marriages which he shall have so received during the three calendar months next preceding such quarterly days of transmission respectively; and if it shall appear, by interruption of the regular progression of numbers or otherwise, that the copy of any part of any book has not been duly delivered to him, he shall procure as far as possible, consistently with the provisions of this act, that the same may be remedied and supplied; and every such superintendent-registrar shall be entitled to receive the sum of 2*d.* for every entry in such certified copies; and every superintendent-registrar shall make out an account four times in every year of the number of entries in the certified copies sent to him during the last quarter, and the certified copies so sent to the general registry office shall be thereafter kept in the said office in such order and manner as the registrar-general, under the direction of the secretary of state, shall think fit, so that the same may be most readily seen and examined."

Searches may be made, and certificates given by the persons keeping the registers.

Sect. 35. "Every rector, vicar, or curate, and every registrar, registering officer, and secretary who shall have the keeping for the time being of any register book of births, deaths, or marriages, shall at all reasonable times allow searches to be made of any register book in his keeping, and shall give a copy certified under his hand of any entry or entries in the same, on payment of the fee hereinafter mentioned; (that is to say,) for every search extending over a period not more than one year the sum of 1*s.*, and 6*d.* additional for every additional year, and the sum of 2*s.* 6*d.* for every single certificate."

Indexes to be made at the superintendent-registrar's office, and persons allowed to search them.

Sect. 36. "Every superintendent-registrar shall cause indexes of the register books in his office to be made, and kept with the other records of his office; and that every person shall be entitled at all reasonable hours to search the said indexes, and to have a certified copy of any entry or entries in the said register books under the hand of the superintendent-registrar, on payment of the fees hereinafter mentioned ; (that is to say,) for every general search the sum of 5s., and for every particular search the sum of 1s., and for every such certified copy the sum of 2s. 6d." 6 & 7 Wil. 4, c. 86.

Sect. 37. "The registrar-general shall cause indexes of all the said certified copies of the registers to be made and kept in the general register office; and that every person shall be entitled, on payment of the fees hereinafter mentioned, to search the said indexes between the hours of ten in the morning and four in the afternoon of every day except Sundays, Christmas day, and Good Friday, and to have a certified copy of any entry in the said certified copies of the registers; and for every general search of the said indexes shall be paid the sum of 20s., and for every particular search the sum of 1s., and for every such certified copy the sum of 2s. 6d., and no more, shall be paid to the registrar-general or such other officer as shall be appointed for that purpose on his account."

Indexes to be kept at general register office, searches allowed, and certified copies given.

Sect. 38. "The registrar-general shall cause to be made a seal of the said register office, and the registrar-general shall cause to be sealed or stamped therewith all certified copies of entries given in the said office; and all certified copies of entries purporting to be sealed or stamped with the seal of the said register office shall be received as evidence of the birth, death, or marriage to which the same relates, without any further or other proof of such entry; and no certified copy purporting to be given in the said office shall be of any force or effect which is not sealed or stamped as aforesaid."

Certified copies given at general registry office to be sealed.

Sect. 39. "Every sum received under the provisions of this act by or on account of the registrar-general shall be accounted for and paid by the registrar-general, at such times as the lords commissioners of the treasury from time to time shall direct, into the Bank of England, to the credit of his majesty's exchequer, according to the provisions of an act passed in the fourth and fifth years of his majesty, intituled, 'An Act to regulate the Office of the Receipt of His Majesty's Exchequer at Westminster.'"

Fees for searches in the general register office to be accounted for to the exchequer. 4 & 5 Wil. 4, c. 15.

Sect. 40. "It shall be lawful for every clergyman of the church of England who shall solemnize any marriage in England, and for every registering officer of the Quakers, and every secretary of a synagogue, after the said first day of March, to ask of the parties married the several particulars herein required to be registered touching such marriage."

Clergymen, &c., may ask parties married the particulars required.

Sect. 41. "Every person who shall wilfully make or cause to be made, for the purpose of being inserted in any register of birth, death, or marriage, any false statement touching any of the particulars herein required to be known and registered, shall be subject to the same pains and penalties as if he were guilty of perjury."

Penalty for wilfully giving false information.

Sect. 42. "Every person who shall refuse or without reasonable cause omit to register any marriage solemnized by him, or which he ought to register, and every registrar who shall refuse or without reasonable cause omit to register any birth or death of which he shall have had due notice as aforesaid, and every person having the custody of any register book, or certified copy thereof or of any part thereof, who shall carelessly lose or injure the same, or carelessly allow the same to be injured whilst in his keeping, shall forfeit a sum not exceeding 50*l.* for every such offence."

Penalty for not duly registering births, deaths, and marriages, or for losing or injuring the registers.

Sect. 43. "Every person who shall wilfully destroy or injure, or cause to be destroyed or injured, any such register book, or any part or certified copy of any part thereof, or shall falsely make or counterfeit, or cause to be falsely made or counterfeited, any part of any such register book or certified copy thereof, or shall wilfully insert or cause to be inserted in any register book or certified copy thereof any false entry of any birth, death, or marriage, or shall wilfully give any false certificate, or shall certify any writing to be a copy or extract of any register book, knowing the same register to be false in any part thereof, or shall forge or counterfeit the seal of the register office, shall be guilty of felony."

Penalty for destroying or falsifying register books.

Sect. 44. Provided always, "that no person charged with the duty of registering any birth, death, or marriage, who shall discover any error to have been committed in the form or substance of any such entry, shall be therefore liable to any of the penalties aforesaid if within one calendar

Accidental errors may be corrected.

6 & 7 Wil. 4, c. 86. month next after the discovery of such error, in the presence of the parents of the child whose birth may have been so registered, or of the parties married, or of two persons attending upon any person in his or her last illness whose death may have been so registered, or in case of the death or absence of the respective parties aforesaid, then in the presence of the superintendent-registrar and of two other credible witnesses who shall respectively attest the same, he shall correct the erroneous entry, according to the truth of the case, by entry in the margin, without any alteration of the original entry, and shall sign the marginal entry, and add thereunto the day of the month and year when such correction shall be made: provided also, that in the case of a marriage register he shall make the like marginal entry, attested in like manner in the duplicate marriage register book to be made by him as aforesaid, and in every case shall make the like alteration in the certified copy of the register book to be made by him as aforesaid, or in case such certified copy shall have been already made, provided he shall make and deliver in like manner a separate certified copy of the original erroneous entry, and of the marginal correction therein made."

Pecovery of penalties.

Sect. 45. "All fines and forfeitures by this act imposed, unless otherwise directed, shall be recovered before any two justices of the peace for the county, city, or place where the offence shall have happened, upon the information or complaint of any person; and if on the conviction of the offender, either on his or her confession, or by the oath of any one or more credible witness or witnesses, (which oath such justices are hereby empowered to administer,) such fines or forfeitures, with the costs of the conviction, shall not be forthwith paid, the same shall be levied by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender, by warrant under the hand and seal of such justices; and for want of distress such justices may commit every such offender to the common gaol or house of correction for the county, city, or place where the offender shall be committed, without bail or mainprize, for any term not exceeding one calendar month, unless such fine and forfeiture, and all reasonable charges attending the recovery thereof, shall be sooner paid; and one moiety of all such fines and forfeitures shall go to the person who shall inform and sue or prosecute for the same, and the other moiety shall go to the registrar-general, or to such other person as the lords commissioners of the treasury shall appoint, for the use of his majesty; and no distress made by virtue of this act shall be deemed unlawful, nor shall the party making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the summons, conviction, or warrant of distress, or on account of any irregularity which shall be afterwards committed by the party distraining, but the person or persons aggrieved by such irregularity shall recover full satisfaction for the special damages sustained in an action on the case."

Appeal.

Sect. 46. "In all cases where the sum adjudged to be paid on any such summary conviction shall exceed 5*l.*, any person convicted may appeal to the next court of general or quarter sessions which shall be holden not sooner than twelve days after the day of such conviction for the county or other district wherein the cause of complaint shall have arisen; provided that such person shall give to the complainant a notice in writing of such appeal, and of the cause and matter thereof, within three days after such conviction, and seven clear days at the least before such sessions, and shall also either remain in custody until the sessions, or enter into a recognizance, with two sufficient sureties, before a justice of the peace, conditioned personally to appear at the said sessions, and to try such appeal, and to abide the judgment of the court thereupon, and to pay such costs as shall be by the court awarded; and upon such notice being given, and such recognizances being entered into, the court at such sessions shall hear and determine the matter of the appeal, and shall make such order therein, with or without costs, to either party, as to the court shall seem meet, and in case of the dismissal of the appeal, or the affirmance of the conviction, shall order and adjudge the offender to be punished according to the conviction, and to pay such costs as shall be awarded, and shall, if necessary, issue process for enforcing such judgment."

No certiorari.

Sect. 47. "No such conviction or adjudication made on appeal therefrom shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari or otherwise into any of his majesty's superior courts of record, and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and there be a valid conviction to sustain the same." 6 & 7 Wil. 4, c. 86.

Want of form.

Sect. 48. "The registrar-general may receive and send by the general post from and to places in England all letters and packets relating exclusively to the execution of this act free from the duty of postage, provided that such letters and packets as shall be sent to the registrar-general be directed to the 'Registrar General of Births, Deaths, and Marriages,' at his office, and that all such letters and packets as shall be sent by the registrar-general shall be in covers, with the words 'Registrar General of Births, Deaths, and Marriages' printed on the same, and be sealed with the seal of the said register office, and be signed on the outside thereof under such words with the name of such person as the said registrar-general, with the consent of the lords commissioners of the treasury, or any three or more of them, shall appoint, in his own handwriting, (such name to be from time to time sent to the secretary of the general post-office in London,) and under such other regulations as the said lords commissioners, or any three or more of them, shall think fit; and if the person so to be appointed shall subscribe or seal any letter or packet whatever, except such only concerning which he shall receive the special direction of his superior officer, or which he shall himself know to relate exclusively to the execution of this act, or if the person so to be appointed, or any other person, shall send or cause to be sent under any such cover any letter, paper, or writing, or any inclosure, other than shall relate exclusively to the execution of this act, every person so offending shall forfeit and pay the sum of 100*l.*, and be dismissed from his office; one moiety of such penalty to be paid to the use of his majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to the use of the person who shall inform or sue for the same; to be sued for and recovered in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster."

Correspondence of registrar-general relating to this act to be free of postage.

Sect. 49. Provided always, "that nothing herein contained shall affect the registration of baptisms or burials as now by law established, or the right of any officiating minister to receive the fees now usually paid for the performance or registration of any baptism, burial, or marriage."

Registers of baptisms and burials may be kept as heretofore.

Sect. 50. "The said registrar-general shall, within three calendar months after his appointment to such office, furnish to the respective guardians of every union, parish, or place printed notices, which the said guardians shall, as soon as conveniently may be after the receipt thereof, cause to be fixed or placed on the outside of the several church and chapel doors, or other public and conspicuous buildings or places, within their respective unions, parishes, or places, and which said notices shall specify the several acts required to be done by persons who may be desirous of solemnizing marriage, or of registering the birth of any child or the death of any person, under the provisions of this act."

Registrar-general to furnish notices to guardians of unions, &c., specifying acts required to be done by parties registering.

Parliament.

THE decisions of the Committees of the House of Commons, and of the Revising Barristers, under the recent Statutes for the Amendment of the Representation of the People, have been so various and conflicting, in consequence of the obscurity and vagueness of many of the clauses of the 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, (more generally known as the Reform Bill), as to preclude us from devoting to this portion of the work the very extended space that any attempt to reconcile the adjudged cases would necessarily occupy. It has been therefore deemed sufficient for the general utility of the work to give copious extracts from the various Acts of Parliament relating to the Law of Election, and to confine ourselves to occasional references to those cases that appear to have received the most uniform decision, and thus to deduce as clear a construction of the laws now in force as our space and circumstances will permit. A more lengthy exposition has been rendered the less necessary in consequence of the previous publication of Treatises devoted exclusively to this subject: and as the Acts of the present reign have effected the most considerable changes in the system of Representation, a general understanding of the subject may be gathered from the ample references we have given to those Statutes.

To afford a greater facility of reference, we have divided the subject into the following heads; under which are treated the various rights, duties, powers, and liabilities of the Electors, Candidates, and Officers, in their proper order, viz. :—

- I. Counties empowered to send additional Members to Parliament—Boroughs disfranchised and enfranchised, 13.
- II. Qualification of Electors to vote in the Election of Members for Counties, 16.
- III. The like for Boroughs, 22.
- IV. The like of Burgesses, Freemen, and Liverymen, 24.
- V. General Disqualification of Electors, 25.
- VI. Registration of Electors for Counties, and Duties of Overseers therein, 27.
- VII. The like for Boroughs, 29.
- VIII. Appointment and Duties of Revising Barristers for Counties, 32.
- IX. The like for Boroughs, 33.
- X. Proceedings prior to and at the Election of Members for Counties, 37.
- XI. The like for Boroughs, 40.

- XII. General Matters previous to the Election, 46.
- XIII. Qualification of Candidates, 50.
- XIV. Returning Officers—Return—and Expenses of Election, 53.
- XV. Freedom of Election, 55.
- XVI. Petition against Return, 58.
- XVII. Privilege of Parliament, 59.
- XVIII. Duration of Parliament, and Date of Acts of Parliament, 61.

I. Counties empowered to send additional Members to Parliament —Boroughs disfranchised and enfranchised.

By an Act passed in the 2nd year of his present Majesty, cap. 45, intituled "An Act to amend the Representation of the People in England and Wales," after reciting that it is expedient to take effectual measures for correcting divers abuses that have long prevailed in the choice of members to serve in the Commons House of Parliament, to deprive many inconsiderable places of the right of returning members, to grant such privilege to large, populous, and wealthy towns, to increase the number of knights of the shire, to extend the elective franchise to many of His Majesty's subjects who have not heretofore enjoyed the same, and to diminish the expense of elections; it is enacted, "that each of the boroughs enumerated in the schedule marked (A.) to this act annexed (that is to say), Old Sarum, Newtown, St. Michael's or Midshall, Gatton, Bramber, Bossiney, Dunwich, Ludgershall, St. Mawe's, Beeralston, West Looe, St. Germain's, Newport, Blechingley, Aldborough, Camelford, Hindon, East Looe, Corfe Castle, Great Bedwin, Yarmouth, Queenborough, Castle Rising, East Grinstead, Higham Ferrers, Wendover, Weobly, Winchelsea, Tregony, Haslemere, Saltash, Orford, Callington, Newton, Ilchester, Boroughbridge, Stockbridge, New Romney, Hedon, Plympton, Seaford, Heytesbury, Steyning, Whitchurch, Wootton Bassett, Downton, Fowey, Milborne Port, Aldeburgh, Minehead, Bishop's Castle, Okehampton, Appleby, Lostwithiel, Brackley, and Amersham, shall, from and after the end of this present parliament, cease to return any member or members to serve in parliament."

Boroughs ceasing to send members to parliament.

By sect. 2, "each of the boroughs enumerated in the schedule marked (B.) to the act annexed (that is to say), Petersfield, Ashburton, Eye, Westbury, Wareham, Midhurst, Woodstock, Wilton, Malmesbury, Liskeard, Reigate, Hythe, Droitwich, Lyme Regis, Launceston, Shaftesbury, Thirsk, Christchurch, Horsham, Great Grimsby, Calne, Arundel, St. Ives, Rye, Clitheroe, Morpeth, Helston, North Allerton, Wallingford, and Dartmouth, from and after the end of the then Parliament, to return one member and no more to serve in Parliament."

Boroughs to return one member only.

By sect. 3, "each of the places named in the schedule marked (C.) to this act annexed (that is to say), Manchester, Birmingham, Leeds, Greenwich, Sheffield, Sunderland, Devonport, Wolverhampton, Tower Hamlets, Finsbury, Mary-le-bone, Lambeth, Bolton, Bradford, Blackburn, Brighton, Halifax, Macclesfield, Oldham, Stockport, Stoke-upon-Trent, and Stroud, shall for the purposes of this act be a borough, and shall as such borough include the place or places respectively which shall be comprehended within the boundaries of such borough, as such boundaries shall be settled and described by an act to be passed for that purpose in this present parliament, which act, when passed, shall be deemed and taken to be part of this act, as fully and effectually as if the same were incorporated herewith; and that each of the said boroughs named in the said schedule (C.) shall from and after the end of this present parliament return two members to serve in Parliament."

New boroughs to return two members.

By sect. 4, "each of the places named in the schedule marked (D.) to the New boroughs to act annexed, (that is to say,) Ashton-under-Lyne, Bury, Chatham, Cheltenham, Dudley, Frome, Gateshead, Huddersfield, Kidderminster, Kendal, Rochdale, Salford, South Shields, Tynemouth, Wakefield, Walsall, Warrington, Whitby, Whitehaven, and Merthyr Tydvil, shall for the purposes of the act be a borough, and shall as such borough include the place or places respectively which shall be comprehended within the boundaries of such borough, as such boundaries shall be settled and described by an act to be passed for that purpose in this present parliament, which act, when passed, shall be deemed and taken to be part of this act as fully and effectually as if the same were incorporated herewith; and each of the said boroughs named in the said schedule (D.) shall from and after the end of this present parliament return one member to serve in parliament."

By sect. 5, "the borough of New Shoreham shall for the purposes of this act include the whole of the Rape of Bramber, in the county of Sussex, save and except such parts of the said Rape as shall be included in the borough of Horsham by an act to be passed for that purpose in this present parliament; and that the borough of Cricklade shall for the purposes of this act include the hundreds and divisions of Highworth, Cricklade, Staple, Kingsbridge, and Malmsbury, in the county of Wilts, save and except such parts of the said hundred of Malmsbury as shall be included in the borough of Malmsbury by an act to be passed for that purpose in this present parliament; and that the borough of Aylesbury shall for the purposes of this act include the three hundreds of Aylesbury in the county of Buckingham; and the borough of East Retford shall for the purposes of this act include the hundred of Bassetlaw in the county of Nottingham, and all places locally situate within the outside boundary or limit of the hundred of Bassetlaw, or surrounded by such boundary and by any part of the county of Lincoln or county of York."

By sect. 6, "the borough of Weymouth and Melcombe Regis shall from and after the end of this present parliament return two members, and no more, to serve in parliament; and that the borough of Penryn shall for the purposes of this act include the town of Falmouth; and the borough of Sandwich shall for the purposes of this act include the parishes of Deal and Walmer."

By sect. 7, "every city and borough in England which now returning a member or members to serve in parliament, and every place sharing in the election therewith, (except the several boroughs enumerated in the said schedule (A.), and except the several boroughs of New Shoreham, Cricklade, Aylesbury, and East Retford,) shall, and each of the said boroughs of Penryn and Sandwich also shall, for the purposes of this act, include the place or places respectively which shall be comprehended within the boundaries of every such city, borough, or place, as such boundaries shall be settled and described by an act to be passed for that purpose in this present parliament, which act, when passed, shall be deemed and taken to be part of this act as fully and effectually as if the same were incorporated herewith."

By sect. 8, "each of the places named in the first column of the schedule (E.) to this act annexed shall have a share in the election of a member to serve in all future parliaments for the shire-town or borough which is mentioned in conjunction therewith, and named in the second column of the said schedule (E.)"

By sect. 9, "each of the places named in the first column of the said schedule (E.), and each of the shire-towns or boroughs named in the second column of the said schedule (E.), and the borough of Brecon, shall for the purposes of this act include the place or places respectively which shall be comprehended within the boundaries of each of the said places, shire-towns, and boroughs respectively, as such boundaries shall be settled and described by an act to be passed for that purpose in this present parliament, which act, when passed, shall be deemed and taken to be part of this act, as fully and effectually as if the same were incorporated herewith."

By sect. 10, "each of the towns of Swansea, Loughor, Neath, Aberavon, and Kenfig shall for the purposes of this act include the place or places respectively which shall be comprehended within the boundaries of each of the said towns, as such boundaries shall be settled and described by an act to be passed for that purpose in this present parliament, which act, when passed, shall be deemed and taken to be part of this act as fully and effectually as if the same were incorporated herewith; and the said five towns, so including as aforesaid, shall for the purposes of this act be one borough, and shall as such borough, from and after the end of this present parliament, return one member to serve in parliament, and the portreeve of Swansea shall be the returning officer for the said borough; and no person by reason of any right accruing in any of the said five towns, shall have any vote in the election of a member to serve in any future parliament for the borough of Cardiff."

and Kenfig to form one borough, and electors thereof not to vote for a member for Cardiff.

2 & 3 W. 4, c. 64, post, 75.

By sect. 12, "in all future parliaments there shall be six knights of the shire, instead of four, to serve for the county of York, (that is to say,) two knights for each of the three Ridings of the said county, to be elected in the same manner, and by the same classes and descriptions of voters, and in respect of the same several rights of voting, as if each of the three Ridings were a separate county; and the court for the election of knights of the shire for the North Riding of the said county shall be holden at the city of York, and the court for the election of knights of the shire for the West Riding of the said county shall be holden at Wakefield, and the court for the election of knights of the shire for the East Riding of the said county shall be holden at Beverley."

Two knights for each riding of Yorkshire.

By sect. 13, "in all future parliaments there shall be four knights of the shire, instead of two, to serve for the county of Lincoln, (that is to say,) two for the parts of Lindsey in the said county, and two for the parts of Kesteven and Holland in the same county; and such four knights shall be chosen in the same manner, and by the same classes and description of voters, and in respect of the same several rights of voting, as if the said parts of Lindsey were a separate county, and the said parts of Kesteven and Holland together were also a separate county; and the court for the election of knights of the shire for the parts of Lindsey in the said county shall be holden at the city of Lincoln, and the court for the election of knights of the shire for the parts of Kesteven and Holland in the said county shall be holden at Sleaford."

Four knights for Lincolnshire; two for the parts of Lindsey, two for Kesteven and Holland.

By sect. 14, "each of the counties enumerated in the schedule marked (F.) to this act annexed shall be divided into two divisions, which divisions shall be settled and described by an act to be passed for that purpose in this present parliament, which act, when passed, shall be deemed and taken to be part of this act as fully and effectually as if the same were incorporated herewith; and that in all future parliaments there shall be four knights of the shire instead of two, to serve for each of the said counties, (that is to say,) two knights of the shire for each division of the said counties; and such knights shall be chosen in the same manner, and by the same classes and descriptions of voters, and in respect of the same several rights of voting, as if each of the said divisions were a separate county; and the court for the election of knights of the shire for each division of the said counties shall be holden at the place to be named for that purpose in the act so to be passed as aforesaid for settling and describing the divisions of the said counties."

Certain counties to be divided, and to return two knights for each division.

2 & 3 W. 4, c. 64, post, 75.

By sect. 15, "in all future parliaments there shall be three knights of the shire, instead of two, to serve for each of the counties enumerated in the schedule marked (F. 2.) to this act annexed, and two knights of the shire, instead of one, to serve for each of the counties of Carmarthen, Denbigh, and Glamorgan."

Certain counties to return three and others two knights.

By sect. 16, "the Isle of Wight in the county of Southampton shall for the purposes of this act be a county of itself, separate and apart from the county of Southampton, and shall return one knight of the shire to serve in every future parliament; and such knight shall be chosen by the same classes and descriptions of voters, and in respect of the same several rights of voting, as any knight of the shire shall be chosen in any county in England; and all elections for the said county of the Isle of Wight shall be holden at the town of Newport, in the Isle of Wight, and the sheriff of Isle of Wight, severed from Hampshire, to return a member.

(2.) Electors, the Isle of Wight, or his deputy, shall be the returning officer at such elections.”

Towns, counties of themselves, included in adjoining counties.

By sect. 17, “for the purpose of electing a knight or knights of the shire to serve in any future parliament, the East Riding of the county of York, the North Riding of the county of York, the parts of Lindsey in the county of Lincoln, and the several counties at large enumerated in the second column of the schedule marked (G.) to this act annexed, shall respectively include the several cities and towns and counties of the same, which are respectively mentioned in conjunction with such ridings, parts, and counties at large, and named in the first column of the said schedule (G.)”

II. Qualification of Electors to vote in Election of Members for Counties.

Freehold of 40s. a-year.

By the 8 Hen. VI. c. 7, every elector of a knight of the shire shall have land or tenement to the annual value of 40s. at the least, above all charges. And by the 10 Hen. VI. c. 2, the said 40s. a-year shall be freehold.

And by the 18 Geo. II. c. 18, s. 5, no person shall vote for a knight of the shire without having freehold estate in the county of the clear value of 40s. over and above all rents and charges payable out of the same.

Sect. 6. But taxes and assessments shall not be deemed a charge payable out of the lands.

Limitation in respect of freeholds for life, if occupied by himself, 40s. per year: if by another, 10l. per year.

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 18, “no person shall be entitled to vote in the election of a knight or knights of the shire to serve in any future parliament, or in the election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament for any city or town being a county of itself, in respect of any freehold lands or tenements whereof such person may be seised for his own life, or for the life of another, or for any lives whatsoever, except such person shall be in the actual and bonâ fide occupation of such lands or tenements, or except the same shall have come to such person by marriage, marriage settlement, devise, or promotion to any benefice or to any office, or except the same shall be of the clear yearly value of not less than ten pounds above all rents and charges payable out of or in respect of the same; any statute or usage to the contrary notwithstanding: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall prevent any person now seised for his own life, or for the life of another, or for any lives whatsoever, of any freehold lands or tenements in respect of which he now has, or but for the passing of this act might acquire, the right of voting in such respective elections, from retaining or acquiring, so long as he shall be so seised of the same lands or tenements, such right of voting in respect thereof, if duly registered according to the respective provisions herein-after contained.”

But see sect. 24. If the same can confer on occupier, being owner, a vote for a borough, he cannot vote in respect of it for the county.

If occupied by his tenant each may vote, if of the proper value, the tenant for the borough and the owner for the county.

Mortgage or trust estate.

By the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 25, s. 7, the mortgagor or cestuique trust shall vote; and not the trustee or mortgagee, unless he be in actual possession, or receipt of rents and profits. And by 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 26, for his own use.

Tenant in dower.

By the 20 Geo. III. c. 17, s. 12, husbands of women entitled to dower out of the estates of their former husbands may vote in respect thereof, although the said dower hath not been set out by metes and bounds; provided that the dower be worth 40s. a-year, and the husband be in actual receipt of the profits thereof.

Purchasers of land tax.

By 42 Geo. III. c. 116, s. 154, purchasers of land-tax are considered to be actually seised of a fee-farm rent, in amount equal to the redeemed land-tax, as purchased.

By sect. 120, proof of the execution of any deed by the commissioners, parties thereto, shall be sufficient evidence that every thing required was duly done.

By sect. 165, copies of the registers of contracts shall be good evidence of such contracts. (2.) Electors for Counties.

And by the 53 Geo. III. c. 123, s. 36, the like evidence applies to registers of certificates; and no certificate, or any copy of the register thereof, to be liable to any stamp.

By the 51 Geo. III. c. 99, s. 1, reciting that, by the 42 Geo. III. c. 116, s. 154, purchasers of land-tax charged upon manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, are, by virtue of that act, adjudged, deemed, and taken to be in the actual seisin and possession of yearly rents, or sums, as fee-farm rents, equal in amount to the land-tax so purchased by them, to be issuing and payable out of the manors, messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, whereon the land-tax so purchased was charged; and that no person is allowed by law to vote for electing any member of parliament, in respect of any annuity, fee-farm rent, or rent-charge, without the same being first duly registered in manner directed by law; and that doubts had arisen whether any person could vote at an election for a member of parliament in respect of any land-tax so purchased as aforesaid, without the same or some memorial of the contract or certificate for such purchase being first registered in the same manner as other fee-farm rents, rent-charges, and annuities or memorials of the grant thereof, required to be registered as aforesaid: it is enacted, that in order to entitle any person to vote at an election for a member of parliament, in respect of land-tax so purchased as aforesaid, it shall not be necessary to have the same or any memorial of the contract or certificate of the purchase thereof registered, as other fee-farm rents and annuities, or a memorial of the grant thereof, are required by law to be registered, before any person can vote for electing a member of parliament in respect thereof.

By the 3 Geo. III. c. 24, s. 1, no persons shall vote for electing a knight of a shire, or member for a city or town, being a county of itself, in respect of any annuity or rent-charge granted before June 1, 1763, unless a certificate upon oath shall have been entered with the clerk of the peace or town-clerk twelve months before the election, as follows:—

I, A. B., of , am really and bonâ fide seised of an annuity or rent-charge, for my own use and benefit, of the clear yearly value of 40s., above all rents and charges payable out of the same, wholly issuing out of freehold lands, tenements, or hereditaments, belonging to C. D., of , situate, lying, and being, in the parish, township, or place, or in the parishes, townships, or places, of E., in the county of , without any trust, agreement, matter, or thing, to the contrary notwithstanding; and I, or the person or persons under whom I claim, was or were seised of the said annuity or rent-charge before the first day of June, 1763.

Sect. 2. And a like certificate shall be entered (mutatis mutandis) where such rent-charge came by descent, marriage, devise, or promotion to a benefice or office.

Sect. 3. And no person shall vote at such election in respect of any annuity or rent-charge granted after June 1, 1763, unless a memorial of the grant of such annuity or rent-charge shall have been registered with the clerk of the peace or town-clerk, twelve calendar months at least before the first day of such election; which memorial shall be written on parchment, and directed to the clerk of the peace or town-clerk, and shall be under the hand and seal of the grantor, and attested by two witnesses, one whereof to be one of the witnesses to the execution of such grant; which witness shall, upon oath before such clerk, prove the sealing and delivery of the grant, and the signing and sealing of the memorial. Memorial of the grant of an annuity to be registered.

Sect. 3. The said memorial shall contain the day and year of the date and the names, additions, and abodes of the parties and witnesses, and all the lands and tenements out of which the rent-charge issues, and the place where they lie.

Sect. 3. The grant shall, at the time of entering the memorial, be produced to such clerk of the peace or town-clerk, who shall indorse thereon a certificate, in which shall be mentioned the day and year on which such memorial shall be entered.

Sect. 4. And no person shall vote by reason of an assignment of such annuity or rent-charge without like certificate, entry, and memorial of such grant and assignment, as in case of an original grant.

Sect. 5. The clerk of the peace or town-clerk to have for the entry of such certificate 1s., and of the memorial 2s.; for search thereof 1s., and for copies at the rate of 6d. for every two hundred words.

Scot and lot voters.

By the 26 Geo. III. c. 100, no person shall be admitted to vote at any election for any city or borough, as an inhabitant paying scot and lot, or an inhabitant, householder, housekeeper, and potwaller, legally settled, or resident, or as an inhabitant thereof, unless he shall have been actually and bonâ fide an inhabitant within such city or borough for six calendar months previous to the day of election. [By the 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 33, it must now be six months previous to the last day of July, and they must be duly registered pursuant to the provisions of that act;] and such vote shall be null and void, and he shall forfeit 20*l.* to be recovered in the courts at Westminster within six months; but the same shall not extend to any person who shall acquire the possession of any house in such city or borough by descent, devise, marriage, or marriage settlement, or promotion to any office or benefice. And this shall relate only to persons who claim to vote as inhabitants, in manner as aforesaid, and shall not extend to any other description of persons who may claim to vote by any other title, or by any other superadded qualification.

Bribery.

By the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 4, no candidate, after the teste of the writ of summons, or after a place becomes vacant in parliament time, shall, by himself, or by any other ways or means on his behalf, or at his charge before his election, directly or indirectly give, or promise to give, to any elector any money, meat, drink, provision, present, reward, or entertainment, to or for any such elector in particular, or to any county, city, town, borough, port, or place in general, in order to his being elected, on pain of being incapacitated.

By the 2 Geo. II. c. 24, s. 1, (which is required to be read by the returning officer immediately after reading the writ, and also at Easter sessions yearly for any county or city, and at every election of the chief magistrates in any borough, town corporate, or cinque port), every person, before he is admitted to poll, shall, if required by either of the candidates, or any two electors, take the following oath, to be administered by the returning officer or his deputy:—

I, A. B., do swear [or, being one of the people called Quakers, "I, A. B., do solemnly affirm"] I have not received or had by myself, or any person whatsoever in trust for me, or for my use and benefit, directly or indirectly, any sum or sums of money, office, place, or employment, gift, or reward, or any promise or security for any money, office, employment, or gift, in order to give my vote at this election. [And that I have not before been polled at this election (a).]

If he refuse to take the oath, his vote may be rejected.

Sect. 7. If any person shall take any money, or other reward, or contract or agree for any money, gift, office, employment, or other reward, to give, or forbear to give, his vote, he shall forfeit 500*l.*

Offenders discovering others, indemnified.

Sect. 8. And if any person offending shall, within twelve months after such election, discover any other person or persons offending against this act, so that the party so discovered be thereupon convicted, such discoverer, not having been before convicted of any offence against this act, shall be indemnified and discharged from all penalties and disabilities which he shall have then incurred by any offence against this act.

(a) This constitutes one of the questions put to the elector, and it is apprehended need not now form part of the oath.

Sect. 11 provides, declares, and enacts, that no person shall be made liable to any incapacity, disability, forfeiture, or penalty, by this act laid or imposed, unless prosecution be commenced within two years after such incapacity, disability, forfeiture, or penalty, shall be incurred; or, in case of a prosecution, the same be carried on without wilful delay, any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding.

(2.) Electors for Counties.

Prosecutions to be within two years.

Mr. Collyer has the following note on this statute:—"Wherever a person is bound by law to act without any view to his own private emolument, and another, by a corrupt contract, engages such person, on the condition of the payment or promise of money, or other lucrative consideration, to act in a manner which he shall prescribe, both parties are, by such contract, guilty of bribery. (2 Doug. Law of Elections, n. (b).) Bribery at elections for members of parliament was always a crime at common law, and consequently punishable by indictment or information; but, in order to enforce the law, the severe penalties contained in this statute were introduced, the legislature not meaning to take away the common law crime, but to add a penal action, as appears by the words, 'or being otherwise lawfully convicted thereof,' contained in the seventh section. However, the court will not, in ordinary cases, interpose by information at common law, until the two years are expired. (R. v. Pitt, 3 Burr. 1339; and see R. v. Haydon, 3 Burr. 1359.) The same incapacities ensue, upon a conviction, on a prosecution for bribery by way of information at common law, as when the proceeding is by an action under the statute. (4 Doug. L. E. 294.) For cases on the construction of this statute, see 1 Russ. 159; and see, on the construction of the eighth section, Sibley v. Cumming, 4 Burr. 2465; Curgenven v. Cumming, 4 Burr. 2504; Pugh v. Curgenven, 3 Wils. 35. It has been decided, that where a voter received money after an election, for having voted for a particular candidate, but no agreement for any such payment was proved to have been made before the election, the case was not within the statute. (Lord Huntingtower v. Gardiner, 1 B. & C. 297; 2 D. & R. 369, S. C.; see also Shep. 58.)"

Observations as to bribery.

To constitute the offence of bribery, it is immaterial whether the party vote according to the bribe or not, (Sulston v. Norton, 3 Burr. 1235,) or whether he had even a right to vote at all, if he claimed such right, and the corrupter believed him to possess it. (Lilley v. Corne, 1 Schw. N. P. 650, n.)

At a general election, A. was returned, after a contest, to serve in parliament, but died before the next meeting of parliament; held, that immediately on his death the representation of that place "became vacant," within the meaning of the Treating Act, 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 4; and that if B., being neither a candidate nor the agent of a candidate, canvassed for C., and ordered beer for the voters after such vacancy, this comes within the act, even though it were not proved that C. either knew of the canvass or of the treating; and it was therefore held, that an innkeeper could not recover against B. for beer supplied to those voters by his order. The Treating Act extends to an unsuccessful candidate who did not come to the poll. (Ward v. Nanney, 3 C. & P. 399.)

A mercer furnished ribands to a person who was a candidate for the representation of a city in parliament; the ribands were partly used as ribands for voters; the mercer was himself a voter, and received orders for some of the ribands from the candidate himself, in his committee-room, but was not told for what purpose they were wanted. Held, that he was entitled to recover the price of the riband from the candidate, notwithstanding the provisions of the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 4. (Richardson v. Webster, Bart., 3 C. & P. 128.)

In an action on this statute for bribery, it is no objection to the competency of a witness for the plaintiff to prove such bribery, that a similar action was pending against the witness himself for bribery at the same election, and that he claimed to be the first discoverer of the bribery of the defendant, and meant to avail himself of it, if necessary, in case of the defendant's conviction. Where the evidence given by such a witness of the defendant's bribery was by means of the defendant's confession of it to the witness, it was holden that the truth of the fact so confessed, as well as the confession of such fact, was material for the consideration of the jury. (Heward v. Shipley, 4 East, 180.) See further, post, 43, 55, as to expenses.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 37, s. 2, 3, passed to prevent the expenses of elections, the practice of giving ribands, or other marks of distinction, by a candidate before his election, either to voters or inhabitants, in England, is made penal in the sum of 10*l.* for every offence.

See further, as to expenses, the 49 Geo. IV. c. 118, post, 55.

If refreshments be supplied to voters with a view to influence the election, and the credit be given to the candidate or his agent by the party supplying them, it is clearly bribery under this statute. But if they be supplied upon the credit of the candidate's supporters, not members of his committee, and without his knowledge or acquiescence, it is not within the act. (Hughes v. Marshall and Others, 2 Crom. & J. 118, 5 C. & P. 150, S. C.)

In the case above cited, Patteson, J., observes, "As many of the voters come from a distance, they must have accommodation and refreshment; and for that they must either themselves be liable, or any one else may be liable who gives the order, provided he be neither a candidate nor an agent." It would, however, be dangerous to rely upon this dictum too strictly, for a trifling outstretch of liberality might subject the party offending to severe penalties.

As to attempts to bribe, see "Bribery," Vol. I.

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, sect. 19, "every male person of full age, and not subject to any legal incapacity, who shall be seised at law or in equity of any lands or tenements of copyhold or any other tenure whatever except freehold, for his own life, or for the life of another, or for any lives whatsoever, or for any larger estate, of the clear yearly value of not less than ten pounds over and above all rents and charges payable out of or in respect of the same, shall be entitled to vote in the election of a knight or knights of the shire to serve in any future parliament for the county, or for the riding, parts, or division of the county, in which such lands or tenements shall be respectively situate."

See post, sect. 22, what are not charges.

By sect. 20, "every male person of full age, and not subject to any legal incapacity, who shall be entitled, either as lessee or assignee, to any lands or tenements, whether of freehold or of any other tenure whatever, for the unexpired residue, whatever it may be, of any term originally created for a period of not less than sixty years (whether determinable on a life or lives, or not), of the clear yearly value of not less than ten pounds over and above all rents and charges payable out of or in respect of the same, or for the unexpired residue, whatever it may be, of any term originally created for a period of not less than twenty years (whether determinable on a life or lives, or not), of the clear yearly value of not less than fifty pounds over and above all rents and charges payable out of or in respect of the same, or who shall occupy as tenant any lands or tenements for which he shall be bonâ fide liable to a yearly rent of not less than fifty pounds, shall be entitled to vote in the election of a knight or knights of the shire to serve in any future parliament for the county, or for the riding, parts, or division of the county, in which such lands or tenements shall be respectively situate: provided always, that no person, being only a sub-lessee, or the assignee of any underlease, shall have a right to vote in such election in respect of any such term of sixty years or twenty years as aforesaid, unless he shall be in the actual occupation of the premises."

Joint occupiers of leaseholds to an amount equalling a rental of fifty pounds each, are severally entitled to a vote in respect of the occupancy; but if any such occupier underlet a portion, reducing his annual rent below fifty pounds, he is disentitled to vote. It must be a bonâ fide occupation by himself.

As to the meaning of the term occupier, see post, 23.

Though this clause does not vest in the equitable owner of leaseholds a right to vote in respect of them, as is the case with copyholds in the preceding section, yet it has been almost invariably held, that an equitable interest in a lease constitutes a sufficient right of voting. (Wordsworth on Elec. p. 79.)

By sect. 21, "no public or parliamentary tax, nor any church rate, county rate, or parochial rate, shall be deemed to be any charge payable out of or in respect of any lands or tenements within the meaning of this act."

(2.) Electors for Counties.

By sect. 22, "in order to entitle any person to vote in any election of a knight of the shire or other member to serve in any future parliament, in respect of any messuages, lands, or tenements, whether freehold or otherwise, it shall not be necessary that the same shall be assessed to the land tax; any statute to the contrary notwithstanding."

Taxes and rates not deemed charges.

Need not be assessed to land tax.

By sect. 23, "no person shall be allowed to have any vote in the election of a knight or knights of the shire for or by reason of any trust estate or mortgage, unless such trustee or mortgagee be in actual possession or receipt of the rents and profits of the same estate, but that the mortgagor or cestuique trust in possession shall and may vote for the same estate notwithstanding such mortgage or trust."

Trustees and mortgagees may vote if in actual possession.

By sect. 24, "no person shall be entitled to vote in the election of a knight or knights of the shire to serve in any future parliament in respect of his estate or interest as a freeholder in any house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building occupied by himself, or in any land occupied by himself together with any house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building, such house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building being, either separately or jointly with the land so occupied therewith, of such value as would, according to the provisions hereinafter contained, confer on him the right of voting for any city or borough, whether he shall or shall not have actually acquired the right to vote for such city or borough in respect thereof."

No person to vote for a county in respect of any freehold house, &c. occupied by himself, which can confer a vote for a borough.

By sect. 25, "no person shall be entitled to vote in the election of a knight or knights of the shire to serve in any future parliament in respect of his estate or interest as a copyholder or customary tenant, or tenant in ancient demesne, holding by copy of court roll, or as such lessee or assignee, or as such tenant and occupier as aforesaid, in any house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building, or in any land occupied together with a house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building, such house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building being, either separately or jointly with the land so occupied therewith, of such value as would, according to the provisions hereinafter contained, confer on him or on any other person the right of voting for any city or borough, whether he or any other person shall or shall not have actually acquired the right to vote for such city or borough in respect thereof."

Nor in respect of copyholds and leaseholds entitling any person to a vote for a borough.

It will be observed that there is a peculiar and wide distinction between this and the preceding section. To incapacitate an owner of freeholds within a borough to vote in respect of them for the county, he must be in personal possession, and qualified, in respect of them, to a borough vote. Nor is it essential to the disqualification that he shall have neglected or refused to claim his right to the borough registration.

But as respects copyhold or customary estates, the prohibition is absolute, and the owner is disqualified to vote for the county, whether they be occupied by himself or another, if conferring on the tenant a right to vote for a borough.

Though the rental of the premises be under the required amount, it yet affords no conclusive objection to the right of voting, if it be shown by other evidence that the yearly value be greater than the rent paid.

By sect. 28, "the premises in respect of the occupation of which any person shall be entitled to be registered in any year, and to vote in the election for any city or borough as aforesaid, shall not be required to be the same premises, but may be different premises occupied in immediate succession by such person during the twelve calendar months next previous to the last day of July in such year, such person having paid, on or before the twentieth day of July in such year, all the poor's rates and assessed taxes which shall previously to the sixth day of April then next preceding have become payable from him in respect of all such premises so occupied by him in succession."

Provision as to premises occupied in succession.

By sect. 29, "where any premises as aforesaid, in any such city or borough, or in any place sharing in the election therewith, shall be jointly occupied

Joint occupiers entitled to vote.

Occupiers may

by more persons than one as owners or tenants, each of such joint occupiers shall, subject to the conditions herein-before contained as to persons occupying premises in any such city, borough, or place, be entitled to vote in the election for such city or borough, in respect of the premises so jointly occupied, in case the clear yearly value of such premises shall be of an amount which, when divided by the number of such occupiers, shall give a sum of not less than ten pounds for each and every such occupier, but not otherwise."

By sect. 30, "in every city or borough which shall return a member or members to serve in any future parliament, and in every place sharing in the election for such city or borough, it shall be lawful for any person occupying any house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building, either separately, or jointly with any land occupied therewith by him as owner, or occupied therewith by him as tenant under the same landlord, in any parish or township in which there shall be a rate for the relief of the poor, to claim to be rated to the relief of the poor in respect of such premises, whether the landlord shall or shall not be liable to be rated to the relief of the poor in respect thereof; and upon such occupier so claiming and actually paying or tendering the full amount of the rate or rates, if any, then due in respect of such premises, the overseers of the parish or township in which such premises are situate are hereby required to put the name of such occupier upon the rate for the time being; and in case such overseers shall neglect or refuse so to do, such occupier shall nevertheless for the purposes of this act be deemed to have been rated to the relief of the poor in respect of such premises from the period at which the rate shall have been made in respect of which he shall have so claimed to be rated as aforesaid: provided always, that where by virtue of any act of parliament the landlord shall be liable to the payment of the rate for the relief of the poor in respect of any premises occupied by his tenant, nothing herein contained shall be deemed to vary or discharge the liability of such landlord; but in case the tenant who shall have been rated for such premises in consequence of any such claim as aforesaid shall make default in the payment of the poor's rate due in respect thereof, such landlord shall be and remain liable for the payment thereof in the same manner as if he alone had been rated in respect of the premises so occupied by his tenant."

By the 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 27, "in every city or borough which shall return a member or members to serve in any future parliament, every male person of full age, and not subject to any legal incapacity, who shall occupy, within such city or borough, or within any place sharing in the election for such city or borough, as owner or tenant, any house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building, being, either separately, or jointly with any land within such city, borough, or place occupied therewith by him as owner, or occupied therewith by him as tenant under the same landlord, of the clear yearly value of not less than ten pounds, shall, if duly registered according to the provisions hereinafter contained, be entitled to vote in the election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament for such city or borough: provided always, that no such person shall be so registered in any year unless he shall have occupied such premises as aforesaid for twelve calendar months next previous to the last day of July in such year, nor unless such person, where such premises are situate in any parish or township in which there shall be a rate for the relief of the poor, shall have been rated in respect of such premises to all rates for the relief of the poor in such parish or township made during the time of such his occupation so required as aforesaid, nor unless such person shall have paid, on or before the twentieth day of July in such year, all the poor's rates and assessed taxes which shall have become payable from him in respect of such premises previously to the sixth day of April then next preceding: provided also, (3.) Electors' Qualification for Boroughs.

that no such person shall be so registered in any year unless he shall have resided for six calendar months next previous to the last day of July in such year within the city or borough, or within the place sharing in the election for the city or borough, in respect of which city, borough, or place respectively he shall be entitled to vote, or within seven statute miles thereof, or of any part thereof." Residence also required.

Though the cellar or other apartment of a house have been let off, yet the occupier of the house is deemed the occupier of the whole, unless it be shown that all communication is cut off between it and the part so let off.

The true meaning of the term "occupier" is clearly defined by Mr. Justice Littledale, in Rex v. Ditchet, 9 B. & Cres. 185, "that it is not necessary, in order to make a man an occupier, that he should actually sleep or take his meals in a house, or that his family should actually dwell in the whole house; but the law considers him for this purpose an occupier, if he hold the whole, and by himself or family occupy a part. The words 'occupation of a house' imply personal residence; but if a lessee of a house dwell in any part of it, though he let the other part, he, in point of law, is to be considered as occupier of the whole."

The occupier must be rated in his own name, and have paid up all the rates to which he was liable during such occupation.

Burgage Tenure.]—By sect. 35, "no person shall be entitled to vote in the election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament for any city or borough (other than a city or town being a county of itself, in the election for which freeholders or burgage tenants have a right to vote as herein-before mentioned), in respect of any estate or interest in any burgage tenement or freehold which shall have been acquired by such person since the first day of March one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one, unless the same shall have come to or been acquired by such person, since that day, and previously to the passing of this act, by descent, succession, marriage, marriage settlement, devise, or promotion to any benefice in a church, or by promotion to any office." Exclusion of certain rights of voting acquired since the 1st of March, 1831.

By sect. 31, "in every city or town being a county of itself, in the election for which freeholders or burgage tenants, either with or without any super-added qualification, now have a right to vote, every such freeholder or burgage tenant shall be entitled to vote in the election of a member or members to serve in all future parliaments for such city or town, provided he shall be duly registered according to the provisions herein-after contained; but no such person shall be so registered in any year in respect of any freehold or burgage tenement, unless he shall have been in the actual possession thereof, or in the receipt of the rents and profits thereof, for his own use, for twelve calendar months next previous to the last day of July in such year, (except where the same shall have come to him, at any time within such twelve months, by descent, succession, marriage, marriage settlement, devise, or promotion to any benefice in a church, or to any office,) nor unless he shall have resided for six calendar months next previous to the last day of July in such year within such city or town, or within seven statute miles thereof, or of any part thereof: provided always, that nothing in this enactment contained shall be deemed to vary or abridge the provisions herein-before made relative to the right of voting for any city or town being a county of itself, in respect of any freehold for life or lives: provided also, that every freehold or burgage tenement which may be situate without the present limits of any such city or town being a county of itself, but within the limits of such city or town as the same shall be settled and described by the act to be passed for that purpose as herein-before mentioned, shall confer the right of voting in the election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament for such city or town in the same manner as if such freehold or burgage tenement were situate within the present limits thereof." Freeholders voting for cities and towns being counties of themselves.
To extend to freeholds within the new boundaries.

(4.) *Electors,
Reservation of Burgesses' Rights.*

IV. Burgesses, Freemen, and Liverymen.

Reservation of Rights to those formerly entitled to vote, under certain Restrictions.]—By the 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 32, “every person who would have been entitled to vote in the election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament for any city or borough not included in the schedule marked (A.) to this act annexed, either as a burgess or freeman, or in the city of London as a freeman and liveryman, if this act had not been passed, shall be entitled to vote in such election, provided such person shall be duly registered according to the provisions herein-after contained; but that no such person shall be so registered in any year, unless he shall, on the last day of July in such year, be qualified in such manner as would entitle him then to vote if such day were the day of election, and this act had not been passed, nor unless, where he shall be a burgess or freeman, or freeman and liveryman of any city or borough, he shall have resided for six calendar months next previous to the last day of July in such year within such city or borough, or within seven statute miles from the place where the poll for such city or borough shall heretofore have been taken, nor unless, where he shall be a burgess or freeman of any place sharing in the election for any city or borough, he shall have resided for six calendar months next previous to the last day of July in such year within such respective place so sharing as aforesaid, or within seven statute miles of the place mentioned in conjunction with such respective place so sharing as aforesaid and named in the second column of the schedule marked (E. 2.) to this act annexed: provided always, that no person who shall have been elected, made, or admitted a burgess or freeman since the first day of March one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one, otherwise than in respect of birth or servitude, or who shall hereafter be elected, made, or admitted a burgess or freeman, otherwise than in respect of birth or servitude, shall be entitled to vote as such in any such election for any city or borough as aforesaid, or to be so registered as aforesaid: provided also, that no person shall be so entitled as a burgess or freeman in respect of birth unless his right be originally derived from or through some person who was a burgess or freeman, or entitled to be admitted a burgess or freeman, previously to the first day of March in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one, or from or through some person who since that time shall have become or shall hereafter become a burgess or freeman in respect of servitude: provided also, that every person who would have been entitled, if this act had not been passed, to vote as a burgess or freeman of Swansea, Loughor, Neath, Aberavon, or Kenfig, in the election of a member to serve in any future parliament for the borough of Cardiff, shall cease to vote in such election, and shall instead thereof be entitled to vote as such burgess or freeman in the election of a member to serve in all future parliaments for the borough composed of the towns of Swansea, Loughor, Neath, Aberavon, and Kenfig, subject always to the provisions herein-before contained with regard to a burgess or freeman of any place sharing in the election for any city or borough.”

Not to vote in boroughs, unless resident, &c.

Exclusive of freemen created since the 1st of March, 1831.

Exception.

Freemen of Swansea, Loughor, Neath, Aberavon, and Kenfig.

Reservation of other rights of voting in boroughs.

By sect. 33, “no person shall be entitled to vote in the election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament for any city or borough, save and except in respect of some right conferred by this act, or as a burgess or freeman, or as a freeman and liveryman, or, in the case of a city or town being a county of itself, as a freeholder or burgage tenant, as herein-before mentioned: provided always, that every person now having a right to vote in the election for any city or borough (except those enumerated in the said schedule (A.)) in virtue of any other qualification than as a burgess or freeman, or as a freeman and liveryman, or, in the case of a city or town being a county of itself, as a freeholder or burgage tenant, as herein-before mentioned, shall retain such right of voting so long as he shall be qualified as an elector according to the usages and customs of such city or borough or any law now in force, and such person shall be entitled to vote in the election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament for such city or borough, if duly registered according to the provisions herein-after contained ; but no such person shall be so registered in any year unless he shall, on the last day of July in such year, be qualified as such elector in such manner as would entitle him then to vote if such day were the day of election and this act had not been passed, nor unless such person, where his qualification shall be in any city or borough, shall have resided for six calendar months next previous to the last day of July in such year within such city or borough, or within seven statute miles from the place where the poll for such city or borough shall heretofore have been taken, nor unless such person, where his qualification shall be within any place sharing in the election for any city or borough, shall have resided for six calendar months next previous to the last day of July in such year within such respective place so sharing as aforesaid, or within seven statute miles of the place mentioned in conjunction with such respective place so sharing as aforesaid, and named in the second column of the schedule marked (E. 2.) to this act annexed : provided nevertheless, that every such person shall for ever cease to enjoy such right of voting for any such city or borough as aforesaid if his name shall have been omitted for two successive years from the register of such voters for such city or borough herein-after directed to be made, unless he shall have been so omitted in consequence of his having received parochial relief within twelve calendar months next previous to the last day of July in any year, or in consequence of his absence on the naval or military service of his majesty."

(4.) Electors, Reservation of Burgesses' Rights.

Residence, &c. required.

Two years' omission from the register to disqualify absolutely.

The peculiar wording of this section, that the freeman must be qualified according to his former existing right, renders it essential that he must ground his claim with reference to the ancient boundaries and limits of the borough, and not with those as constituted by the act 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 64.

By sect. 34, "every person now having a right to vote for the borough of New Shoreham, or of Cricklade, Aylesbury, or East Retford respectively, in respect of any freehold, wheresoever the same may be situate, shall retain such right of voting, subject always to the same provisions as are herein-before mentioned with regard to persons whose right of voting for any borough is saved and reserved by this act, save and except that such persons now having a right to vote for the borough of New Shoreham, or of Cricklade, Aylesbury, or East Retford respectively, shall not be registered in any year unless they shall have resided for six calendar months next previous to the last day of July in such year within the borough of New Shoreham, or of Cricklade, Aylesbury, or East Retford respectively, as defined by this act, or within seven statute miles of such respective borough, or of any part thereof; and for the purpose of the registration herein-after required, all persons not having a right to vote for the borough of New Shoreham, in respect of any freeholds which may be situate in the borough of Horsham, or for the borough of Cricklade in respect of any freeholds which may be situate in the borough of Malmsbury, as such boroughs of Horsham or Malmsbury may respectively be defined by the act to be passed for that purpose as herein-before mentioned, shall be inserted in the list of voters herein-after directed to be made by the overseers of that parish or township within the borough of New Shoreham or the borough of Cricklade respectively, as defined by this act, which shall be next adjoining to the parish or township in which such freeholds shall respectively be situate; and if the parish or township in which any such freeholds shall be situate shall adjoin two or more parishes or townships within either of the said boroughs of New Shoreham or Cricklade, the persons so having a right to vote in respect of such freeholds shall be inserted in the list of voters to be made by the overseers of the least populous of such adjoining parishes or townships, according to the last census for the time being."

Provision as to persons now entitled to vote for New Shoreham, Cricklade, Aylesbury, or East Retford in respect of freeholds.

V. General Disqualification of Electors.

By the 7 & 8 Wil. 3, c. 25, s. 8, no person shall be admitted to vote under the age of twenty-one years.

Infants.

(5.) Electors,
general Disqualification of.

Women.
Aliens.
Idiots, &c.
Perjury.
Peers.
Papists.

Women cannot vote. (4 Inst. 5.)
Nor can aliens, (12 Journal, 367); unless made denizens by letters patent, or naturalized by statute. (Shepherd, 1.)
Nor can idiots or lunatics (except during lucid intervals).
Nor persons convicted of perjury or bribery.
Nor peers of the realm, except Irish peers representing a county or borough of Great Britain.

And papists were once disabled if they refused the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, or abjuration; but these disabilities have been removed in Ireland by 33 Geo. III. c. 21, 10 Geo. IV. c. 7, s. 5, and in Great Britain by 10 Geo. IV. c. 7, s. 5; and a particular oath was set forth.

in the revenue.

By the 22 Geo. III. c. 41, no person employed in managing the duties of excise, customs, stamp-duties, salt, houses and windows, or revenue of the Post Office, shall be capable of voting for a member to serve in parliament; and if he shall presume to vote during the time that he shall hold such office, or within twelve calendar months after he shall have ceased to hold the same, his vote shall be void, and he shall forfeit 100*l.* (See 1 Fras. 164; 1 Peck. 397; 2 Lud. 561, 558; Shep. 3.)

Not to extend to coal-meters or corn-meters of the city of London.

By the 51 Geo. III. c. 84, nothing in the 22 Geo. III. c. 41, shall extend to the coal-meters or corn-meters of the city of London, to render such coal-meters or corn-meters incapable of giving their votes for members to serve in parliament as other persons having a right of voting may do, provided such coal-meters and corn-meters shall not receive or be entitled to receive any salary, fee, or reward, payable out of the revenue of customs, or other public revenues of the crown.

trates, &c.

Police magistrates, receivers of fees at the police offices, Thames police surveyors and constables, whilst they remain in office, and for six months afterwards, are incapable of voting for Middlesex, Surrey, London, Westminster, Tower Hamlets, Finsbury, Marylebone, Southwark, or Lambeth, under a penalty of 100*l.* (10 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 18; 3 Wil. IV. c. 19, s. 19); nor can they in any way interfere in persuading electors to vote, &c.; see post, "Police."

at elections.

Persons employed at elections, or within six months before, or a fortnight after, as counsel, agent, attorney, poll-clerk, flagman, or in any other capacity for the purposes of the election, are, if they receive at any time any money, &c., or place, in consideration of such employment, disqualified. (7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 36.)

or parochial relief.

The receipt of alms, or parish relief, as such, at any time within a limited time before the election, generally a year, (2 Dougl. 126,) though in particular cases this period is extended either by act of parliament, as in London (11 Geo. I. c. 18, s. 14), or by a determination of the House of Commons, (2 Dougl. 105,) or special usage, will disqualify the voter, (Shepherd, 4, and the authorities there collected). Almsmen, or those living in alms-houses, (1 Dougl. 277). Where the right of voting accrues after the receipt of relief, as by marrying the daughter of a freeman, the previous relief within the year will not affect it. (1 Peck. 72.)

By the 18 Geo. III. c. 59, s. 25, "any relief given to the family of any militia-man during the time of actual service, shall not deprive such militia-man from voting for the election of any member to serve in parliament."

By the 2 Wil. 4, c. 45, s. 36, "no person is entitled to be registered in any year as a voter in the election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament for any city or borough, who shall within twelve calendar months next previous to the last day of July in such year have received parochial relief or other alms which by the law of parliament now disqualify from voting in the election of members to serve in parliament."

Sect. 5. No person shall vote for any estate which was granted to him fraudulently, on purpose to qualify him to give his vote.

Fraudulent conveyance.

By the 10 Anne, c. 23, s. 1, all such conveyances, fraudulently made to qualify any person to vote, subject to conditions to defeat the same, shall be deemed and taken as absolute against the person executing the same, and discharged of all trusts, conditions, and other defeasances ; and all bonds, covenants, or other securities, for the defeating or re-conveying the same, shall be void. (6.) Electors, Registration of, for Counties.

By the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 25, s. 7, all conveyances to multiply voices, or to split and divide the interest in lands and houses among several persons, to enable them to vote, shall be void ; and no more than one voice shall be admitted for one and the same house or tenement. (See 2 Peckw. 29, 53.)

Splitting votes.

By the 53 Geo. III. c. 49, this is now extended to devises for a like purpose.

By the 18 Geo. II. c. 18, s. 5, no person shall vote in any election more than once.

None to vote more than once.

VI. Registration of Electors for Counties, and Duties of Overseers therein.

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 37, after reciting that it is "expedient to form a register of all persons entitled to vote in the election of a knight or knights of the shire to serve in any future parliament, and that for the purpose of forming such register the overseers of every parish and township should annually make out lists in the manner herein-after mentioned ; it is enacted, that the overseers of the poor of every parish and township shall on the twentieth day of June in the present and in every succeeding year cause to be fixed on or near the doors of all the churches and chapels within such parish or township, or if there be no church or chapel therein, then to be fixed in some public and conspicuous situation within the same respectively, a notice according to the form numbered 1. in the Schedule (H.) to this act annexed, requiring all persons who may be entitled to vote in the election of a knight or knights of the shire to serve in any future parliament, in respect to any property situate wholly or in part in such parish or township, to deliver or transmit to the said overseers on or before the twentieth day of July in the present and in every succeeding year a notice of their claim as such voters according to the form numbered 2. in the said schedule (H.), or to the like effect : provided always, that after the formation of the register to be made in each year, as herein-after mentioned, no person whose name shall be upon such register for the time being shall be required thereafter to make any such claim as aforesaid, so long as he shall retain the same qualification, and continue in the same place of abode described in such register."

Overseers to give notice annually, requiring county voters to send in their claims.

Persons once on the register not required to make any subsequent claim.

By sect. 38, "the overseer of the poor of every parish and township shall on or before the last day of July in that year make out or cause to be made out, according to the form numbered 3. in the said schedule (H.), an alphabetical list of all persons who shall claim as aforesaid to be inserted in such list as voters in the election of a knight or knights of the shire to serve for the county, or for the riding, parts, or division of the county wherein such parish or township lies, in respect of any lands or tenements situate wholly or in part within such parish or township ; and the said overseers shall on or before the last day of July in every succeeding year make out or cause to be made out a like list, containing the names of all persons who shall be upon the register for the time being as such voters, and also the names of all persons who shall claim as aforesaid to be inserted in such last-mentioned list as such voters ; and in every list so to be made by the overseers as aforesaid the christian name and surname of every person shall be written at full length, together with the place of his abode, the nature of his qualification, and the local or other description of such lands or tenements, as the same are respectively set forth in his claim to vote, and the name of the occupying tenant, if stated in such claim ; and the said overseers, if they shall have reasonable cause to believe that any person so claiming as aforesaid, or whose name shall appear in the register for the time being, is not entitled to vote in the election of a knight or knights of the shire for the county, or for the riding, parts, or division of the county in which their parish or township is situate, shall have power to add the words 'objected to' opposite the name of every such person on the margin of such list ; and the Overseers to prepare lists of county voters, and publish them annually.

Overseers may object to any name inserted in the lists.

said overseers shall sign such list, and shall cause a sufficient number of copies of such list to be written or printed, and to be fixed on or near the doors of all the churches and chapels within their parish or township, or if there be no church or chapel therein, then to be fixed up in some public and conspicuous situation within the same respectively, on the two Sundays next after such list shall have been made; and the said overseers shall likewise keep a true copy of such list, to be perused by any person, without payment of any fee, at all reasonable hours during the two first weeks after such list shall have been made: provided always, that every precinct or place, whether extra-parochial or otherwise, which shall have no overseers of the poor, shall for the purpose of making out such list as aforesaid be deemed to be within the parish or township adjoining thereto, such parish or township being situate within the same county, or the same riding, parts, or division of a county, as such precinct or place; and if such precinct or place shall adjoin two or more parishes or townships so situate as aforesaid, it shall be deemed to be within the least populous of such parishes or townships according to the last census for the time being; and the overseers of the poor of every such parish or township shall insert in the list for their respective parish or township the names of all persons who shall claim as aforesaid to be inserted therein as voters in the election of a knight or knights of the shire to serve for the county, or for the riding, parts, or division of the county in which such precinct or place as aforesaid lies, in respect of any lands or tenements situate wholly or in part within such precinct or place."

By sect. 39, "every person who shall be upon the register for the time being of voters for any county, or for any riding, parts, or division of a county, or who shall have claimed to be inserted in any list for the then current year of voters for any county, or any riding, parts, or division of a county, may object to any person as not having been entitled on the last day of July then next preceding to have his name inserted in any list of voters for such county, riding, parts, or division so to be made out as aforesaid; and every person so objecting (save and except overseers objecting in the manner herein-before mentioned) shall, on or before the twenty-fifth day of August in the present and in every succeeding year, give or cause to be given a notice in writing according to the form numbered 4. in the said schedule (H.), or to the like effect, to the overseers who shall have made out the list in which the name of the person so objected to shall have been inserted; and the person so objecting shall also, on or before the twenty-fifth day of August in the present and in every succeeding year, give to the person objected to, or leave at his place of abode as described in such list, or personally deliver to his tenant in occupation of the premises described in such list, a notice in writing according to the form numbered 5. in the said schedule (H.), or to the like effect; and the overseers shall include the names of all persons so objected to in a list according to the form numbered 6. in the said schedule (H.), and shall cause copies of such list to be fixed on or near the doors of all the churches and chapels within their parish or township, or if there be no church or chapel therein, then to be fixed in some public and conspicuous situation within the same respectively, on the two Sundays next preceding the fifteenth day of September, in the present and in every succeeding year; and the overseers shall likewise keep a copy of the names of all the persons so objected to, to be perused by any person, without payment of any fee, at all reasonable hours during the ten days next preceding the said fifteenth day of September in the present and in every succeeding year."

This section requires that the voter objected to shall have notice in writing from the party objecting. Such notice is not requisite under the preceding clause where the objection is made by the overseer.

By sect. 40, "on the twenty-ninth day of August in every year the overseers of every parish and township shall deliver the list of voters so made out as aforesaid, together with a written statement of the number of persons objected to by the overseers and by other persons, to the high constable or high constables of the hundred or other like district in which such parish or township is situate; and such high constable or high constables shall forthwith deliver all such lists, together with such statements as aforesaid, to the clerk of the peace of the county, riding, or parts, who shall forthwith make out an abstract of the number of persons objected to by the overseers and by other persons in each parish and township, and transmit the same to the barrister or barristers appointed as hereinafter mentioned to revise such lists, in order that the said barrister or barristers may fix proper times and places for holding his or their courts for the revision of the said lists.”

VII. Registration of Electors for Boroughs, and Duties of Overseers therein.

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 44, “the overseers of the poor of every parish and township either wholly or in part situate within any city or borough, or place sharing in the election for any city or borough, which shall return a member or members to serve in any future parliament, shall, on or before the last day of July in each year, make out or cause to be made out, according to the form numbered 1. in the schedule marked (I.) to this act annexed, an alphabetical list of all persons who may be entitled by virtue of this act to vote in the election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament for such city or borough in respect of the occupation of premises of the clear yearly value of not less than ten pounds as hereinbefore mentioned, situate wholly or in part within such parish or township, and another alphabetical list, according to the form numbered 2. in the said schedule (I.), of all other persons (except freemen) who may be entitled to vote in the election for such city or borough by virtue of any other right whatsoever; and in each of the said lists the christian name and surname of every person shall be written at full length, together with the nature of his qualification; and where any person shall be entitled to vote in respect of any property, then the name of the street, lane, or other description of the place where such property may be situate shall be specified in the list; and where any person shall be entitled to vote otherwise than in respect of any property, then the name of the street, lane, or other description of the place of such person's abode shall be specified in the list; and the overseers shall sign each of such lists, and shall cause a sufficient number of copies of such lists to be printed, and to be fixed on or near the doors of all the churches and chapels in their several parishes and townships, or if there be no church or chapel therein, then to be fixed up in some public and conspicuous situation within the same respectively, on the two Sundays next after such lists shall have been made; and the said overseers shall likewise keep true copies of such lists, to be perused by any person, without payment of any fee, at all reasonable hours during the two first weeks after such lists shall have been made.”

Overseers to prepare and publish lists of persons (other than freemen) entitled to vote in boroughs.

Copies of lists to be kept for inspection.

Places within boroughs having no overseers.

By sect. 45, “every precinct or place, whether extra-parochial or otherwise, having no overseers of the poor, which now is or hereafter may be within any city or borough, or within any place sharing in the election for any city or borough, shall, for the purpose of making out the list of voters for such city or borough, be deemed to be within the parish or township adjoining thereto, and situate wholly or in part within such city or borough, or within such place sharing in the election therewith; and if such precinct or place shall adjoin two or more parishes or townships so situate as aforesaid, it shall be deemed to be within the least populous of such parishes or townships according to the last census for the time being; and the overseers of every such parish or township shall insert in the list for their respective parish or township the names of all persons who may be entitled to vote in the election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament for any such city or borough in respect of any property occupied by such persons within such city or borough, or within any place sharing in the election therewith, such property being situate wholly or in part within such precinct or place as aforesaid.”

By sect. 46, “the town clerk of every city or borough shall, on or before the last day of July in each year, make out or cause to be made out, according to the form numbered 3. in the said schedule (I.), an alphabetical list of all the freemen of such city or borough who may be entitled to vote

VIII. Appointment and Duties of Revising Barristers for Counties.

Judges of assize to name barristers, who shall revise county lists.

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, sect. 41, "the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench for the time being shall in the month of July or August in every year nominate and appoint for Middlesex, and the senior judge for the time being in the commission of assize for every other county shall, when travelling the summer circuit, in every year, nominate and appoint for every such county, or for each of the ridings, parts, or divisions of such county, a barrister or barristers to revise the lists of voters in the election of a knight or knights of the shire; and such barrister or barristers so appointed as aforesaid shall give public notice, as well by advertisement in some of the newspapers circulating within the county, riding, parts, or division, as also by a notice to be fixed in some public and conspicuous situation at the principal place of election for the county, riding, parts, or division (such last-mentioned notice to be given three days at the least before the commencement of his or their circuit), that he or they will make a circuit of the county, riding, parts, or division, for which he or they shall be so appointed, and of the several times and places at which he or they will hold courts for that purpose, such times being between the fifteenth day of September inclusive and the twenty-fifth day of October inclusive in every year, and he or they shall hold open courts for that purpose at the times and places so to be announced; and where two or more barristers shall be appointed for the same county, riding, parts, or division, they shall attend at the same places together, but shall sit apart from each other, and hold separate courts at the same time for the despatch of business: provided always, that no member of parliament, nor any person holding any office or place of profit under the crown, shall be appointed such barrister, and that no barrister so appointed as aforesaid shall be eligible to serve in parliament for eighteen months from the time of such his appointment for the county, riding, parts, or division for which he shall be so appointed."

Clerk of the peace and overseers to attend before barristers, who shall retain on the county lists all names not objected to, and expunge those objected to, and not qualified.

By sect. 42, "the clerk of the peace shall, at the opening of the first court to be held by every such barrister for any county, or for any riding, parts, or division of a county, produce or cause to be produced before him the several lists of voters for such county, riding, parts, or division, which shall have been delivered to such clerk of the peace by the high constables as aforesaid; and the overseers of every parish and township who shall have made out the lists of voters shall attend the court to be held by every such barrister at the place appointed for revising the lists relating to such parish or township respectively, and shall also deliver to such barrister a copy of the list of the persons objected to, so made out by them as aforesaid; and the said overseers shall answer upon oath all such questions as such barrister may put to them or any of them touching any matter necessary for revising the lists of voters; and every such barrister shall retain on the lists of voters the names of all persons to whom no objection shall have been made by the overseers, or by any other person, in the manner herein-before mentioned; and he shall also retain on the list of voters the name of every person who shall have been objected to by any person other than the overseers, unless the party so objecting shall appear by himself or by some one on his behalf in support of such objection; and where the name of any person inserted in the list of voters shall have been objected to by the overseers, or by any other person, in the manner herein-before mentioned, and such person so objecting shall appear by himself or by some one on his behalf in support of such objection, every such barrister shall require it to be proved that the person so objected to was entitled on the last day of July then next preceding to have his name inserted in the list of voters in respect of the qualification described in such list; and in case the same shall not be proved to the satisfaction of such barrister, or in case it shall be proved that such person was then incapacitated by any law or statute from voting in the election of members to serve in parliament, such barrister shall expunge the name of every such person from the said lists; and he shall also expunge from the said lists the name of every person who shall be proved to him to be dead; and shall correct any mistake which shall be proved to him to have been made in any of the said lists as to any of the particulars by this act required to be inserted in such lists; and where the christian name of any person, or his place of abode, or the nature of his qualification, or the local or other description of his property, or the name of the tenant in the occupation thereof, as the same respectively are required to be inserted in any such list, shall be wholly omitted therefrom, such barrister shall expunge the name of every such person from such list, unless the matter or matters so omitted be supplied to the satisfaction of such barrister before he shall have completed the revision of such list, in which case he shall then and there insert the same in such list: provided always, that no person's name shall be expunged from any such list except in case of his death, or of his being objected to on the margin of the list by the overseers as aforesaid, or except in case of any such omission or omissions as herein-before last mentioned, unless such notice as is herein-before required in that behalf shall have been given to the overseers, nor unless such notice as is herein-before required in that behalf shall have been given to such person, or left at his place of abode, or delivered to his tenant, as herein-before mentioned."

Proviso not to expunge except, &c.

By sect. 43, "if it shall happen that any person who shall have given to the overseers of any parish or township due notice of his claim to have his name inserted in the list of voters in the election of a knight or knights of the shire shall have been omitted by such overseers from such list, it shall be lawful for the barrister, upon the revision of such list, to insert therein the name of the person so omitted, in case it shall be proved to the satisfaction of such barrister that such person gave due notice of such his claim to the said overseers, and that he was entitled on the last day of July then next preceding to be inserted in the list of voters in the election of a knight or knights of the shire for the county, or for the riding, parts, or division of the county, wherein the parish or township of such overseers may be situate, in respect of any lands or tenements within such parish or township."

Barrister may insert in county lists names of claimants omitted by overseers on proof of claim and qualification.

IX. Appointment and Duties of Revising Barristers for Boroughs.

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 49, "the Lord Chief Justice of the Court of King's Bench for the time being shall, in the month of July or August in every year, nominate and appoint so many barristers as the said Lord Chief Justice shall deem necessary to revise the respective lists of voters for the city of London and for the city of Westminster, and for the several boroughs in the county of Middlesex; and the senior judge for the time being in the commission of assize for every other county shall, when travelling the summer circuit, in every year, nominate and appoint so many barristers as the said judge shall deem necessary, to revise the respective lists of voters, as well for the several cities and boroughs in every such county, as for every city and town, and county of a city and town, next adjoining to any such county; and the town and county of the town of Kingston-upon-Hull shall for this purpose be considered as next adjoining to the county of York, and the town and county of the town of Newcastle-upon-Tyne as next adjoining to the county of Northumberland, and the city and county of the city of Bristol as next adjoining to the county of Somerset; and the said Lord Chief Justice and Judge respectively shall have power to nominate and appoint one or more barristers to revise the lists for the same city or borough or other place as aforesaid, or one barrister only, to revise the lists for several cities, bo-matters so omitted be supplied to the satisfaction of such barrister before he shall have completed the revision of such list, in which case he shall then and there insert the same in such list: provided always, that no person's name shall be inserted by such barrister in any such list, for any city or borough, or shall be expunged therefrom, except in the case of death, or of such omission or omissions as herein-before last mentioned, unless such notice shall have been given as is herein-before required in each of the said cases."

By sect. 51, "the overseers of every parish or township shall, for their assistance in making out the lists in pursuance of this act (upon request made by them or any of them at any reasonable time between the first day of June and the last day of July in any year, to any assessor or collector of taxes, or to any other officer having the custody of any duplicate or tax assessment for such parish or township), have free liberty to inspect any such duplicate or tax assessment, and to extract from thence such particulars as may appear to such overseer or overseers to be necessary; and every barrister appointed under this act shall have power to require any assessor, collector of taxes, or other officer having the custody of any duplicate or tax assessment, or any overseer or overseers having the custody of any poor rate, to produce the same respectively before him at any court to be held by him, for the purpose of assisting him in revising the lists to be by him revised in pursuance of this act."

May inspect tax assessments and rate books.

Barrister may require production.

By sect. 52, "every barrister holding any court under this act as aforesaid shall have power to adjourn the same from time to time, and from any one place to any other place or places within the same county, riding, parts, or division, or within the same city or borough, or within any place sharing in the election for such city or borough, but so as that no such adjourned court shall be held after the twenty-fifth day of October in any year; and every such barrister shall have power to administer an oath (or, in the case of a Quaker or Moravian, an affirmation) to all persons making objection to the insertion or omission of any name in any of such lists as aforesaid, and to all persons objected to or claiming to be inserted in any of such lists, or claiming to have any mistake corrected or any omission supplied in any of such lists, and to all witnesses who may be tendered on either side; and if any person taking any oath or making any affirmation under this act shall wilfully swear or affirm falsely, such person shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and shall be punished accordingly; and at the holding of such respective courts the parties shall not be attended by counsel; and every such barrister shall, upon the hearing in open court, finally determine upon the validity of such claims and objections, and shall for that purpose have the same powers and proceed in the same manner (except where otherwise directed by this act) as the returning officer of any county, city, or borough, according to the laws and usages now observed at elections; and such barrister shall in open court write his initials against the names respectively struck out or inserted, and against any part of the said lists in which any mistake shall have been corrected or any omission supplied, and shall sign his name to every page of the several lists so settled."

Barrister's power of adjourning, of administering oaths, &c.;

Must settle and sign the lists in open court.

By sect. 53, "if it shall be made to appear to the Lord Chief Justice or Judge who shall have appointed any barrister or barristers under this act to revise the list of voters, that by reason of the death, illness, or absence of any such barrister or barristers, or by reason of the insufficiency of the number of such barristers, or from any other cause, such lists cannot be revised within the period directed by this act, it shall be lawful for such Lord Chief Justice or Judge, and he is hereby required, to appoint one or more barrister or barristers to act in the place of or in addition to the barrister or barristers originally appointed; and such barrister or barristers so subsequently appointed shall have the same powers and authorities in every respect as if they had been originally appointed by such Lord Chief Justice or Judge."

Judges to appoint additional barristers in case of need.

By sect. 54, "the lists of voters for each county, or for the riding, parts, or division of each county, so signed as aforesaid by any such barrister, shall clerk of the peace; borough lists to be kept by returning officer, and handed to his successor.

Lists to be copied into books, with the names numbered.

Register to be in force from 1st Nov. to 1st Nov.

Copies of the lists and of the registers to be printed for sale.

Expenses of overseers, clerks of the peace, &c. how defrayed.

be forthwith transmitted by him to the clerk of the peace of the county, riding, or parts for which such barrister shall have been appointed; and the clerk of the peace shall keep the said lists among the records of the sessions, arranged with every hundred in alphabetical order, and with every parish and township within such hundred likewise in alphabetical order, and shall forthwith cause the said lists to be fairly and truly copied in the same order in a book to be by him provided for that purpose, and shall prefix to every name so copied out its proper number, beginning the numbers from the first name, and continuing them in a regular series down to the last name, and shall complete and deliver such book on or before the last day of October in every year to the sheriff of the county, or his under sheriff, who shall safely keep the same, and shall at the expiration of his office deliver over the same to the succeeding sheriff or his under sheriff; and the lists of voters for each city or borough, so signed as aforesaid by any such barrister, shall be forthwith delivered by him to the returning officer for such city or borough, who shall safely keep the same, and shall cause the said lists to be fairly and truly copied in a book to be by him provided for that purpose, with every name therein numbered according to the directions aforesaid, and shall cause such book to be completed on or before the last day of October in every year, and shall deliver over such book, together with the lists, at the expiration of his office, to the person succeeding him in such office."

After providing for the possibility of an election in that or the following year (1833), the clause continues:—"And every such book to be so completed on or before the last day of October in every year, shall be the register of electors to vote at any election which shall take place between the first day of November inclusive in the year wherein such respective register shall have been made and the first day of November in the succeeding year."

By sect. 55, "the overseers of every parish and township shall cause to be written or printed copies of the lists so by them to be made in the present and in every succeeding year, and shall deliver such copies to all persons applying for the same, on payment of a reasonable price for each copy; and the monies arising from the sale thereof shall be accounted for by the said overseers, and applied to the same purposes as monies collected for the relief of the poor; and the clerks of the peace shall cause to be written or printed copies of the registers of the electors for their respective counties, ridings, or parts, or for the divisions of their respective counties; and the returning officer of every city or borough shall cause to be written or printed copies of the register of the electors for such city or borough; and every such clerk of the peace, and every such returning officer, shall deliver such respective copies to all persons applying for the same, on payment of a reasonable price for each copy; and the monies arising from the sale of all such copies shall be accounted for to the treasurer of the county, riding, or parts."

By sect. 56, "for the purpose of defraying the expenses to be incurred by the overseers of the poor and by the clerk of the peace in carrying into effect the several provisions of this act, so far as relates to the electors for any county, or for any riding, parts, or division of a county, every person, upon giving notice of his claim as such elector to the overseers, as herein-before mentioned, shall pay or cause to be paid to the said overseers the sum of one shilling; and such notice of claim shall not be deemed valid until such sum shall have been paid; and the overseers of each parish or township shall add all monies so received by them to the money collected or to be collected for the relief of the poor in such parish or township, and such monies so added shall be applicable to the same purposes as monies collected for the relief of the poor; and for the purpose of defraying the expenses to be incurred by the returning officer of every city and borough, and by the overseers of the several parishes and townships in every city and borough, and place sharing in the election therewith, in carrying into effect the provisions of this act, so far as relates to the electors for such city or borough, every such elector whose name shall be upon the register of voters for such city or borough for the time being shall be liable to the payment of one shilling annually, which sum shall be levied and collected from each elector, in addition to and as a part of the money payable by him as his contribution to the rate for the relief of the poor, and such sum shall be applicable to the same purposes as money collected for the relief of the poor; and the expenses incurred by the overseers of any parish or township in making out, printing, and publishing the several lists and notices directed by this act, and all other expenses incurred by them in carrying into effect the provisions of this act, shall be defrayed out of the money collected or to be collected for the relief of the poor in such parish or township; and all expenses incurred by the returning officer of any city or borough in causing the lists of the electors for such city or borough to be copied out and made into a register, and in causing copies of such register to be written or printed, shall be defrayed by the overseers of the poor of the several parishes and townships within such city or borough, or place sharing in the election therewith, out of the money collected or to be collected for the relief of the poor in such parishes and townships, in proportion to the number of persons placed on the register of voters for each parish or township; and all expenses incurred by the clerk of the peace of any county, riding, or parts, in causing the lists of the electors for such county, riding, or parts, or for any division of such county, to be copied out and made into a register, and in causing copies of such register to be written or printed, and in otherwise carrying into effect the provisions of this act, shall be defrayed by the treasurer of such county, riding, or parts, out of any public money in his hands, and he shall be allowed all such payments in his accounts: provided always, that no expenses incurred by any clerk of the peace under this act shall be so defrayed unless the account shall be laid before the justices of the peace at the next quarter sessions after such expenses shall have been incurred, and allowed by the court."

(10.) Proceedings before, and at, Elections for Counties.

By sect. 57, "every barrister appointed to revise any lists of voters under this act shall be paid at the rate of five guineas for every day that he shall be so employed, over and above his travelling and other expenses; and every such barrister, after the termination of his last sitting, shall lay or cause to be laid before the Lords Commissioners of His Majesty's treasury for the time being a statement of the number of days during which he shall have been so employed, and an account of the travelling and other expenses incurred by him in respect of such employment; and the said Lords Commissioners shall make an order for the amount to be paid to such barrister."

Remuneration of the barristers.

X. Proceedings prior to and at the Election of Members for Counties.

By the 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, sect. 61, "the sheriffs of Yorkshire and Lincolnshire, and the sheriffs of the counties divided by that act, are to cause proclamation to be made of the several days fixed for the election of a knight or knights of the shire for the several ridings, parts and divisions of their respective counties, and preside at the election by themselves or their lawful deputies."

Sheriffs of the divided counties to fix the time and preside at elections.

By the 23 Hen. VI. c. 14, sect. 2, the sheriff is to open the election on the day appointed, between the hours of eight and eleven in the forenoon.

By the 2 Geo. II. c. 24, sect. 3, before the returning officer shall proceed to the election, he shall, immediately after the reading of the writ, take and subscribe the following oath, to be administered by a justice of the peace or any three electors:—

Returning officer to be sworn.

I, A. B., do solemnly swear, that I have not, directly or indirectly, received any sum or sums of money, office, place, or employment, gratuity or reward, or any bond, bill, or note, or any promise or gratuity whatsoever, either by myself, or any other person, to my use or benefit or advantage, for making any return at the present election of members to serve in parliament; and that I will return such person or persons as shall, to the best of my judgment, appear to me to have the majority of legal votes.

Which oath shall be entered amongst the records of the sessions.

Commencement and continuance of polls at county elections.

Counties to be divided into districts for polling.

See post, 2 & 3 Wil. 4, c. 64.

Polling booths for counties.

No voter to poll out of the district where his property lies.

6 & 7 Wil. 4, c. 102, additional polling places.

Expenses.

2 Wil. 4, c. 45.
Sheriff's deputies, custody of poll books, and final declaration of the poll.

And by sect. 9, it is directed to be read openly before the electors, under a penalty of 50*l*.

The candidates are then nominated and seconded, and if the election be not determined on view, and a poll be demanded,

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, sect. 62, "at every contested election of a knight or knights to serve in any future parliament for any county, or for any riding, parts, or division of a county, the polling is directed to commence at nine o'clock in the forenoon of the next day but two after the day fixed for the election, unless such next day but two be Saturday or Sunday, and then on the Monday following, at the principal place of election, and also at the several places to be appointed as thereafter directed for taking polls; and such polling to continue for two days only, such two days being successive days; (that is to say,) for seven hours on the first day of polling, and for eight hours on the second day of polling; and no poll to be kept open later than four o'clock in the afternoon of the second day; any statute to the contrary notwithstanding."

By sect. 63, "the respective counties in England and Wales, and the respective ridings, parts, and divisions of counties, shall be divided into convenient districts for polling, and in each district shall be appointed a convenient place for taking the poll at all elections of a knight or knights of the shire to serve in any future parliament, and such districts and places for taking the poll shall be settled and appointed by the act to be passed in this present parliament for the purpose of settling and describing the divisions of the counties enumerated in the schedule marked (F.) to this act annexed; provided that no county, nor any riding, parts or division of a county, shall have more than fifteen districts and respective places appointed for taking the poll for such county, riding, parts or division."

By sect. 54, "at every contested election for any county, or riding, parts, or division of a county, the sheriff, under sheriff, or sheriff's deputy shall, if required thereto, by or on behalf of any candidate, on the day fixed for the election, and if not so required, may, if it shall appear to him expedient, cause to be erected a reasonable number of booths for taking the poll at the principal place of election, and also at each of the polling places so to be appointed as aforesaid, and shall cause to be affixed on the most conspicuous part of each of the said booths the names of the several parishes, townships, and places for which such booth is respectively allotted; and no person shall be admitted to vote at any such election in respect of any property situate in any parish, township, or place, except at the booth so allotted for such parish, township, or place, and if no booth shall be so allotted for the same, then at any of the booths for the same district; and in case any parish, township, or place, shall happen not to be included in any of the districts to be appointed, the votes in respect of property, situate in any parish, township or place so omitted shall be taken at the principal place of election for the county, or riding, parts, or division of the county, as the case may be."

By the 6 & 7 Wil. IV. c. 102, additional polling places may be appointed upon petition from justices assembled in quarter sessions. See the enactments in full, post, Addenda, p. 1151.

As to expenses of booths see post, p. 43.

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 65, "the sheriff shall have power to appoint deputies to preside and clerks to take the poll at the principal place of election, and also at the several places appointed for taking the poll for any county, or any riding, parts, or division of a county; and the poll clerks employed at those several places shall at the close of each day's poll enclose and seal their several books, and shall publicly deliver them, so enclosed and sealed, to the sheriff, under sheriff, or sheriff's deputy presiding at such poll, who shall give a receipt for the same, and shall, on the commencement of the poll on the second day, deliver them back, so enclosed and sealed, to the persons from whom he shall have received them; and on the final close of the poll every such deputy who shall have received any such poll books shall forthwith deliver or transmit the same, so enclosed and sealed, to the sheriff or his under sheriff, who shall receive and keep all the poll books unopened until the re-assembling of the court on the day next but one after the close of the poll, unless such next day but one shall be Sunday, and then on the Monday following, when he shall openly break the seals thereon, and cast up the number of votes as they appear on the said several books, and shall openly declare the state of the poll, and shall make proclamation of the member or members chosen, not later than two o'clock in the afternoon of the said day." (10.) Proceedings before, and at Election for Counties.

By sect. 66, "in all matters relative to the election of knights or a knight of the shire to serve in any future parliament for any county, or for any riding, parts, or division of a county, the sheriff of the county, his under sheriff, or any lawful deputy of such sheriff, shall have power to act in all places having any exclusive jurisdiction or privilege whatsoever, in the same manner as such sheriff, under sheriff, or deputy may act within any part of such sheriff's ordinary jurisdiction." Sheriff in county elections may act in places of exclusive jurisdiction.

By sect. 58, "in all elections whatever of members to serve in any future parliament no inquiry shall be permitted at the time of polling, as to the right of any person to vote, except only as follows; that is to say, that the returning officer or his respective deputy shall, if required on behalf of any candidate, put to any voter at the time of his tendering his vote, and not afterwards, the following questions, or any of them, and no other: Inquiries at the time of election, identity of voter, continuance of qualification, and whether he has voted before at same election.

1. Are you the same person whose name appears as A. B. on the register of voters now in force for the county of [or "for the riding," "parts," or "division," &c. or "for the city," &c. as the case may be]?

2. Have you already voted, either here or elsewhere, at this election for the county of [or "for the riding," "parts," or "division of the county of," or "for the city or borough of," as the case may be]?

3. Have you the same qualification for which your name was originally inserted in the register of voters now in force for the county of, &c. [or "for the riding," &c., or "for the city," &c., as the case may be, specifying in each case the particulars of the qualification as described in the register]?

And if any person shall wilfully make a false answer to any of the questions aforesaid, he shall be deemed guilty of an indictable misdemeanour (a), and shall be punished accordingly; and the returning officer or his deputy, or a commissioner or commissioners to be for that purpose by him or them appointed, shall (if required on behalf of any candidate at the time aforesaid) administer an oath (or, in case of a Quaker or Moravian, an affirmation) to any voter in the following form; (that is to say, Oath, if required.

"You do swear, [or, being a Quaker or Moravian, "do affirm"] That you are the same person whose name appears as A. B. on the register of voters now in force for the county of [or "for the riding," "parts," or "division of the county of," or "for the city or borough of," as the case may be], and that you have not before voted, either here or elsewhere, at the present election for the said county [or for the said riding, parts, or division of the said county, or for the said city or borough, as the case may be].—So help you GOD."

Much doubt has arisen upon the construction of the third quære, whether the words "Have you the same qualification," mean the identical qualification for which the elector's name has been inserted in the list, or a qualification corresponding in amount and quality to that annexed to the name? The words are certainly ambiguous, and many persons have with honest intention given an affirmative answer, though they have changed their residence subsequently to the publication of the list. The general opinion, however, seems to be, that the qualification must be the identical premises for which the name was originally entered in the list.

An explanatory enactment will probably be passed by the legislature in the course of the next session, which may set the question at rest. At present, the received construction disables any elector to vote who has changed the premises, or ceased to occupy the particular house, warehouses, &c. under which his name has appeared in the published lists.

(a) See Form of Indictment, post.

(10.) Proceedings before, and at Election for Counties.

No other oath as to qualification.

No scrutiny by returning officer.

Oaths.

Votes excluded from the register by the barrister may be tendered at elections, and recorded.

Correctness of the register to be questionable before a committee of the House of Commons.

"And no elector shall hereafter at any such election be required to take any oath or affirmation, except as aforesaid, either in proof of his freehold or of his residence, age, or other qualification or right to vote, any law or statute, local or general, to the contrary notwithstanding; and no person claiming to vote at any such election shall be excluded from voting thereat, except by reason of its appearing to the returning officer or his respective deputy, upon putting such questions as aforesaid, or any of them, that the person so claiming to vote is not the same person whose name appears on such register as aforesaid, and that he has previously voted at the same election, or that he has not the same qualification for which his name was originally inserted in such register, or except by reason of such person refusing to take the said oath or make the said affirmation, or to take or make the oath or affirmation against bribery, or any other oath or affirmation now required by law, and not hereby dispensed with; and no scrutiny shall hereafter be allowed by or before any returning officer with regard to any votes given or tendered at any election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament; any law, statute, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

It is to be observed that this clause only limits the power of administering any other oath respecting the elector's freehold, residence, age, or qualification. The stat. 2 Geo. II. c. 24, still permits either of the candidates or any two electors to require the bribery oath to be administered. The stat. 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 13, imposing the oaths of allegiance and supremacy at the request of any candidate, and the stat. 6 Geo. III. c. 53, s. 1, authorising the administering of the oath of abjuration at the request either of a candidate or of any person present, are now dispensed with by the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 36.

By sect. 59, "any person whose name shall have been omitted from any register of voters in consequence of the decision of the barrister who shall have revised the lists from which such register shall have been formed may tender his vote at any election at which such register shall be in force, stating at the time the name or names of the candidate or candidates for whom he tenders such vote, and the returning officer or his deputy shall enter upon the poll book every vote so tendered, distinguishing the same from the votes admitted and allowed at such election."

By sect. 60, "upon petition to the House of Commons, complaining of an undue election or return of any member or members to serve in parliament, any petitioner, or any person defending such election or return, shall be at liberty to impeach the correctness of the register of voters in force at the time of such election, by proving that in consequence of the decision of the barrister who shall have revised the list of voters from which such register shall have been formed the name of any person who voted at such election was improperly inserted or retained in such register, or the name of any person who tendered his vote at such election improperly omitted from such register; and the select committee appointed for the trial of such petition shall alter the poll taken at such election according to the truth of the case, and shall report their determination thereupon to the House, and the House shall thereupon carry such determination into effect, and the return shall be amended, or the election declared void, as the case may be, and the register corrected accordingly, or such other order shall be made as to the House shall seem proper."

XI. Proceedings previous to and at the Election of Members for Boroughs.

The Returning Officer takes the Bribery oath, and reads the Precept and the Bribery Act, as in County Elections. At Durham, New Shoreham, Cricklade, and Aylesbury special Acts are read. The Candidates are then nominated, and if required must take the oath hereafter mentioned. (See post, 52.)

By the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 36, s. 6, "no elector at any election shall be required to take the oaths commonly called the oaths of allegiance, abjuration, and supremacy, nor any oath or oaths required to be taken by any act of parliament in lieu thereof; any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding." (This applies generally to all elections whether for counties or boroughs.)

(11.) Proceedings before, and at Election for Boroughs.

Oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration not to be taken.

And by the same statute, after reciting that it would tend to promote the purity of elections and the diminution of expense if the poll at all contested elections of members to serve in parliament for cities, boroughs, and towns, or for counties of cities or counties of towns, were taken in one day: and that by an act passed in the second year of the reign of his present Majesty King William the Fourth, intituled "An Act to amend the Representation of the People in England and Wales," it is among other things enacted, "that such poll may remain open during the space of two days: and that it is expedient to repeal that part of the said recited act which allows the poll so to continue open during the space of two days; it is enacted, that from and after the passing of the said act such part of the said recited act as allows the poll to continue open during two days in cities, boroughs, and towns, or in counties of cities or counties of towns, be repealed, and the same is hereby repealed."

Repeal of part of 2 W. 4, c. 45.

By sect. 2, "at every contested election of a member or members to serve in parliament for any city, borough, or town, or county of a city or county of a town, the polling shall commence at eight of the clock in the forenoon of the day next following the day fixed for the election; and the polling shall continue during such one day only; and no poll shall be kept open later than four of the clock in the afternoon: provided always, that when such day next following the day fixed for the election shall be Sunday, Good Friday, or Christmas Day, then in the case it be Sunday the poll shall be on the Monday next following; and in the case it be Good Friday, then on the Saturday next following; and in the case it be Christmas Day, then on the next following day, if the same shall not be Sunday, and if it be Sunday, on the next following Monday."

Period of polling for boroughs limited to one day.

The Borough of Monmouth was excepted in the 67 sect. of the 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, limiting the period of polling, and remains, together with the contributory Boroughs of Wales, subject to the regulations imposed by the 74th section of that act.

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 68, "at every contested election of a member or members to serve in any future parliament for any city or borough in England, except the borough of Monmouth, the returning officer shall, if required thereto by or on behalf of any candidate, on the day fixed for the election, and if not so required may, if it shall appear to him expedient, cause to be erected for taking the poll at such election different booths for different parishes, districts, or parts of such city or borough, which booths may be situated either in one place or in several places, and shall be so divided and allotted into compartments as to the returning officer shall seem most convenient."

Polling for boroughs in England to be at several booths.

By 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 36, s. 3, "the polling booths or compartments at each polling place shall be so divided and arranged by the sheriff or other returning officer that not more than three hundred electors shall be allotted to poll in each such booth or compartment."

Not more than 300 voters to one booth.

By sect. 4, "on the requisition of any candidate, or of any elector being the proposer or seconder of any candidate, the booths or compartments of each polling place shall be so divided and arranged by the sheriff or other returning officer that not more than one hundred electors shall be allotted to poll in each such booth or compartment: provided always, that such candidate or elector making such requisition shall pay all expenses incident upon such division or arrangement."

Not more than 100, if so required.

By sect. 5, "in case any requisition as aforesaid shall be made on or before the day fixed for the election, the sheriff or other returning officer shall forthwith give public notice of the situation of such booths, which shall be deemed to be sufficient notice, any law or statute to the contrary notwithstanding."

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, sect. 68, "the returning officer shall appoint a clerk to take the poll at each compartment, and shall cause to be affixed on the most conspicuous part of each of the said booths the names of the several parishes, districts, and parts for which such booth is respectively allotted; and no person shall be admitted to vote at any such election, except at the booth allotted for the parish, district, or part wherein the property may be situate in respect of which he claims to vote, or in case he does not claim to vote in respect of property, then wherein his place of abode as described in the register may be; but in case no booth shall happen to be provided for any particular parish, district, or part as aforesaid, the votes of persons voting in respect of property situate in any parish, district, or part so omitted, or having their place of abode therein, may be taken at any of the said booths, and the votes of freemen residing out of the limits of the city or borough may be taken at any of the said booths; and public notice of the situation, division, and allotment of the different booths shall be given two days before the commencement of the poll by the returning officer; and in case the booths shall be situated in different places, the returning officer may appoint a deputy to preside at each place; and at every such election the poll clerks at the close of each day's poll shall enclose and seal their several poll books, and shall publicly deliver them, so enclosed and sealed, to the returning officer or his deputy, who shall give a receipt for the same, and shall, on the commencement of the poll on the second day, deliver them back, so enclosed and sealed, to the persons from whom he shall have received the same; and every deputy so receiving any such poll books, on the final close of the poll, shall forthwith deliver or transmit the same, so enclosed and sealed, to the returning officer, who shall receive and keep all the poll books unopened until the following day, unless such day be Sunday, and then till the Monday following, when he shall openly break the seals thereon, and cast up the number of votes as they appear on the said several books, and shall openly declare the state of the poll, and make proclamation of the member or members chosen, not later than two o'clock in the afternoon of the said day: provided always, that the returning officer, or his lawful deputy, may, if he think fit, declare the final state of the poll, and proceed to make the return immediately after the poll shall have been lawfully closed: provided also, that no nomination shall be made or election holden of any member for any city or borough in any church, chapel, or other place of public worship."

The questions as to the identity of the vote, the continuance of his qualification, and whether he has voted previously at such election, will be found ante, page 39, and may be demanded of each elector at every election for boroughs, cities, towns, counties of cities, or counties of towns.

The oath to be administered, in case of requisition by a candidate, or his proposer or seconder, will be found in the same page.

By sect. 69, "so far as relates to the several boroughs of New Shoreham, Cricklade, Aylesbury, and East Retford, as defined by this act, the said several boroughs shall be divided into convenient districts for polling, and there shall be appointed in each district a convenient place for taking the poll at all elections of members to serve in any future parliament for each of the said boroughs, which districts and places for taking the poll shall be settled and appointed by an act to be passed in this present parliament." (See post, page 75, 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 64.)

By the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 36, s. 8, "where the proceedings at any election shall be interrupted or obstructed by any riot or open violence, whether such proceedings shall consist of the nomination of candidates or of the taking the poll, the sheriff or other returning officer, or the lawful deputy of any returning officer, shall not for such cause terminate the business of such nomination, nor finally close the poll, but shall adjourn the nomination or the taking the poll at the particular polling place or places at which such interruption or obstruction shall have happened until the following day, and, if necessary, shall further adjourn such nomination or poll, as the case may be, until such interruption or obstruction shall have ceased, when the returning officer or his deputy shall again proceed with the business of the nomination or with the taking the poll, as the case may be, at the place or places at which the same respectively may have been interrupted or obstructed; and the day on which the business of the nomination shall have been concluded shall be deemed to have been the day fixed for the election, and the commencement of the poll shall be regulated accordingly; and any day whereon the poll shall have been so adjourned shall not as to such place or places be reckoned the day of polling at such election, within the meaning of this act; and whenever the poll shall have been so adjourned by any deputy of any sheriff or other returning officer, such deputy shall forthwith give notice of such adjournment to the sheriff or returning officer, who shall not finally declare the state of the poll, or make proclamation of the member or members chosen, until the poll so adjourned at such place or places as aforesaid shall have been finally closed, and the poll books delivered or transmitted to such sheriff or other returning officer, any thing herein-before or in any other statute to the contrary notwithstanding: provided always, that this act shall not be taken to authorise an adjournment to a Sunday; but that in every case in which the day to which the adjournment would otherwise be made shall happen to be a Sunday, Good Friday, or Christmas-day, that day or days shall be passed over, and the following shall be the day to which the adjournment shall be made."

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 71, "all booths erected for the convenience of taking polls shall be erected at the joint and equal expense of the several candidates, and the same shall be erected by contract with the candidates, if they shall think fit to make such contract, or if they shall not make such contract, then the same shall be erected by the sheriff or other returning officer at the expense of the several candidates as aforesaid, subject to such limitation as is herein-after next mentioned; (that is to say,) that the expense to be incurred for the booth or booths to be erected at the principal place of election for any county, riding, parts, or division of a county, or at any of the polling places so to be appointed as aforesaid, shall not exceed the sum of forty pounds in respect of any one such principal place of election or any one such polling place; and that the expense to be incurred for any booth or booths to be erected for any parish, district, or part of any city or borough, shall not exceed the sum of twenty-five pounds in respect of any one such parish, district, or part; and that all deputies appointed by the sheriff or other returning officer shall be paid each two guineas by the day, and all clerks employed in taking the poll shall be paid each one guinea by the day, at the expense of the candidates at such election; provided always, that if any person shall be proposed without his consent, then the person so proposing him shall be liable to defray his share of the said expenses in like manner as if he had been a candidate: provided also, that the sheriff or returning officer may, if he shall think fit, instead of erecting such booth or booths as aforesaid, procure or hire and use any houses or other buildings for the purpose of taking the poll therein, subject always to the same regulations, provisions, liabilities, and limitations of expense as are herein-before mentioned with regard to booths for taking the poll."

Candidates, or persons proposing a candidate without his consent, to be at the expense of booths and poll clerks. Limitation of expense.

Houses may be hired for polling in, instead of booths.

By sect. 72, "the sheriff or other returning officer shall, before the day fixed for the election, cause to be made, for the use of each booth or other polling place at such election, a true copy of the register of voters, and shall under his hand certify every such copy to be true."

Certified copies of the register of voters for each booth.

By sect. 73, "every deputy of a sheriff or other returning officer shall have the same power of administering the oaths and affirmations required by law, and of appointing commissioners for administering such oaths and affirmations as may by law be administered by commissioners, as the sheriff or other returning officer has by virtue of this or any other act, and subject to remain in force,

All election laws

By sect. 75, "all laws, statutes, and usages now in force respecting the election of members to serve in parliament for that part of the united kingdom called England and Wales, shall be and remain, and are hereby declared to be and remain, in full force, and shall apply to the election of (11.) Proceedings before, and at Election for Boroughs. members to serve in parliament for all the counties, ridings, parts, and divisions of counties, cities, and boroughs, hereby empowered to return members, as fully and effectually as if the same respectively had heretofore returned members, except so far as any of the said laws, statutes, or usages are repealed or altered by this act, or are inconsistent with the provisions thereof." superseded by this act.

By sect. 76, "if any sheriff, returning officer, barrister, overseer, or any person whatsoever shall wilfully contravene or disobey the provisions of this act or any of them, with respect to any matter or thing which such sheriff, returning officer, barrister, overseer, or other person is hereby required to do, he shall for such his offence be liable to be sued in an action of debt, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, for the penal sum of five hundred pounds, and the jury before whom such action shall be tried may find their verdict for the full sum of five hundred pounds, or for any less sum which the said jury shall think it just that he should pay for such his offence; and the defendant in such action, being convicted, shall pay such penal sum so awarded, with full costs of suit, to the party who may sue for the same: provided always, that no such action shall be brought except by a person being an elector or claiming to be an elector, or a candidate, or a member actually returned, or other party aggrieved: provided also that the remedy hereby given against the returning officer shall not be construed to supersede any remedy or action against him according to the law now in force." Penalties on officers for breach of duty.

By sect. 77, "all writs to be issued for the election of members to serve in all future parliaments, and all mandates, precepts, instruments, proceedings, and notices consequent upon such writs, shall be and the same are hereby authorised to be framed and expressed in such manner and form as may be necessary for the carrying the provisions of this act into effect." Writs, &c. to be made conformable to this act.

By sect. 78, "not to affect the election of members to serve in parliament for the universities of Oxford or Cambridge, or entitle any person to vote in the election of members to serve in parliament for the city of Oxford or town of Cambridge, in respect of the occupation of any chambers or premises in any of the colleges or halls of the universities of Oxford or Cambridge." Not to extend to Universities of Oxford and Cambridge.

By sect. 79, "wherever the words 'city or borough,' 'cities or boroughs,' may occur, those words shall be construed to include, except there be something in the subject or context manifestly repugnant to such construction, all towns corporate, cinque ports, districts, or places within England and Wales, which shall be entitled after this act shall have passed to return a member or members to serve in parliament, other than counties at large, and ridings, parts, and divisions of counties at large, and shall also include the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed; and the words 'returning officer' shall apply to every person or persons to whom, by virtue of his or their office, either under the present act, or under any former law, custom, or statute, the execution of any writ or precept doth or shall belong for the election of a member or members to serve in parliament, by whatever name or title such person or persons may be called; and the words 'parish or township' shall extend to every parish, township, vill, hamlet, district, or place maintaining its own poor; and the words 'overseers of the poor' shall extend to all persons who by virtue of any office or appointment shall execute the duties of overseers of the poor, by whatever name or title such persons may be called, and in whatsoever manner they may be appointed, and that all matters by this act directed to be done by the overseers of a parish or township may be lawfully done by the major part of such overseers, and that wherever any notice is by this act required to be given to the overseers of any parish or township, it shall be sufficient if such notice shall be delivered to any one of such overseers, or shall be left at his place of abode, or at his office or other place for transacting parochial business, or shall be sent by the post, addressed by a sufficient direction, to the overseers of the particular parish or township, or to any one of them either by their or his Christian name" Sense in which words in this act understood; "city or borough:" "Returning officer:" "Parish or township:" "Overseers of the poor:"

and surname, or by their or his name of office; and that all provisions in this act relative to any matters to be done by or with regard to justices of the peace for counties, or sessions of the peace for counties, or clerks of the peace for counties, or treasurers of counties, shall extend to the justices, sessions, clerks of the peace, and treasurers of the several ridings of Yorkshire and parts of Lincolnshire, and that the clerk of the peace for the time being for the borough of Newport in the Isle of Wight, shall for the purposes of this act, be deemed and taken to be the clerk of the peace for the county of the Isle of Wight, and that all the said respective justices, sessions, and clerks of the peace shall have power to do the several matters required by this act, as well within places of exclusive jurisdiction as without; and no misnomer or inaccurate description of any person or place named or described in any schedule to this act annexed, or in any list or register of voters, or in any notice required by this act, shall in anywise prevent or abridge the operation of this act with respect to such person or place, provided that such person or place shall be so designated in such schedule, list, register, or notice as to be commonly understood."

The three concluding clauses of the 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, merely provide for the mode of election, &c. in case the boundary act should not have passed prior to June 1832, and are therefore omitted.

XII. General Matters previous to Election.

The parliament is regularly to be summoned by the king's writ or letter, issued out of Chancery by advice of the Privy Council, at least forty days before it begins to sit. This is a provision of the Magna Charta of King John, "faciemus summoneri &c. ad certum diem scilicet ad terminum quadraginta dierum ad minus et ad certum locum." (Bla. Com. vol. 1.)

The Lord Chancellor of Great Britain is by such writ commanded to cause proclamation to be made of his majesty's pleasure for the dissolution of the old, and assembling of a new parliament. He is also ordered to issue writs for the calling of such new parliament.

Course in which election writs forwarded by messenger of the great seal, and through the post office.

The 53 Geo. III. c. 89, for the more regular Conveyance of Writs for the Election of Members to serve in Parliament, enacts, s. 1, "that the messenger, or pursuivant of the great seal, shall, after the receipt of such writs, forthwith carry such of them as shall be directed to the sheriffs of London or Middlesex, to the respective officers of such sheriffs, and all such other writs to the general post-office in London, and there deliver them to the postmaster-general or his deputy, who shall give an acknowledgment in writing, expressing therein the time of delivery, and shall keep a duplicate of such acknowledgment, signed by the parties respectively to whom and by whom the same shall be so delivered; and that the postmaster or his deputy shall despatch all such writs free of postage, by the first post or mail after the receipt thereof, under covers directed to the proper officers to whom the said writs shall be respectively directed, accompanied with proper directions to the postmaster or deputy postmaster of the place, or nearest to the place, where such officers shall hold their office, requiring such postmaster or deputy forthwith to carry such writs respectively to such office, and to deliver them there to the officers to whom they shall be respectively directed, or their deputies, who are required to give to such postmaster or deputy a memorandum in writing, acknowledging the receipt of every such writ, and setting forth the day and the hour the same was delivered by such postmaster or deputy, which memorandum shall also be signed by such postmaster or deputy, who are required to transmit the same by the first or second post afterwards to the postmaster-general or his deputy, at the general post-office in London, who are required to make an entry thereof in a proper book for that purpose, and to file the memorandum along with the duplicate of the said acknowledgment, signed by the messenger, to the intent that the same may be inspected or produced upon all proper occasions, by any person (12.) General Matters before Election. interested in such elections."

The statute, after directing (s. 2 & 3) that all persons to whom the writs for the election of members to parliament ought to be and are usually directed shall, within a month, send to the postmasters-general an account of the places where they shall hold their offices, and so from time to time, as often as such places shall be changed, and of the post town nearest to such offices; or in case any such office shall be in London, Westminster, or Southwark, or within five miles thereof, shall send such account to the messenger of the great seal; proceeds to enact, (s. 4 & 5) that after the death of the then messenger of the great seal, the allowances of mileage shall cease, except an allowance of two guineas on each writ for the election of a member on any vacancy, and of 50*l.* on the calling of a new parliament. And it further enacts, that whereas the messenger of the great seal and his deputy have, from time to time, received certain other fees for the conveyance and upon the delivery of these writs, such fees shall cease from the passing of the act; and that neither the messenger nor his deputy, nor any other person, shall receive or take any fee, reward, or gratuity whatsoever, for the conveyance or delivery of any such writ.

Persons to whom such writs are usually directed, must give an account of the places of their offices.

Mileage and other fees abolished, except two guineas on a vacancy, and 50*l.* on a new parliament.

And sect. 5. further proceeds to give to the then messenger an annual allowance for his life of 520*l.* in compensation for these fees.

Sect. 7. enacts, that every person concerned in the transmitting or delivery of any such writ as aforesaid, who shall wilfully neglect or delay to deliver or transmit any such writ, or accept any fee, or do any other matter or thing in violation of this act, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and may, upon conviction upon any indictment or information in his majesty's Court of King's Bench, be fined and imprisoned, at the discretion of the court, for such misdemeanour.

Persons acting in violation of the act, guilty of a misdemeanour.

Sect. 7. Offences committed in Scotland may be punished by a fine or imprisonment, as the judge before whom the offender shall be tried and convicted may direct.

Vacancy by demise of member, &c.]—If a member die, or resign his seat, or be called to the upper house during the session, the speaker, on receiving the order of the house, issues his writ for a new election.

But if during the recess, the speaker is empowered to issue such writ, by the 24 Geo. III. c. 26, on a certificate of the fact signed by any two members.

So if a member be disqualified by bankruptcy as hereafter mentioned (see "Qualifications of Candidates," post, 50), and that fact be duly certified by the commissioner under the fiat, the speaker is authorised to issue his warrant for a new election.

Notice of these facts are given in the London Gazette fourteen days previous to the issuing of the writ.

By the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 25, s. 1, when any new parliament shall be summoned, there shall be forty days between the teste and return of the writ; and, as well upon the calling of any new parliament as upon a vacancy in parliament time, the writ shall be delivered to the proper officer to whom the execution thereof doth belong, and to no other person. And every such officer, upon receipt of the writ, shall indorse thereon the day that he received it, and shall forthwith make out a precept, and within three days after the receipt of the writ, shall deliver such precept to the proper officer of the place where any member is wanting, and to no other person; and such officer, upon the back of such precept, shall indorse the day of his receipt thereof, in the presence of the party from whom he received the same, and shall forthwith cause public notice to be given of the time and place of election, and shall proceed to election thereupon within eight days next after his receipt of such precept, and give four days' notice at least of the day appointed for the election.

Time of proceeding to the election in counties.

Although the above statute mentions forty days, yet in practice fifty days intervene, in consequence of the twenty-second article of the Treaty of Union with Scotland, under which Queen Anne was limited in the power of calling the first parliament after the union, to a period not less than fifty days from the date of the proclamation for assembling it. (Words. Elec. 146.)

By the 33 Geo. III. c. 64, s. 1, all notices of the time and place of any election shall be publicly given at the usual place or places, within the hours of eight in the forenoon and four in the afternoon from 25th October to 25th March, and of eight in the forenoon and six in the afternoon from 25th March to 25th October inclusive; and no notice shall be deemed or taken to be a good or valid notice for any purpose, or to any effect whatsoever, which shall not be made and published in the manner and within the time of the day aforesaid.

And by the 25 Geo. III. c. 84, s. 4, upon an election of a knight of the shire, the sheriff shall, within two days after the receipt of the writ, cause proclamation to be made at the place where the ensuing election ought by law to be holden of a special county court to be there holden for the purpose of such election only, on any day, Sunday excepted, not later from the day of making such proclamation than the sixteenth day, nor sooner than the tenth day; and shall proceed in such election, at such special county court, in the same manner as if the said election were to be held at a county court, or an adjournment thereof, according to the laws now in being.

Provided, that the usual county court for all other purposes, or any adjournment thereof, may be held and proceeded in by the sheriff, in the same manner, and at the same times and places, as if the writ for the election of a knight of the shire had not been received.

Deputies and clerks for taking the poll.

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 65, in every election of any knight of the shire, the sheriff shall appoint deputies and clerks as he shall think fit for taking the poll, in the places where the poll shall be carried on.

Inspectors.

And by the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 25, the sheriffs shall admit one person for each candidate to be inspector of the clerks.

By 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, sect. 71, the deputies appointed by the sheriff are entitled to 2*l.* 2*s.* per day each, and every clerk to 1*l.* 1*s.* per day at the expense of the candidates.

Oath.

Though the returning officer is obliged to take the Bribery oath on opening the election, the same necessity does not apply to the deputies.

The following is the oath which, by the 25 Geo. III. c. 84, s. 7, is to be administered by the returning officer to the poll clerks:—

'I do swear that I will at this election of a member or members to serve in parliament for the county [or "now southern division of the county of Lancaster"] truly and indifferently take the poll, and set down the name of each freeholder and the place of his freehold, and for whom he shall poll; and to poll no freeholder who is not sworn or put to his affirmation, if legally required.'

This oath may be administered by the respective deputies of the returning officer at their several polling places.

Register of voters for booths.

By the 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 72, the sheriff must provide a copy of the register of voters for each booth.

Check-book.

Sect. 9 of 18 Geo. II. c. 18, enacts that the sheriff shall allow a check-book for every poll-book, for each candidate; to be kept by their inspectors, at every place where the poll shall be taken.

In cities, boroughs, and towns corporate.

By the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 25, s. 1, with respect to cities, boroughs, and towns corporate, the sheriff or other officer who received the writ shall forthwith make out a precept to each borough, town corporate, or place within his jurisdiction where any members are to be elected, and within three days (and in the Cinque Ports within six days, 10 & 11 Wil. III. c. 7,) after receipt of the said writ, shall by himself or proper agent deliver the precept to the proper officer of such borough, town corporate, or place within his jurisdiction, to whom the execution of such precept doth belong, and to no other person whatsoever. And every such officer shall indorse the day of his receipt thereof in presence of the party of whom he received the same, and shall forthwith cause public notice to be given of the time and place of election, and shall proceed to the election within eight days after the receipt of the precept, and give four days' notice at least of the day appointed for the election. (12.) General Matters before Election.

By the 19 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 6, 7, in a city or town, being a county of itself, the sheriff shall forthwith, on receipt of the writ, give public notice of the time and place of election, and proceed to election thereupon within eight days next after the receipt of the writ, and give three days' notice thereof at least, exclusive of the day of receipt of the writ and of the day of election: and the sheriff shall allow a check-book for every poll-book for each candidate, to be kept by their inspectors at the place of taking the poll. In cities or towns being counties of themselves.

And by stats. 34 Geo. III. c. 73, s. 1, and 42 Geo. III. c. 62, s. 1, after reciting that in many places it may be impracticable to receive the votes of all persons claiming and having a right to vote within the time limited as aforesaid, it is enacted, that when a poll shall be demanded, the returning officer shall, at the request in writing of any candidate under his hand, immediately after such request, and before he shall proceed further in taking the poll, appoint two or more persons to administer all the oaths required to be taken by voters, [except that by stat. 43 Geo. III. c. 74, the oath or affirmation required by stat. 2 Geo. II. c. 24, shall be taken by every person before he is admitted to poll in manner as prescribed by the said act, if demanded]; and to certify the names of electors who shall have taken such oaths, or subscribed and made such declaration or affirmation respectively. And every person so appointed shall immediately, and before he shall act, take the following oath, to be administered by the returning officer, or his deputy:— Persons to be appointed to administer the oaths, &c.

I do swear, that I will faithfully and impartially administer the oaths, and take the declarations and affirmations, now required by law to be taken or made by voters at elections for members to serve in parliament, to and from such persons as shall lawfully apply to me in that behalf, in order to qualify themselves to vote at this election; and that I will, on being thereunto requested, fairly and truly give to every such person, or any of them, who shall take such oaths, or make such declarations or affirmations respectively or any of them, before me, a certificate thereof; and that I will not give such certificate to any person before he shall have taken such oath or oaths, or make such declaration or declarations, affirmation or affirmations respectively, as shall be mentioned in such certificate, before me and in my presence. Oaths to be taken by such persons.

And by stat. 34 Geo. III. c. 73, s. 4, if at any time during the election it shall be found that the number of persons so appointed are insufficient for the purpose, and that the poll is delayed thereby, the returning officer, at the request in writing of any candidate then present, shall appoint more in like manner as aforesaid. If a sufficient number have not been appointed.

Sect. 2. Any person claiming to vote may apply to one of the persons so appointed to take the said oaths, or to make and subscribe such declaration or affirmation as aforesaid, and such person shall administer the same accordingly, and shall immediately sign and deliver a certificate thereof, which shall contain the name, addition, and place of abode of the person to whom the same shall be so delivered, and be in the following form:— Electors to take the oaths, &c. before such persons, who shall give certificates thereof.

A. B. [naming the person taking the oath] of [naming the place of such person's abode, and his addition or occupation,] has taken the oath [or "oaths"] of [naming the said oath or oaths, so administered] before me, this day of .

And in case of Quakers subscribing the said declaration of fidelity, or taking their affirmation of the effect of the said oath of abjuration, shall be in the form following: (that is to say)

A. B. [naming the person subscribing or affirming] of [naming the place of such person's abode, and his addition or occupation], has made and subscribed the declaration of fidelity, and affirmed the effect of the oath of abjuration [or if only one of those acts has been done, then naming such one act only], before me, this day of .

And such person, on producing such certificate to the returning officer or person taking the poll, shall be permitted to poll in like manner as if such oaths, &c. had been taken before the returning officer. Production of certificate to entitle to vote.

No person to vote without producing such certificate.

Proper places to be appointed for taking such oaths, &c.

Such places to be provided previous to the election, if required.

Expenses to be defrayed by the candidates.

Sect. 3. If any person shall offer to vote without producing such certificate, and being lawfully required to take the said oaths, and make such declaration as aforesaid, the same shall not be administered to him by the returning officer or person taking the poll, but he shall immediately withdraw, and take the same before one of the persons appointed as aforesaid.

Sect. 5. The returning officer shall provide a proper place for every such person so appointed, to which place the respective electors may have free access without interrupting the poll, and so as the persons so appointed may act separately without interfering with each other; and every such place shall be open and attended by the person appointed to act there, during all the time of the poll; and shall be kept open eight hours at least in every day, between eight in the morning and eight in the evening, until the final close of the poll; and such oaths, &c., shall be administered to as many of the electors, being ready, as conveniently can, not exceeding twelve at one time. And the returning officer shall deliver to each person so appointed a sufficient number of printed forms of the declaration to be made by Quakers, with blanks therein for the names of the persons offering to make and subscribe the same, to be inserted therein; and also a sufficient number of printed certificates in the like form, to be filled up and delivered to each elector so taking the said oaths or affirmation.

Sect. 6. In case any candidate shall, three days at the least before such election, give or cause to be given notice in writing to the returning officer to provide proper places for administering the said oaths, declarations, and affirmations, he shall prepare and provide such proper places, so as to be ready before and against the day of election; and in case there shall not be a sufficient number of fit and convenient places for that purpose at the town or place where such election shall be had, which the returning officer can conveniently and at a reasonable expense procure, then he shall cause such booths or temporary erections to be made in convenient places in that behalf as shall be necessary for the purpose; the expense of which, and of the said printed forms, and also the allowance to be made to the several persons appointed to administer the oaths, &c., as aforesaid (not exceeding one guinea a day each for every day's attendance) shall be paid by the candidates in equal proportions, to the returning officer, which, if not paid, may be recovered in the courts at Westminster.

The 73 sect. of the 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, gives to the deputies of the sheriff, or returning officer, the same power of administering the required oaths and affirmations, and of appointing commissioners for that purpose, as the sheriff and returning officers possess themselves.

XIII. Qualification, &c. of Candidates.

Infants.

By the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 25, s. 8, no person under the age of twenty-one years shall be capable of being elected.

Absence from England is no ground of ineligibility. (Simeon, 51.)

Clergymen disabled.

By the 41 Geo. III. (U. K.) c. 63, s. 1, 2, no person ordained a priest or deacon, or being a minister of the church of Scotland, shall be capable of being elected a member of the House of Commons; but the election of such person shall be void.

Sect. 2. If any person, after his election, shall be ordained a priest or deacon, or such minister as aforesaid, he shall vacate his seat.

Penalty on sitting or voting.

Sect. 3. If such person shall, in either of the two cases aforesaid, presume to sit or vote as a member of such house, he shall forfeit for each day he shall so sit or vote 500*l.* to any person who shall sue for the same in any of his majesty's courts at Westminster; and such penalty shall be recovered, with full costs, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information; and every person against whom such forfeiture shall be recovered, shall be, from thenceforth, incapable of taking, holding, or enjoying any benefice, living, or promotion ecclesiastical, or any office of honour or profit under the crown. (13.) Candidates' Qualification, &c.

Sect. 4. And proof of the celebration of divine service, according to the rites of the church of England or Scotland, in any church or chapel, consecrated, or set apart for public worship, shall be deemed prima facie evidence of the fact of such person having been ordained a priest, or deacon, or minister of the church of Scotland, within the meaning of this act. Proof of vocation.

Sect. 3. But no person shall be liable to any such forfeiture, unless the prosecution be commenced within twelve calendar months after such forfeiture shall be incurred. Limitation of action.

The judges of England are ineligible. (4 Inst. 47.) Judges.

By the 30 Chas. II. s. 2, c. 1, no papist could sit in either House of Parliament. But now by the 10 Geo. IV. c. 7, they may do so on taking certain oaths therein prescribed. See post, "Popery." Papists.

Sir William Blackstone says, no person concerned in the management of any duties or taxes created since 1692, except the commissioners of the treasury, nor any of the officers following (viz. commissioners of prizes, transport, sick and wounded, wine licences, navy, and victualling; secretaries or receivers of prizes; comptrollers of the army accounts; agents for regiments; governors of plantations and their deputies; officers of Minorca and Gibraltar; officers of the excise and customs; clerks or deputies in the several offices of the treasury, exchequer, navy, victualling, admiralty, pay of the army or navy, secretaries of state, salts, stamps, appeals, wine licences, hackney coaches, hawkers and pedlers), nor any persons that hold any new office under the crown created since 1705, are capable of being elected or sitting as members. (1 Blac. Com. 175.) Placemen.

By the 6 Anne, c. 7, s. 26, if any person, being chosen a member of the House of Commons, shall accept of any office of profit from the crown, during such time as he shall continue a member, his election shall be, and is hereby declared to be void, and a new writ shall issue for a new election, as if such person so accepting was naturally dead. Provided, nevertheless, that such person shall be capable of being again elected, as if his place had not become void, as aforesaid. Accepting of office of profit while a member, election void, but may be again elected.

By the 22 Geo. III. c. 45, s. 1, all persons holding contracts made with the commissioners of the treasury, navy, victualling office, or board of ordnance, for or on account of the public service, shall, during the time they shall hold such contracts, be incapable of being elected, or of sitting or voting in the House of Commons. Contractors.

An army clothier, who contracts with a colonel of a regiment, or his agents, to furnish clothing for such regiment, is not within stat. 22 Geo. III. c. 45, which renders all persons holding contracts for the public service incapable of being elected or sitting in the House of Commons. (Thomson, q. t. v. Pearse, Esq. 3 Moore, C. P. 260.)

By the 6 Anne, c. 7, s. 25, no person having a pension from the crown during pleasure, shall be capable of being elected. Pensioners.

Neither shall any person having a pension from the crown for any term of years, either in his own name, or in the name of any other in trust for him, be capable of being elected.

But a pension received by the wife does not disqualify the husband. (Reading, Corb. Dan. 114.)

By the 41 Geo. III. (U. K.) c. 52, s. 4, 5, persons who shall hold any of the following places in Ireland, shall be disabled to sit in the Commons House of the parliament of the United Kingdom, under similar penalties as incurred under former British or Irish acts, or, if disabled by this act, to forfeit 500*l.* per diem: namely, commissioners of customs, excise, or stamps, or persons any ways concerned in farming, collecting or managing any part of the revenue (except the commissioners of the treasury and their secre- Irish placemen, &c.

tary); commissioners of appeals or of accounts, army agents, contractors (except members of trading companies, as such); clerks of the treasury (except the secretary), or of the auditor's letters, or chancellor of the exchequer (except the chancellor's secretary), or of the commissioners of the stamps, or of appeals; and all persons who, in any future parliament, shall hold new places under the lord-lieutenant.

Sect. 8. Provided, that nothing herein shall extend to offices held for life, or during good behaviour; except such as concern the revenue.

Sect. 2. But if any person, chosen a member, shall accept any office of profit from the crown, or by the appointment, or subject to the approbation of the lord-lieutenant, his seat shall become vacant; provided, nevertheless, that (if there be no other incapacity) he shall be again eligible.

Police magistrates, &c.

Police magistrates, and receivers under the police, are ineligible, 3 Will. IV. c. 19. s. 19.

Resigning office.

An office rendering the holder ineligible, if resigned previous to the election, though the resignation be not formally accepted, does not operate as a disqualification. (2 Dougl. 367.)

Qualification by estate.

By the 9 Anne, c. 5, s. 1, no person shall be capable to sit or vote in the House of Commons for a county, unless he hath an estate, freehold or copyhold, for his life, or some greater estate, of the clear yearly value of 600*l.*; nor for a city or borough, unless he hath a like estate of 300*l.*

Sect. 5. And any other candidate or two electors may, upon reasonable request to him made (at the time of the election, or before the day prefixed for the meeting of parliament), require him to take the following oath:

Oath of qualification.

I, A. B., do swear, that I truly and bonâ fide have such an estate in law or equity, to and for my own use and benefit, of or in lands, tenements, or hereditaments, over and above what will satisfy and clear all incumbrances that may affect the same, of the annual value of above reprises, as doth qualify me to be elected and returned to serve as a member for the of according to the tenor and true meaning of the act of parliament in that behalf; and that my said lands, tenements, or hereditaments are lying or being within the parish, township, or precinct of, or in the several parishes, townships, or precincts of in the county of , or in the several counties of (as the case shall be).

(A refusal to take this oath voids the election, 9 Anne, c. 5, s. 7.)

The same to be administered by the returning officer, or two justices; who shall, in three months, certify the same into the chancery or king's bench, under a penalty of 100*l.*; half to the king, and half to the informer.

Exceptions.

Sect. 2. Provided that nothing in the act shall extend to make the eldest son or heir apparent of any peer or lord of parliament, or of any person qualified by this act to serve as knight of a shire, incapable of being elected and returned, and sitting and voting as a member of the House of Commons in any parliament.

Qualification to be delivered in at the table of the House of Commons.

By the 33 Geo. II. c. 20, every member, before he shall vote in the House of Commons, or sit there during any debate, shall, after the speaker is chosen, deliver in at the table in the middle of the house, whilst the house is there sitting, with the speaker in the chair, an account signed by such member, containing the name of the place where his qualification lies, declaring the same to be of the annual value of 600*l.* above reprises, if a knight of a shire; and of 300*l.* if a citizen, burgess, or baron of a cinque port; and shall also at the same time take and subscribe the oath following:—

Oath to be there taken.

I, A. B., do swear, that I truly and bonâ fide have such an estate in law or equity, and of such value, to and for my own use and benefit, of or in lands, tenements, or hereditaments, over and above what will satisfy and clear all incumbrances that may affect the same, as doth qualify me to be elected and returned to serve as a member for the place I am returned for, according to the tenor and true meaning of the acts of parliament in that behalf; and that such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, do lie as described in the paper or account signed by me, and now delivered to the clerk of the House of Commons. So help me God.

But this also shall not extend to the eldest son or heir apparent of a peer, (14.) Returning Officers, Expenses, &c. or of any person qualified to serve as a knight of a shire, or to the members of either of the universities.

By the 41 Geo. III. (U. K.) c. 101, s. 23, the 33 Geo. II. c. 20, is extended to members elected to the united parliament for England, Wales, Berwick-upon-Tweed, or Ireland. And the qualifications may be situate in either of those respective parts of the United Kingdom.

Exceptions.

By the 59 Geo. III. c. 37, after reciting the 9 Anne, c. 5, 33 Geo. II. c. 20, and 41 Geo. III. c. 101, it is enacted, that it shall be sufficient that such lands, tenements, or hereditaments, whereby any person who shall be elected a member of the House of Commons in the United Kingdom, shall make out his qualification in manner by the said acts, shall lie either within England, Wales, Berwick-upon-Tweed, Scotland, or Ireland.

By the 25 Geo. III. c. 52, s. 25, the commissioners for auditing the public accounts shall be incapable of sitting in the House of Commons.

Commissioners of accounts.

By the 52 Geo. III. c. 144, s. 1, wherever a commission of bankruptcy shall be awarded against any member of the House of Commons, and he shall be found and declared a bankrupt under the same, he is incapacitated for the next twelve calendar months from sitting or voting in the house, unless within that period the commission shall be superseded, or the creditors proving their debts shall be paid or satisfied the full amount of their debts under the commission: the same clause having a proviso, that such debts (if any) as shall be disputed by the bankrupt, (if he shall within the same time, enter into security according to the directions of the act, to pay such money as shall be recovered against him in law or equity, together with the costs,) shall be considered, for the purposes of the act, as paid or satisfied.

Member becoming a bankrupt.

By sect. 2, if the commission shall not within twelve calendar months be superseded, nor the debts so satisfied, then the commissioners are required, immediately after the expiration of twelve calendar months from the issuing of the commission, to certify the same to the speaker, and thereupon the election of such member is to be void, and the speaker is authorized and required, during any recess, forthwith, after receiving such certificate, to cause notice thereof to be inserted in the London Gazette, and then, upon the expiration of fourteen days, to issue his warrant to the clerk of the crown to make out a new writ in the room of such member; but nothing herein shall empower the speaker to issue such warrant, unless such certificate shall have been delivered to him so long before the next meeting of the house for the despatch of business, as that the writ may be issued before that time.

XIV. Returning Officers—Return—and Expenses of Election.

By the 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, s. 11, "the persons respectively described in the said schedules (C.) and (D.) shall be the returning officers at all elections of a member or members to serve in parliament for the boroughs in conjunction with which such persons are respectively mentioned in the said schedules (C.) and (D.); and for those boroughs in the said schedules for which no persons are mentioned in such schedules as returning officers, the sheriff for the time being of the county in which such boroughs are respectively situate shall, within two months after the passing of this act, and in every succeeding respective year in the month of March, by writing under his hand, to be delivered to the clerk of the peace of the county within one week, and to be by such clerk of the peace filed and preserved with the records of his office, nominate and appoint for each of such boroughs a fit person, being resident therein, to be, and such person so nominated and appointed shall accordingly be, the returning officer for each of such boroughs respectively until the nomination to be made in the succeeding March; and in the event of the death of any such person, or of his becoming incapable to act by reason of sickness or other sufficient impediment, the sheriff for the time being shall on notice thereof forthwith nominate and appoint in his stead a fit person, being so resident as aforesaid, to be, and such person so nominated and appointed shall accordingly be, the returning officer for such borough for the remainder of the then current year; and no person having been so nominated and appointed as returning officer for any borough, shall after the expiration of his office be compellable at any time thereafter to serve again in the said office for the same borough: provided always, that no person being in holy orders, nor any churchwarden or overseer of the poor within any such borough, shall be nominated or appointed as such returning officer for the same; and that no person nominated and appointed as returning officer for any borough now sending or hereafter to send members to parliament shall be appointed a churchwarden or overseer of the poor therein during the time for which he shall be such returning officer: provided also, that no person qualified to be elected to serve as a member in parliament shall be compellable to serve as returning officer for any borough for which he shall have been nominated and appointed by the sheriff as aforesaid, if within one week after he shall have received notice of his nomination and appointment as returning officer, he shall make oath of such qualification before any justice of the peace, and shall forthwith notify the same to the sheriff: provided also, that in case his majesty shall be pleased to grant his royal charter of incorporation to any of the boroughs named in the said schedules (C.) and (D.) which are not now incorporated, and shall by such charter give power to elect a mayor or other chief municipal officer for any such borough, then and in every such case such mayor or other chief municipal officer for the time being shall be the only returning officer for such borough; and the provisions herein-before contained with regard to the nomination and appointment of a returning officer for such borough shall thenceforth cease and determine."

At the close of the poll in borough elections, after receiving the books, as directed by the 68 sect. of the Reform Act, the returning officer seals them up, and keeps them unopened till the following day, when he publicly breaks the seal, calculates the numbers, and declares the state of the poll. This must not be later than two o'clock P. M.

The returning officer may, however, if he choose, declare the poll, and proclaim the members immediately after the close.

The 65 sect. of the same act directs the delivery of the poll books in county elections to the sheriff or under-sheriff, who retains them unopened till the re-opening of the court on the next day but one, when he also publicly breaks the seals, casts up the votes, declares the poll, and proclaims the members.

This must also take place before two o'clock P. M.

By the 7 Hen. IV. c. 15, after the election the names of the persons chosen shall be written in an indenture under the seals of the electors, and tacked to the writ.

By the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 7. s. 1, 2, if any officer shall return any member contrary to the last determination in the House of Commons, the same shall be adjudged a false return; and the party duly elected may recover double damages with full costs.

Sect. 3. And the like remedy shall be against an officer making a double return. (See 1 Peckw. 16.)

If upon any writ issued no return shall be made on or before the day on which such writ is returnable, or if a writ shall have been issued during any session or prorogation of parliament, and no return shall be made within fifty-two days after the day on which such writ bears date, or if the return made in either case shall not be a return of a member according to the requisition thereof, but contain special matter only concerning such election; any person having or claiming a right to vote, or claiming a right to be returned, who shall think himself aggrieved, may petition the House of Commons concerning the same; and upon such petition being presented, a day and hour shall be appointed for taking the same into consideration, and notice thereof in writing shall be forthwith given by the speaker to the petitioners, and to the officer by whom such return should have been made, accompanied with an order to attend the house at the time appointed, by themselves, or their counsel, or agents; and a select committee shall be appointed according as is directed by the 10 & 11 Geo. III., who shall proceed therein as by the said acts are directed; and all rules and regulations in either of the said acts contained shall extend to this act. (25 Geo. III. c. 84, s. 10.)

Sect. 8. Every person who, in taking any oath herein-before appointed, shall thereby commit wilful perjury, or unlawfully and corruptly procure or suborn any other person to take any such oath, whereby he shall commit such wilful perjury, and shall be thereof convicted, shall incur such penalties as are inflicted by the 5 Eliz. c. 9, and 26 Geo. II. c. 25, s. 8. Persons committing perjury.

And by the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 25, s. 6, every such sheriff or returning officer shall deliver copies of the poll to any person desiring the same, paying a reasonable charge for writing thereof. Copies of the poll.

Finally, by the 10 Anne, c. 23, s. 5, he shall, within twenty days after the election, deliver over upon oath (to be administered by the two next justices) the poll-books to the clerk of the peace, without alteration, to be kept amongst the records of the sessions. See also sect. 54, 2 Wil. IV. c. 45.

The poll books of borough elections remain in the custody of the returning officers and successors. See sect. 54, ib. Custody of poll books.

XV. Freedom of Election.

By the 3 Edw. I. c. 5, because elections ought to be free, the king commandeth, upon great forfeiture, that no man, by force of arms, nor by malice or menacing, shall disturb any to make free election. Elections to be free.

By the declaration of rights, 1 Wil. III. sess. 2, c. 2, it is insisted, that elections of members of parliament ought to be free; and that freedom of speech, and debates of proceedings in parliament, ought not to be impeached or questioned in any court or place out of parliament.

And by the 8 Geo. II. c. 30, on notice of an election, the secretary at war shall send orders for the removal of soldiers one day at least before the election, and not to return till after the poll shall be closed. But this is not to extend to the guards, nor to any castle or fortified place, where a garrison is usually kept; nor to any officer or soldier having a right to vote at such election. (See 1 Peckw. 89.) Soldiers to be removed.

By the 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 44, no officer of the post-office shall, by word, message, or writing, or in any other manner, endeavour to persuade any elector to give, or dissuade any elector from giving, his vote in any election.— Officers of the post-office, &c. not to interfere.

By the 5 Wil. III. c. 20, and 9 Anne, c. 11, s. 4, there is the like provision with respect to the officers of excise.—And the like by the 12 & 13 Wil. III. c. 10, with respect to the officers of the customs.

If riots are carried to a great extent, accompanied with personal intimidation, and exclude the possibility of a fair exercise of the franchise, they will avoid the election. (Orme, 18; 1 Peckw. 77.) Riots.

By the 49 Geo. III. c. 118, after reciting, that the giving or promising to give money, &c. in order to procure the return of any member to serve in parliament, if not given to or for the use of some person having a right or claiming to have a right to act as returning officer, or to vote at such election, is not bribery within the meaning of the 2 Geo. II. c. 24, it is enacted, "that if any person shall, either by himself, or by any other person, for or on his behalf, give or cause to be given, directly or indirectly, or promise or agree to give any sum of money, gift, or reward, to any person, upon any engagement, contract, or agreement, that such person to whom, to whose use, or on whose behalf such gift or promise shall be made, shall, by himself, or by any other person whatsoever at his solicitation or command, procure or endeavour to procure the return of any person to serve in parliament, every person so having given or promised to give, if not returned himself in parliament for such county, &c., shall, for every such gift or promise, forfeit 1000*l.*, to be recovered as herein-after provided, with respect to the sum of 500*l.*; and every such person so returned, and so having given or promised, or knowing of and consenting to such gifts or promises, upon any such engagement, &c., shall be thereby disabled to serve in that parliament for such county, &c.; and such person shall be deemed to be no member of parliament, as if never returned or elected a member; and any person who shall receive or accept of, by himself, or by any other in trust for, or to the use or on the behalf of him, any such sum of money, gift, or reward, or any such promise upon any such engagement, &c., shall forfeit to his majesty the value and amount of such sum of money, &c., over the sum of 500*l.*, which said 500*l.* he shall forfeit to any person who shall sue for the same, to be recovered, with costs of suit, by action of debt, &c. in any of his majesty's courts at Westminster, if the offence be in England or Wales, and at Dublin, if committed in Ireland."

Sect. 2. Provides that the act shall not extend to any money paid or agreed to be paid to or by any person for any legal expense bonâ fide incurred at or concerning any election.

Giving any office, &c. for election purposes.

By sect. 3, If any person shall by himself, or by any other person on his behalf, give or procure to be given, any office, place, or employment to any person upon any express contract or agreement that such person, to whom or to whose use or on whose behalf such gift or promise shall be made, shall by himself, or by any other person at his solicitation or command, procure or endeavour to procure the return of any person to serve in parliament for any county, &c. (as in s. 1,) such person so returned, and so having given or procured, or so having promised to give or procure, or knowing of and consenting to such gift or promise upon any such express contract or agreement, shall be disabled and incapacitated, &c. (as in s. 1); and any person who shall receive or accept of, by himself, or by any other person in trust for or to the use or on the behalf of such persons, any such office, &c., upon such express contract or agreement, shall forfeit such office, &c., and be incapacitated for holding the same, and shall forfeit 500*l.*, which said 500*l.* shall be recovered as is herein-before enacted; and any person holding any office under his majesty, who shall give such office, &c., upon any such express contract, &c., that the person to whom, &c., such office, &c., shall have been given, shall so procure, or endeavour to procure, the return of any person to serve in parliament shall forfeit 1,000*l.*, to be recovered as is herein-before provided.

Limitation of actions.

By sect. 4, actions upon this statute must be commenced within two years next after the offence committed, excepting where the party absconds.

As to bribery at elections, see ante, page 18.

Monies or personal property belonging to municipal corporations not to be applied in or towards parliamentary elections;

By the 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 69, after reciting that "the property belonging to cities, towns, cinque ports, and boroughs corporate in the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland may be wasted and dissipated by the application thereof in or towards the expenses attendant upon parliamentary elections, to the great detriment of such municipal corporations; and it is expedient to make provision to prevent such detriment, and also to ensure the freedom of election by restraining the application of corporate property as before mentioned: it is therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act it shall not be lawful for any municipal corporation as aforesaid, or any court, guild, council, or assembly constituting or composed of the ruling or governing part or class thereof, or any corporate officer, trustee, or other person acting on behalf of such corporation or any part thereof, to pay, transfer, give, bestow, or apply any sum or sums of money, or any parliamentary or other stocks, funds, or securities for money, or any personal chattel, belonging to or vested in the same corporation or any part thereof, or in any individual in trust for or for the benefit of such corporation, in satisfaction, compensation, or discharge of any expenses incident to or incurred or occasioned by the election of a member to serve in the Commons House of Parliament, or by any person offering himself as a candidate at or previous to a parliamentary election; and that all bonds, covenants, recognizances, or judgments given, executed, or suffered by any such corporation, or any part or class thereof, or by any corporate officer, trustee, or other person in the name or on the behalf of such corporation, for the purpose of securing the payment of such expenses, shall be utterly void." (15.) Freedom of Election.

By sect. 2, "any gifts, transfers, payments, or gratuities, bonds, covenants, recognizances, or judgments, made, paid, given, executed, or suffered by any corporation, part of a corporation, or corporate officer, or trustee, or other person as aforesaid, for the purpose of inducing or influencing any person or persons to labour in parliamentary elections at a future time, or to pay, satisfy, or incur any such expenses as aforesaid at a future time, shall be deemed to be payments, transfers, applications, and securities forbidden and declared void by this act, although the same may be ostensibly and colourably made, paid, given, executed, or suffered for any other cause or consideration."

Payments to any person to exert himself in elections at a future time to be within this act.

By sect. 3, "all conveyances, mortgages, leases, or other assurances or dispositions of lands, tenements, or hereditaments, belonging to or vested in or held in trust for any municipal corporation, made or executed for the purpose of securing, satisfying, or compensating any expenses, debts, payments, or disbursements, liabilities or engagements, incurred or to be incurred by the same corporation, or any part or class thereof, or any member, officer, or trustee thereof, or by any other person on behalf of such corporation, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, and all estates, charges, and incumbrances thereby created, shall be utterly void."

All dispositions of real property, for the purpose of satisfying or securing any expenses hereby prohibited, to be void.

By sect. 4, "all votes, orders, or resolutions, acts, bye-laws, or other proceedings made, passed, or adopted by any municipal corporation, or any part or class thereof, or any member or members thereof, for the purpose of directing or authorizing, or pretending to direct or authorize, any payment, matter, or thing forbidden by this act, or for the purpose of evading the provisions hereby enacted, shall be utterly void."

All votes and other proceedings contrary to this act to be void.

And by sect. 5, "any corporate officer, trustee, or other person who shall make or concur in making any payment, transfer, or application of corporation money, stocks, funds, or securities, or personal chattel, as aforesaid, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, shall be deemed and taken to have made the same in his own wrong, and that he shall be individually liable to repay, satisfy, and make good the amount or value thereof to the same corporation, notwithstanding any release or pretended indemnity which may be given to him in the name of the same corporation or any part or class thereof, or by any person or persons on behalf of such corporation."

Corporate officers or others making any payment contrary to this act, to make good amount so misapplied.

Sect. 6, "in order to frustrate any fraudulent connivance or concealment, it shall and may be lawful for any two or more freemen, burgesses, or corporators of such municipal corporation to commence, bring, and prosecute any action or suit, at law or in equity, in the name of the same corporation, against any officer, trustee, or other person who may have made such illegal payment, transfer, or application as above mentioned, in the same manner, to all intents and purposes, as if they, their executors and administrators, were jointly and severally appointed the irrevocable attorneys of such corporation for that purpose: provided nevertheless, that before the defendant in such action or suit shall be required to plead or answer, the plaintiffs shall give reasonable security for payment of costs, in case any shall become due from them, by the event of the action or suit, in such manner as the court in which the same shall be brought may direct; such costs to be taxed as between attorney and client."

Corporators empowered to bring actions or suits in the name of the corporation.

And by sect. 7, "any member of a municipal corporation who shall authorize, direct, or command any payment, transfer, or application hereby forbidden, or who shall assent to or concur or participate in any affirmative vote, order, or proceeding relating thereto, or shall sign or seal in his individual capacity or affix the corporate seal to any deed or instrument hereby declared void, shall be guilty of a misdemeanour, and, being thereof legally convicted in his majesty's court of King's Bench at Westminster, shall, in addition to such punishment as the court may award, be for ever disabled to take, hold, or exercise any office in the same corporation."

against Return.*XVI. Petition against Return.

Petitions may be presented against the return of members by any elector on the ground of an undue election or return, and the correctness of the register may be disputed before a committee of the House of Commons. The time for presenting such petitions is regulated by an order of the house at the opening of the session; and by the 9 Geo. IV. c. 22, s. 14, it will be seen that a list of such votes as it is intended to object to must be delivered to the clerk of the House of Commons ten days before the day appointed for the consideration of the petition. Before the house will proceed upon the petition, the petitioner must enter into certain recognizances required by that statute, with sureties in a heavy penal sum for the payment of all costs, expenses, and fees, which shall become due to any witness summoned on behalf of the subscriber, or to the officers of the house, &c. If this be neglected, and the time for the purpose be not enlarged, the order for hearing the petition will be discharged.

On a petition to the House of Commons, complaining of an undue election, forty-nine members of the House of Commons shall be chosen by ballot, out of whom each party shall alternately strike out one, till they be reduced to the number thirteen; who, together with two more, of whom each party shall nominate one, shall be a select committee for determining such controverted elections. The 10 Geo. III. c. 16; 11 Geo. III. c. 42; both made perpetual by the 14 Geo. III. c. 15; and since amended by the 25 Geo. III. c. 84; 28 Geo. III. c. 52; 32 Geo. III. c. 1; 36 Geo. III. c. 59; 42 Geo. III. c. 84; 47 Geo. III. c. 1; 53 Geo. III. c. 71; 9 Geo. IV. c. 22; and the principal act is now the 9 Geo. IV. c. 22. See 18 Geo. II. c. 18, as to certain expenses.

The petition must set forth the specific grounds of objection, and its allegations must be supported by proof.

In the Bedford case (1 Perry & Kn. 122), the committee decided that they could not inquire into the validity of a vote, which had not been objected to before the revising barrister.

In the Ripon case, tried in the same session (1 Perry & Kn. 205), the committee came to a contrary decision.

The Bedford case, however, has been supported by subsequent resolutions; and it would seem, that to entitle a petitioner to oppose a vote before the committee, he must show the proper opposition to have been offered before the revising barrister.

The 39 sect. 9 Geo. IV. c. 22, empowers the committee to send for and examine persons, papers, and records, and on disobedience to the summons or refusal to give evidence, the parties may be committed to the custody of the serjeant-at-arms.

The witnesses have a summary remedy for the recovery of their expenses, and the certificate of the speaker is sufficient proof of their having been summoned, and they are not compellable to give their evidence till they have had their expenses paid or tendered.

In the Dublin case (1835), the committee granted a commission for the examination of witnesses in Ireland.

After hearing the evidence in support of, and opposition to the petition, the committee make their report to the house, and the return is avoided or confirmed according to their report.

Frivolous Petitions.]—The speaker may grant his certificate of costs incurred by a member in opposing a frivolous and vexatious petition against one of several petitioners. (Gurney v. Gordon, 9 Bingh. 37, and S.C. 2 Crom. & J. 614.)

Returning Officer.]—If in a petition against the return of a member the returning officer be charged with corruption and bribery, and attend before the committee by counsel, agent, and witnesses, and the petition be declared frivolous and vexatious, and the speaker grant him his order and certificate pursuant to 28 Geo. III. c. 52, ascertaining his expenses, he may recover them by action in debt. (Trueman v. Lambert, 4 M. & Sel. 234.)

Witnesses under recognizance to appear before a committee need not (17.) Privilege attend till the last moment, nor wait to hear the decision. (Ex parte of Parliament. Williams, 8 Price, 3.)

XVII. Privilege of Parliament.

In the reign of Henry VI., when the House of Lords propounded to Sir John Fortescue, chief-justice, a question concerning the privileges, he answered in the name of his brethren, that they "ought not to make answer to that question, for it hath not been used aforetime that the justices should in anywise determine the privileges of the high court of parliament. For it is so high and mighty in its nature that it may make law, and that which is law, it may make no law: and the determination and knowledge of that privilege belongs to the lords of parliament, and not to the justices." (Bla. Com. vol. 1.) In general.

At the opening of parliament the speaker demands of the king freedom of speech. Freedom of speech.

By the common law, a member of parliament shall have the privilege of parliament, not only for himself and his servants, to be freed from arrest, subpœna, citation, and the like, but also for his horses and goods to be free from distresses: but for treason, felony, and breach of the peace, there can be no privilege. (4 Inst. 24, 25.) From arrest and distresses.

These privileges were, however, greatly restricted by the 12 Wil. III. c. 3; 2 & 3 Ann. c. 18, and 11 Geo. II. c. 24; and now, so far as they respect their domestics' lands and goods, are absolutely taken away by 10 Geo. III. c. 50.

Members of the House of Commons are privileged against arrest, not only during the continuance and sitting of parliament, but for a convenient time after every prorogation and before the next appointed meeting. (1 Dyer, 50; 2 St. 985; Fortescue, 165.)

It is said that the privilege eundo et redeundo continues for forty days (2 Lev. 72), which seems, however, to have been doubted, (1 Sid. 29). The House of Commons, indeed, have always avoided deciding the limits of their privilege in this respect, and the question as to the extent of it can be determined by them only. In 1586, when Mr. Martin, a member, was arrested twenty days before the meeting of parliament, the house ordered him to be discharged; but when the question was put, whether they should limit a time for the continuance of this privilege, the proposition was negatived.

It has been held, that an unprivileged person in custody under an execution, being elected a member of parliament, is entitled to his discharge on motion. (Phillips v. Wellesley, 1 Dow. P. C. 14.)

Rex v. Earl Ferrers, 1 Burr. 631. A writ of habeas corpus having been granted and served upon the said earl, returnable immediately, to bring up the body of his countess, who was sister to Sir William Meredith, (that she might have an opportunity to lay her case before the court, and swear the peace, if she should think proper, thereby to receive the protection of the court against the said earl,) and the earl having neglected to return the said writ, the counsel for Sir William Meredith, on behalf of his sister, intended to have moved for an attachment against the earl for this his disobedience. But some doubts and difficulties having been started by members of both houses concerning the privilege of peerage, and whether the Court of King's Bench could issue an attachment against a peer during the sitting of parliament, and execute it upon him, only for a contempt to their court, Sir William judged it prudent to petition the House of Lords, for their leave to proceed against the earl, and accordingly (by the hands of the Earl of Westmoreland) delivered the petition, stating the facts. Lord Delaware opposed it; and said it was too summary and hasty a method of determining upon their privileges; and proposed referring the matter to a committee, and summoning Lord Ferrers to answer it in his place: and to obviate the (17.) Privilege of Parliament. objections which might be made to this method, on account of the delay, he offered some schemes for the immediate safety of the countess. But Lord Mansfield answered him, and spoke in support of the jurisdiction of his court, and the unreasonableness, injustice, and inconvenience of allowing such a privilege in criminal cases and breaches of the peace. The Duke of Argyle spoke to the like effect, and expressed a surprise that there should be any doubt about it; the reason of the thing being so clear and plain. Lastly, the Earl of Hardwicke spoke strongly and particularly in support of the same doctrine, and adduced many instances and precedents in proof of his position; and concluded with proposing that, to put an end to all doubts about it for the future, the lords should come to a resolution; and accordingly they did come to the following resolution or declaration, and ordered it to be entered on their journal, viz.:—"7th February, 1757. It is ordered and declared that no peer or lord of parliament hath privilege against being compelled by process of the courts of Westminster Hall to pay obedience to a writ of habeas corpus directed to him."

The Habeas Corpus Act is a remedial law; and the judges of every court are bound to enforce its provisions according to their spirit, in such a manner as most effectually to relieve the subject from illegal imprisonment. (Per Ld. Alvanley, C. J., Huntley v. Luscombe, 2 Bos. & Pul. 535.)

But members of either house are privileged from an attachment for non-payment of money. (Walker v. Earl of Grosvenor, 7 T. R. 171, Catmur v. Sir E. Knatchbull, id. 448.)

May be sued, but not arrested.

By the 12 & 13 Wil. III. c. 3, and 11 Geo. II. c. 24, any person may bring an action against a peer or member of parliament, or any of their menial or other servants, immediately after the dissolution or prorogation, until a new parliament meet, or the same be re-assembled; and from any adjournment of both houses, for above fourteen days, until both houses shall meet or re-assemble; and the courts, during such time, may proceed to give judgment and award execution.—But this shall not extend to subject the person to be arrested during the time of privilege; but the plaintiff may prosecute at law by summons and distress infinite, or by original bill and summons, attachment, and distress infinite, until the defendant shall enter a common appearance, or file common bail. And in equity, the plaintiff may proceed by letter or subpœna; and after service thereof may, for want of appearance or answer, or non-performance of an order or decree, or for breach thereof, sequester the real and personal estate of the party, but not arrest his body.

Where bankrupt is a member of or has the protection of parliament.

By the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 9, a member of parliament may be a bankrupt; but by the 52 Geo. III. c. 144, he vacates his seat, unless the commission is superseded within twelve months from its being issued, or the creditors are paid their debts in full within the same period.

By the 6 Geo. IV. c. 16, s. 9, traders having privilege of parliament committing acts of bankruptcy, may be proceeded against as bankrupts.

By sect. 10, any such traders not paying or compounding to the satisfaction of the creditor, and also entering an appearance to the action within one month, commit an act of bankruptcy. (See Hunter v. Campbell, 3 B. & Ald. 273; Jameson v. Campbell, 5 B. & Ald. 250; Ex p. Harcourt, 2 Rose, 204.)

By sect. 11, any such trader disobeying the order of any court of equity, or in bankruptcy or lunacy, for payment of money, after personal service and peremptory day fixed for payment of the money, an act of bankruptcy.

Prosecuting actions against peers or members.

And by the 10 Geo. III. c. 50, any person may commence and prosecute any action in any court of record or court of equity, or of admiralty, (or, in causes matrimonial and testamentary, in any court having cognizance of such causes,) against any peer or member of the House of Commons, or any of their menial or other servants, or any other person entitled to privilege of parliament; and no proceedings thereupon shall be delayed under colour of such privilege. But this shall not subject the person of any member of the House of Commons to be arrested or imprisoned on any such suit or proceedings. And to remedy the dilatoriness by a process of distringas, the court out of which the writ proceeds may order the issues levied from time to time to be sold, and the money arising thereby to be applied to pay such (18.) Duration costs to the plaintiff as the court shall think just, and the surplus to be de- and Date of tained till the defendant shall have appeared, or other purpose of the writ Acts of Parlia- be answered. And obedience may be enforced to any rule of the Court of ment. King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, against any person entitled to privilege, by distress infinite, if the person entitled to the benefit of such rule shall choose to proceed in that way.

XVIII. Duration of Parliament and Date of Acts of Parliament.

By the 1 Geo. I. s. 2, c. 38, the parliament shall have continuance for seven years, to be accounted from the day on which, by the writ of summons, they shall be appointed to meet, unless sooner dissolved by the king. To continue seven years.

And by the 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 15, and 6 Anne, c. 7, they shall not be dissolved by the king's death, but shall continue and immediately meet, sit, and act for six months, unless sooner dissolved by the successor. And if there be then no parliament in being, the last preceding parliament shall meet, sit, and act as aforesaid. Not dissolved by the death of the king.

The 37 Geo. III. c. 127, and 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 14, have provided, that in case of the king's demise between the dissolution of parliament and the day appointed for the assembling of a new one, the last preceding parliament shall meet, and sit, and continue for six months, unless sooner prorogued or dissolved by the successor. And in case of the king's demise on or after the day of assembling of a new parliament, such new parliament shall meet and sit subject to the will of the successor as above stated. The king may also issue his proclamation for the meeting of parliament in fourteen days from the date thereof, notwithstanding a previous adjournment to a longer day.

By the 33 Geo. III. c. 13, after reciting, "that in every act of parliament in which the commencement thereof is not directed to be from a specific time, it doth commence from the first day of the session of parliament in which such act is passed, which is liable to produce great injustice," it is enacted, "that the clerk of the parliaments shall indorse (in English) on every act of parliament which shall pass after the 8th of April, 1793, immediately after the title of such act, the day, month, and year, when the same passed and received the royal assent; which indorsement shall be taken to be the date of its commencement, where no other commencement shall be therein provided." Clerk of parliament to indorse on every act the time it receives the royal assent, which shall be its commencement, where no other is provided.

Before this enactment, every statute (unless otherwise expressly provided) related to the first day of the session when it was passed, contrary to the principle of legislation, that all laws should be made to commence in futuro, and be notified before their commencement. (1 Bla. Com. 46, Rumsey v. Tuffnell, 9 Moore 425, 2 Bingh. 257.) The consequence was, that frequently great injustice was occasioned; see instances, R. v. Thurston, 1 Lev. 91; Latless v. Holmes, 4 T. R. 660; and even ignorance of a statute rendering criminal an act not before so, was held to afford no defence to the indictment, although it was ground for a pardon. (See Bailey's case, 1 Russ. & R. Cr. C. 1.) But the above statute remedies this evil, and in general, in modern acts, it is provided that they shall commence to operate on some future named day. (1 Chit. Col. St. 1031, n.)

By the 48 Geo. III. c. 106, "where any bill shall be introduced into any session of parliament, for the continuance of any act which would expire in such session, and such act shall have expired before the bill for continuing the same shall have received the royal assent, such continuing act shall be deemed to have effect from the date of the expiration of the act intended to be continued, except it shall be otherwise provided in such continuing act; but nothing herein contained shall extend to affect any person with any punishment, penalty, or forfeiture, by reason of any thing done, or omitted to be done, contrary to the provisions of the act continued, between the expiration of the same, and the date at which the act continuing the same shall receive the royal assent." Where bills for continuing expiring acts shall not pass before the acts expire, such acts shall be continued from their expiration, except as to penalties.

XX. Division of Counties and Boundaries of Boroughs.

The frequent reference by the Reform Act to the 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 64, which was subsequently passed for the purpose of settling and describing the divisions of counties, and the limits of cities and boroughs, has rendered its introduction under this division of the work indispensably requisite, and consequently swelled its extent considerably beyond the wish and original intention of the Editors. As, however, it may not unfrequently be necessary to ascertain the fixed limits of particular boroughs, not only with reference to the election of members to serve in parliament, but in explanation of the "Act for the Regulation of Municipal Corporations," it has been thought advisable to insert it under this head, as more properly appertaining to the subject than under the title "Corporations;" and in our observations on the Municipal Corporation Act we have accordingly referred to it in its place here.

By the 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 64, after reciting that, "by an act passed in this 2 W. IV. c. 45. present session of parliament, and intituled 'An Act to amend the Representation of the People in England and Wales,' it was (amongst other things) provided, that each of the counties enumerated in the schedule marked (F.) thereto annexed should be divided into two divisions, which divisions should be settled and described by an act to be passed for that purpose in this present parliament, which act, when passed, should be deemed and taken to be part of the act now in recital as fully and effectually as if incorporated therewith; and that two knights of the shire should be chosen for each division of the said counties; and that the court for the election of such knights of the shire should be held at the place to be named for that purpose in the act so to be passed for settling and describing the divisions of the said counties: and whereas the act so to be passed for settling and describing the divisions of the said counties, as in the said recited act is mentioned, is this present act: and also that the several counties enumerated in the said schedule marked (F.) to the said recited act annexed are the several counties whereof the divisions are hereinafter settled and enacted.

“The two divisions of the county of Chester to be called the Northern Division and the Southern Division; the Northern Division to include the whole of the respective hundreds of Macclesfield and Bucklow; and the Southern Division the whole of the several hundreds of Broxton, Eddisbury, Nantwich, Northwich, and Wirrall; and also the city and county of the city of Chester. The court for the election of knights of the shire to be held for such Northern Division at the town of Knutsford, and for such Southern Division at the city of Chester.

Cornwall.

“The two divisions of the county of Cornwall to be called the Eastern and the Western Division; such Eastern Division to include the whole of the several hundreds called East, West, Lesnewth, Stratton, and Trigg; and also the following parishes and places in the hundred of Powder, (that is to say,) St. Austell, St. Blazey, St. Denis, St. Ewe, Fowey, Gorran, Ladock, Lanlivery, Lostwithiel, Luxulion, Mevagissey, St. Mewan, St. Michael Carhaise, Roach, St. Sampson's, St. Stephen's in Brannel, and Tywardreth; together with all such part of the hundred of Pydar as is not included in the Western Divisions of the county of Cornwall next hereinafter described; and such Western Division the whole of the respective hundreds of Kerrier and Penwith; all such part of the hundred of Powder as is not included in the Eastern Division of the county of Cornwall, hereinbefore described; the following parishes in the hundred of Pydar, (that is to say,) St. Agnes, Crantock, Cubert, Newlyn, St. Enoder, and Perranzabuloe, and the Scilly Islands. The court for the election of knights of the shire to be held for such Eastern Division at the borough of Bodmin, and for such Western Division at the borough of Truro.

Cumberland.

“The two divisions of the county of Cumberland to be called the Eastern and the Western Division; such Eastern Division to include the whole of the several wards of Cumberland, Eskdale, and Leath; and such Western Division the whole of the respective wards of Allerdale above Derwent, and Allerdale below Derwent. The court for the election of knights of the shire to be held for such Eastern Division at the city of Carlisle, and for such Western division at the borough of Cockermouth.

Derby.

“The two divisions of the county of Derby to be called the Northern and the Southern Division; such Northern Division to include the whole of the respective hundreds of High Peak and Scarsdale; and also so much of the wapentake of Wirksworth as, by virtue of the order made at the quarter sessions of the peace for the county of Derby held at the borough of Derby on the 28th day of June, 1831, is comprised in the Bakewell Division, as established by such order; and such Southern Division the whole of the several hundreds of Appletree, Morleston and Litchurch, and Repton and Gresley; and all such parts of the wapentake of Wirksworth as are included within the Northern Division of the county of Derby last hereinbefore described. The court for the election of knights of the shire to be held for such Northern Division at the town of Bakewell, and for such Southern Division at the County Hall in Derby.

Devon.

“The two divisions of the county of Devon to be called the Northern and Southern Division; such Northern Division to include the whole of the several hundreds of Bampton, Black Torrington, Braunton, Crediton, Fremington, Halberton, Hartland, Hayridge, Hemyock, North Tawton and Winkleigh, Shebbear, Sherwill, South-Molton, Tiverton, Witheridge, and West Budleigh; and such Southern Division the whole of the several hundreds of Axminster, Clyston, Colyton, Ottery St. Mary, East Budleigh, Lifton, Exminster, Teignbridge, Haytor, Coleridge, Stanborough, Ermington, Plympton, Roborough, and Tavistock; and also the Castle of Exeter; and the hundred of Wonford, except such parts of that hundred as are included in the limits of the city of Exeter as hereinafter described. The court for the election of knights of the shire to be held for such Northern

"The two divisions of the county of Durham to be called the Northern and the Southern Division; such Northern Division to include the whole of the respective wards of Chester and Easington; and such Southern Division the whole of the respective wards of Darlington and Stockton. The court for the election of knights of the shire to be held for such Northern Division at the city of Durham, and for such Southern Division at the town of Darlington. Durham.

"The two divisions of the county of Essex to be called the Northern and the Southern Division; such Northern Division to include the whole of the several hundreds of Clavering, Dunmow, Freshwell, Hinckford, Lexden, Tendring, Thurstable, Uttlesford, Winstree, and Witham; and such Southern Division the whole of the several hundreds of Barstable, Becontree, Chafford, Chelmsford, Dengie, Harlow, Ongar, Rochford, and Waltham; and of the liberty of Havering. The court for the election of knights of the shire to be held for such Northern Division at the town of Braintree, and for such Southern Division at the town of Chelmsford. Essex.

By 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 64, sect. 26, “the isolated parts of counties in England and Wales which are described in the schedule to the said act annexed marked (M.) shall, as to the election of members to serve in parliament as knights of the shire, be considered as forming parts of the respective counties and divisions which are respectively mentioned in the fourth column of the said schedule (M.) in conjunction with the names of such isolated parts respectively; and that every part of any county in England or Wales which is detached from the main body of such county, but for which no special provision is hereby made, shall be considered, for the purposes of the election of members to serve in parliament as knights of the shire, as forming part of that county (not being a county corporate), and of that division, riding, or parts, whereby such detached part shall be surrounded; but if any such detached part shall be surrounded by two or more counties, or divisions, ridings, or parts, then as forming part of that county, or division, riding, or parts, with which such detached part shall have the longest common boundary.”

hundreds, &c.

By sect. 27, “as respects the counties of York and Lincoln, and also the counties thereinbefore divided, except the counties of Hants and Worcester, every portion of any hundred, ward, wapentake, rape, lathe, or liberty of any such county which is detached from the main body of such hundred, ward, wapentake, rape, lathe, or liberty, and is also locally separated from that division of the county to which such main body is to belong under the provisions contained in this act or in the hereinbefore recited act, but which is not subject to the provisions lastly hereinbefore contained, shall, for the purpose of the election of members to serve in parliament as knights of the shire, be considered as forming part of that division, parts, or riding of the same county by which such detached portion is surrounded, or to which it adjoins.”

Liberties, &c.

By sect. 28, “all liberties, franchises, and places having a separate jurisdiction, which are not thereinbefore expressly mentioned (except the several cities and towns, and counties thereof respectively, of Bristol, Exeter, Lichfield, Norwich, and Nottingham, and except the several places by this act comprised within the boundaries thereof respectively), shall, as to the election of members to serve in parliament as knights of the shire, respectively be considered as included within the respective divisions thereby established in which such liberties, franchises, and places having a separate jurisdiction shall be locally situated."

By sect. 29, reciting that by 2 Wil. IV. c. 45, it is provided "that the respective counties in England and Wales, and the respective ridings, parts, and divisions of counties, should be divided into convenient districts for polling, and that in each district should be appointed a convenient place for taking the poll at all elections of a knight or knights of the shire to serve in any future parliament, and that such districts and places for taking the poll should be settled and appointed by the act to be passed in this present parliament for the purpose of settling and describing the divisions of the counties enumerated in the schedule marked (F.) to the said recited act annexed, provided that no county, nor any riding, parts, or division of a county, should have more than fifteen districts and respective places appointed for taking the poll for such county, riding, parts, or division; and by the said recited act it is also provided that the several boroughs of New Shoreham, Cricklade, Aylesbury, and East Retford, as thereby defined, should be divided into convenient districts for polling, and that there should be appointed in each district a convenient place for taking the poll at all elections of members to serve in any future parliament for each of the said boroughs, which districts and places for taking the poll should be settled and appointed by an act to be passed in this present parliament; be it therefore enacted, that the poll for election of knights of the shire shall be taken at such places as in the schedule to this act annexed marked (N.) are mentioned in conjunction with the names of the counties, and of the ridings, parts, and divisions of counties, in which such places are respectively situated."

County polling places, such as are mentioned in schedule (N.) See post.

By sect. 30, "the justices of the peace for every county in England and Wales, and for each of the ridings of Yorkshire, and for the parts of Lindsey, and for the parts of Kesteven and Holland, in Lincolnshire, assembled at the quarter sessions to be holden in the month of October, in the then present year, or at some special sessions to be appointed by them so assembled as aforesaid which shall be holden on or before the last day of October in the then present year, were empowered to divide their respective counties, and ridings, parts, and divisions of counties, into convenient districts for polling, and assign one of such districts to every polling place mentioned in the said schedule marked (N.) to this act annexed; and that a list describing the districts named in every such assignment, and naming the polling places to which such districts were respectively assigned, should be lodged with the clerk of the peace of the county, riding, or parts, who should forthwith cause copies of such list to be printed, and deliver a copy of such list to every person applying for the same, upon payment of one shilling for each copy."

Polling districts for counties to be settled by justices.

By sect. 31, "for the purpose of assigning such districts to every polling place as aforesaid, every liberty, franchise, and place having a separate or exclusive jurisdiction shall be considered as being within that county, and within that division, riding, or parts, in which such liberty, franchise, or place is placed by this act, or by the act hereinbefore recited, or in which the same is locally situated: provided nevertheless, that the justices of the peace for the Isle of Ely, assembled at the quarter sessions for the said Isle of Ely to be holden in the month of October in the then present year, or at some special sessions to be appointed by them, so assembled as aforesaid, which should be holden on or before the last day of October in the then present year, should divide the said Isle of Ely into convenient districts for polling, and assign one of such districts to every polling place within the said Isle of Ely mentioned in the said schedule (N.); and that a list, describing the districts named in such assignment, and naming the polling places to which such districts are respectively assigned, should be lodged with the clerk of the peace for the said Isle of Ely, who should allow the same, or a copy thereof, to be inspected at his office at all times."

In what counties, &c. places having separate jurisdiction are to be considered.

By sect. 32, "the poll for the election of members to serve in parliament for the said several boroughs of New Shoreham, Cricklade, Aylesbury, and Polling places for New Shoreham, &c.

East Retford, shall be taken at the place or places which in the schedule to this act annexed marked (N. 2) is or mentioned in conjunction with the names of such several boroughs respectively."

By sect. 33, "the justices of the peace for the respective counties in which the boroughs of New Shoreham, Cricklade, and East Retford are situated, at the quarter sessions to be holden in the month of October in the then present year, were empowered to divide the said boroughs of New Shoreham, Cricklade, and East Retford into convenient districts for polling, and assign one of such districts to every polling place for the said boroughs of New Shoreham, Cricklade, and East Retford, mentioned in the said schedule to this act annexed marked (N. 2); and a list describing the districts named in such assignment, and naming the polling places to which such districts are respectively assigned, to be lodged with the returning officer of the respective borough, who is forthwith to cause copies of such list to be printed, and to be fixed on the doors of the several churches and chapels within the borough for which such districts are assigned."

By sect. 34, "if it shall seem fit to the sheriff, the court for the election of knights of the shire may be held, or the poll may be taken, at any place or spot in the neighbourhood of any place appointed by this act for holding such court or taking such poll respectively, at which such court or poll may have heretofore been held or taken, or which may be convenient for either of those purposes; any thing herein contained notwithstanding."

By sect. 35, reciting that by the 2 Wil. IV. c. 46, "it is also provided that each of the places enumerated in the schedules thereto annexed respectively marked (C.), (D.), and (E.), and that every city and borough in England which before the passing of the said recited act was entitled to return a member or members to serve in parliament, (except the several boroughs enumerated in the schedule thereto annexed marked (A.), and except the several boroughs of New Shoreham, Cricklade, Aylesbury, and East Retford,) and that the borough of Brecon, and each of the towns of Swansea, Loughor, Neath, Aberavon, and Kenfig, should, for the purposes of the said recited act, include the place or places respectively which should be comprehended within such boundaries as should be settled and described by an act to be passed for that purpose in this present parliament, which act when passed should be deemed and taken to be part of the said recited act as fully and effectually as if incorporated therewith: and whereas the act so to be passed for settling and describing the boundaries of cities, boroughs, and places as in the said recited act is mentioned is this present act: and whereas the several cities, boroughs, and places whereof the boundaries were so to be settled and described as in the said recited act is mentioned are the several cities, boroughs, and places which are specified in the schedule to this act annexed marked (O.); be it therefore further enacted and declared, that the several cities, boroughs, and places specified in the said schedule to this act annexed marked (O.) shall, as to the election of members or a member to serve in parliament, respectively include the places and be comprised within the boundaries which in such schedule are respectively specified and described in conjunction with the names of such cities, boroughs, and places respectively."

By sect. 36, "the following rules shall be observed in the construction of the several descriptions of boundaries contained in the said schedule hereto annexed marked (O.); (that is to say,)

"1.—That the words 'northward,' 'southward,' 'eastward,' 'westward,' shall respectively be understood to denote only the general direction in which any boundary proceeds from the point last described, and not that such boundary shall continue to proceed throughout in the same direction to the point next described:

"2.—That when any road is mentioned merely by the name of the place to which such road leads, the principal road thither from the city, borough, or place of which the boundary is in course of description shall be understood:

"3.—That whenever a line is said to be drawn from, to, or through an object, such line shall, in the absence of any direction to the contrary, be understood to be drawn from, to, or through the centre of such object, as nearly as the centre thereof can be ascertained : (20.) Division of Counties, &c.

- “ 4.—That every building through which or through any part whereof any boundary hereby established shall pass, shall be considered as within such boundary: provided always, that if the boundaries of any two or more of the cities, boroughs, and places whereof the contents and boundaries are hereby settled and described shall pass through the same building or any part thereof, such building shall be considered as within that one of such two or more of the said cities, boroughs, and places which was before the passing of the hereinbefore recited act entitled to return members or a member to serve in parliament, or if neither or more than one of such two or more of the said cities, boroughs, and places shall have been so entitled, then within that one of them whereof the area is hereby established is the smallest :
- “ 5.—That whenever any boundary by this act established is said to pass along any other boundary, or along any road, lane, path, river, stream, canal, drain, brook, or ditch, the middle (as nearly as the same can be ascertained) of such other boundary, or of such road, lane, path, river, stream, canal, drain, brook, or ditch, shall be understood :
- “ 6.—That the middle of any road or lane shall be understood as the middle of the carriageway along the same :
- “ 7.—That when any boundary by this act established is said to proceed along a road, lane, path, river, stream, canal, or drain, from or to an object, such boundary shall be understood to proceed from or to that point in the middle of such road, lane, path, river, stream, canal, or drain from which the shortest line would be drawn to the centre of such object, as nearly as the centre thereof can be ascertained :
- “ 8.—That the point at which any fence, hedge, wall, boundary, road, lane, path, river, stream, canal, drain, brook, or ditch is said to cut, meet, join, cross, reach, or leave any fence, hedge, wall, boundary, road, lane, path, river, stream, canal, drain, brook, or ditch, shall be understood as that point at which a line passing along the middle of the fence, hedge, wall, boundary, road, lane, path, river, stream, canal, drain, brook, or ditch so cut, met, joined, crossed, reached, or left, would be intersected by a line drawn along the middle of the fence, hedge, wall, boundary, road, lane, path, river, stream, canal, drain, brook, or ditch so cutting, meeting, joining, crossing, reaching, or leaving, if such line were prolonged sufficiently far :
- “ 9.—That when a line is said to be drawn to a road, lane, river, stream, or canal, such line shall be considered as prolonged to the middle of such road, lane, river, stream, or canal :
- “ 10.—That by the words ‘sea’ and ‘sea-coast,’ shall be understood the low-water mark :
- “ 11.—That if any deficiency shall be found to exist in the line of any boundary described in the said schedule to this act annexed marked (O.), by reason of the intervention of any space between any two immediately consecutive points, such deficiency shall be supplied by a straight line to be drawn from the one to the other of such two immediately consecutive points.”

By sect. 37, “notwithstanding the generality of any description contained in the said schedule to this act annexed marked (O.), no city, borough, or place, the contents whereof are specified in such schedule, shall include any part of any parish, township, hamlet, chapelry, tithing, manor, or liberty which is detached from the main body of such parish, township, hamlet, chapelry, tithing, manor, or liberty, if, by reason of including such detached part, the boundary hereby established of such city, borough or place would not be continuous, unless such detached part shall, before the passing of this act, have formed part of such city, borough, or place for the purpose of the election of members to serve in parliament; but that all places, parochial or extra-parochial, which are surrounded by the contents of which any city, borough, or place is said in such schedule marked (O.) to consist, but for which no provision is made in such schedule (O.), shall be considered as included within such city, borough, or place, for the purpose of the election of members to serve in parliament."

By sect. 38, "no misnomer or inaccurate description contained in this act, or in any of the schedules hereto annexed, shall in anywise prevent or abridge the operation of this act with respect to the subject of such description, provided the same shall be so designated as to be commonly understood; and that for the purpose of identifying the descriptions contained in the said schedule (O.) with the subjects of such descriptions respectively, such descriptions shall, if now inapplicable, be held to apply to such subjects as they existed on the first day of October one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one."

Parliament.

Indictment on 2
Wil. IV. c. 45, s.
19, against a voter for giving a false answer at an election.

— (venue) to wit. The jurors for our Lord the King upon their oath pre- sent, that heretofore, to wit, on the day of , in the year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord the now King William the Fourth, at a certain election for members to serve in parliament for the county of , to wit, at the parish of in the county aforesaid, C. D., late of the parish afore- said in the county aforesaid, labourer, then and there appeared as a voter at the said election, and then and there tendered his vote as such voter; and that one C. D. a deputy of E. F. (which said E. F. was then and there the returning officer at the said election) did then and there, at the time of the said C. D. so tendering his said vote as aforesaid, put to the said C. D. (being thereunto required by and on behalf of M. P., who was then and there a candidate at the said elec- tion,) the following question, that is to say, "Are you the same person whose name appears as A. B. on the register of voters now in force in the county of (—)," to which question the said C. D. then and there unlawfully and wil- fully did falsely answer ("Yes"): Whereas in truth and in fact the said C. D. was not the person whose name then and there appeared as A. B. on the register of voters then in force for the said county, but then and there was ano- ther and different person: against the form of the statute in such case made and provided, and against the peace of our Lord the King, his crown and dignity. [If a false answer be given to another of the questions, insert another count to meet it.]

Pauper.

A DEFENDANT in a criminal proceeding is entitled to defend in formâ pauperis, if the court will allow it. (R. v. Wright, Rep. T. Hard. 211; Com. Dig., Formâ Pauperis; Vin. Ab. Paupers; 1 Chit. C. L. 412; Rex v. Page, 1 Dowl. P. C. 507.) The defendant should in support of the appli- cation make an affidavit that he is not worth 5*l.* in the world, his wearing apparel only excepted.

By the 2 Geo. III. c. 28, s. 8, a person arrested on a capias or informa- tion relating to the customs, upon making affidavit that he is not worth 5*l.* exclusive of his wearing apparel, may, at the discretion of such judge, be admitted to defend as a pauper, with the same privileges as those who may sue in this manner for the recovery of civil rights.

The mode for the party defending, to obtain this benefit, is by making an affidavit before the judge or a commissioner of the court, under the last- mentioned act, that he is not worth 5*l.*, and then to petition to have a particular counsel and clerk assigned him. (Vin. Ab. Paupers, B.; 1 Chit. C. L. 413.)

An order cannot be made at the judge's chambers in vacation, for leave to prosecute in formâ pauperis: the order must be obtained in court. (R. v. Cresswell, 1 Chit. C. L. 413.)

When this admission is granted, it prevents the officers of the court from taking fees, as well as those who are assigned to conduct the cause on the motion of the defendant. (Hullock, 228, n. 1.)

Partition.

8 & 9 W. 3, c. 31.

BY the 8 & 9 Wil. III. c. 31, intituled "An Act for the easier obtaining Partitions of Lands in Coparcenary, Joint-tenancy, and Tenancy in com- mon," it is enacted, that if the high sheriff cannot conveniently be present at the execution of any judgment in partition, in such case the under- sheriff, in presence of two justices, may proceed to execution of the writ of partition.

Pawning.

[1 Jac. I. c. 21; 30 Geo. II. c. 24; 25 Geo. III. c. 48; 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 99; 55 Geo. III. c. 184; 5 Geo. IV. c. 107; 9 Geo. IV. c. 49.]

BY the 25 Geo. III. c. 48, s. 1, 3, 4, 12, every person exercising the trade of a pawnbroker shall take out a license, and shall renew the same annually, ten days at least before the end of the year, on pain of forfeiting 50*l.*; to be recovered in the courts at Westminster. License.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 49, s. 12, pawnbrokers' licenses are to expire annually, on the 31st of July.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 184, sch. part. 1, upon every license to be taken out yearly for using or exercising the trade or business of a pawnbroker, within the cities of London and Westminster, or within the limits of the two-penny post, there shall be paid a duty of 15*l.*

And for using or exercising the trade or business of a pawnbroker, elsewhere, 7*l.* 10*s.*

Sect. 3. The said duties to be under the management of the commissioners of the stamp duties.

By the 25 Geo. III. c. 48, s. 7 & 8, no person shall keep more than one house or shop by virtue of one license; but persons in partnership need only take out one license for one house. One house only under one license.

Sect. 5. All persons who shall receive, by way of pawn, pledge or exchange, any goods for the repayment of money lent thereon, shall be deemed pawnbrokers. Who deemed pawnbrokers.

Sect. 6. But the same shall not extend to any person who shall lend money at 5*l.* per cent. interest, without taking any further or greater profit for the loan thereof. See also 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 99, s. 30, post, 150. Not persons lending at 5 per cent.

The 36 Geo. III. c. 87, being in force only for three years, and till the end of the then next session of parliament, the 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 99, was substituted in lieu thereof. The latter act is intituled "An Act for better regulating the Business of Pawnbrokers," and s. 2 enacts "That it shall be Rate of profit to be taken.

lawful for all persons using and exercising the trade or business of a pawnbroker, to demand, receive, and take of and from all and every person and persons applying or offering to redeem any goods or chattels pawned or pledged with such pawnbroker, a profit, after the following rates, over and above the principal sum and sums which shall have been lent and advanced upon the respective pledge or pledges, before any such pawnbroker shall be obliged to re-deliver the same; (videlicet,) Pawnbrokers allowed to take certain rates.

39 & 40 G. 3, c. 99.

Rates.

For every pledge upon which there shall have been lent any sum not exceeding two shillings and sixpence, the sum of one halfpenny for any time during which the said pledge shall remain in pawn not exceeding one calendar month, and the same for every calendar month afterwards, including the current month in which such pledge shall be redeemed, although such month shall not be expired :

For every pledge upon which there shall have been lent the sum of five shillings, one penny :

For every pledge upon which there shall have been lent seven shillings and sixpence, one penny halfpenny :

For every pledge upon which there shall have been lent ten shillings, twopence :

For every pledge upon which there shall have been lent twelve shillings and sixpence, twopence halfpenny :

For every pledge upon which there shall have been lent fifteen shillings, threepence :

For every pledge upon which there shall have been lent seventeen shillings and sixpence, threepence halfpenny :

For every pledge upon which there shall have been lent one pound, fourpence; and so on progressively and in proportion for any sum not exceeding forty shillings :

For every pledge upon which there shall have been lent any sum of money exceeding forty shillings, and not exceeding forty-two shillings, eightpence :

And for every pledge upon which there shall have been lent any sum exceeding forty-two shillings and not exceeding ten pounds, at and after the rate of threepence and no more (a) for the loan of every twenty shillings for all such money so lent, by the calendar month, including the current month; and so in proportion for any fractional sum :

Which said several sums shall be taken in lieu of and as a full satisfaction for all interest due, and charges for warehouse-room."

Rate when the intermediate sum lent exceeds 2s. 6d. but does not exceed 40s.

Sect. 3. "In all cases where any intermediate sum, lent upon any pawn or pledge, shall exceed the sum of two shillings and sixpence, and not exceed the sum of forty shillings, the person lending the same shall and may take, by way of profit as aforesaid, at and after the rate of fourpence and no more, for the loan of twenty shillings by the calendar month, including the current month as aforesaid."

Pawnbrokers to give farthings in change.

Sect. 4, "In all cases where the sum to be demanded, received, and taken, by any pawnbroker or pawnbrokers, his, her, or their servant or agent, of and from any person or persons applying or offering to redeem any goods or chattels, pawned or pledged with such pawnbroker or pawnbrokers, either as profit upon any sum lent, or as part principal and part profit, shall amount to a total sum, of which the piece of money of the lowest denomination shall be one farthing; and where the person or persons so applying, or offering to redeem such goods or chattels, shall have paid down the sum due for such principal and profit, or for such profit only (as the case may be),

(a) The taking a greater rate subjects the pawnbroker to the penalties imposed by s. 26, post, 148; and the allowance of the specified rates is not merely a dispensation from the law of usury. (R. v. Beard, 12 East, 673; post, 148.) In Cowie v. Harris, it was held that, if a pawnbroker, upon one contract or bargain of loan, advance more than 10*l.*, viz. 100*l.*, and pretend to divide the same as if there were ten different loans, and for that purpose gives several tickets, dated on different days, the transaction is a mere contrivance to conceal usury, and is illegal and void. (1 Moody & M., C. N. P. 141.)

Where a pawnbroker advanced 200*l.* to a trader in distress, upon a deposit of silks, and entered the transaction in his books as several advances, each of less than 10*l.*, but amounting in the whole to 200*l.* The trader having become bankrupt, and his assignee having sued in trover for the silks, the Court refused to disturb a verdict found for the plaintiff, upon a direction to the jury, to find whether the goods had been deposited on a contract to pay more than 5*l. per cent.* interest. (Tregoning v. Attenborough, 7 Bing. 97; 4 M. & P. 722, S. C.) except the last remaining farthing, and shall not be able to produce and pay to such pawnbroker or pawnbrokers, his, her, or their servant or agent, a current farthing, and which shall be to the satisfaction and liking of such person or persons to receive the same, but shall, in lieu thereof, tender to such person or persons to receive the same one halfpenny, in order to discharge the said remaining farthing so due as aforesaid, the said pawnbroker or pawnbrokers, his, her, or their servant or agent, to whom such tender of a halfpenny for such purpose as aforesaid shall be made, shall, in exchange thereof, deliver unto such person or persons so redeeming goods as aforesaid, one good and lawful farthing, of the current coin of this kingdom, or in default thereof, shall wholly abate the said remaining farthing from the total sum to be received by him or them, of such person or persons so redeeming goods or chattels as aforesaid."

Sect. 5, "In all cases where the party or parties entitled to, and applying for the redemption of goods, pawned within the space of seven days after the expiration of the first calendar month, after the same shall have been pledged, he, she, or they shall and may be at liberty to redeem the same, without paying any thing by way of profit to the pawnbroker for the said seven days, or such part thereof as shall then have elapsed; and that, in all cases where the party or parties so entitled, and applying as aforesaid, after the expiration of the said first seven days, and before the expiration of the first fourteen days of the second calendar month, he, she, or they shall and may be at liberty to redeem such goods, upon paying the profit payable for one calendar month, and the half of another calendar month, to the pawnbroker; but that, in all cases where the party or parties so entitled and applying as aforesaid, after the expiration of the said first fourteen days, and before the expiration of the said second calendar month, it shall be lawful for the pawnbroker to demand and take the profit of the whole second month; and that the like regulation and restriction shall take place, and be in force, in every subsequent calendar month, wherein application shall be made for redeeming goods pawned."

Limiting the profits for part of a month.

Sect. 6. "All and every person and persons who, from and after the commencement of this act, shall take, by way of pawn or pledge, of or from any person or persons whomsoever, any goods or chattels, of what kind soever the same shall be, and whereon shall be lent any sum of money exceeding five shillings, shall forthwith, and before he, she, or they shall or may advance or lend any money upon such pawn or pledge, enter, or cause to be entered, in a fair and regular manner, in a book or books, to be kept by him, her, or them, for that purpose, a description of the goods or chattels which he, she, or they shall receive in pawn, pledge, or exchange, and also the sum of money to be advanced or lent thereon, with the day of the month and year on which, and the name of the person or persons by whom such goods or chattels are so pawned, pledged, or exchanged, and the name of the street and number of the house, if the same shall be said to be numbered, where such person shall abide, and whether such person or persons is or are a lodger in or the keeper of such house, by using the letter "L" if a lodger, and the letter "H" if a housekeeper, and also the name and place of abode of the owner or owners of such goods and chattels, according to the information of the person pawning, pledging, or exchanging the same; into all which circumstances the pawnbroker is hereby required to inquire of the party pawning, before any money shall be lent or advanced. And, in all cases where the money lent on any such goods or chattels shall not exceed the sum of five shillings, such entry shall be made in such book or books by all and every such person and persons so taking the same by way of pawn, pledge, or exchange, as aforesaid, within four hours next after the said goods and chattels shall have been so pawned, pledged, or exchanged, as aforesaid; and every pledge upon which shall be lent any sum of money above ten shillings shall be entered in the manner aforesaid in a book or books, to be kept for that purpose, separate and apart from all other pledges whatever; and every such entry of such pledge whereon shall be lent any sum of money exceeding ten shillings, shall be numbered in such book or books progres-

Sect. 7. "In all cases where any goods or chattels pawned or pledged shall be redeemed, the pawnbroker, of whom the same shall be redeemed, shall, at the time of such redemption, fairly and legibly write or indorse, or cause to be written or indorsed, upon every duplicate respecting such pawn or pledge, the amount of the profit taken by him, or on his account, on the money lent upon such goods or chattels so redeemed, and shall keep such duplicate in his custody for the space of one year then next following."

Penalty against unlawfully pawn-ing goods, the property of others(a);

Sect. 8. "If any person or persons shall knowingly and designedly pawn, pledge, or exchange, or unlawfully dispose of the goods or chattels of any other person or persons, not being employed or authorized by the owner or owners thereof so to do, it shall be lawful for any justice to grant his warrant to apprehend any person so offending; and, if he, she, or they, shall be thereof convicted, by the oath of any credible witness or witnesses, or by the confession of the person or persons charged with such offence,

Sect. 10. "In case any person or persons, who shall offer by way of pawn, pledge, exchange, or sale, any goods or chattels, shall not be able, or shall refuse to give a satisfactory account of himself, herself, or themselves, or of the means by which he, she, or they became possessed of such goods or chattels, or shall wilfully give any false information to the pawnbroker, or to his or her servant or servants, as to whether such goods or chattels are his, her, or their own property or not, or of his or her name and place of abode, or of the name and place of abode of the owner or owners of the said goods or chattels, or if there shall be any other reason to suspect that such goods or chattels are stolen, or otherwise illegally or clandestinely obtained, or if any person or persons not entitled, nor having any colour of title by law to redeem goods or chattels in pledge or pawn, shall attempt or endeavour to redeem the same, it shall be lawful for any person or persons, his, her, or their servants or agents, to whom such goods or chattels shall be so offered, or with whom such goods or chattels are in pledge, to seize and detain such person or persons, and the said goods or chattels, and to deliver such person or persons immediately into the custody of a constable or other peace officer, who shall and is hereby required, as soon as may be, to convey such person or persons, and the said goods or chattels so offered, before some justice or justices of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, wherein the offence shall be supposed to have been committed; and if such justice or justices shall, upon examination and inquiry, have cause to suspect that the said goods or chattels were stolen, or illegally or clandestinely obtained, or that the person or persons offering and endeavouring to redeem the same shall not have any pretence or colour of right to redeem the same, it shall be lawful for such justice or justices to commit such person or persons into safe custody, for such reasonable time as shall be necessary for the obtaining proper information on the subject, in order to be further examined; and if, upon either of the said examinations, it shall appear to the satisfaction of such justice or justices that the said goods or chattels were stolen, or illegally or clandestinely obtained, or that the person or persons offering or endeavouring to redeem the same hath or have not any pretence or colour of right so to do, the said justice or justices is and are hereby authorized and required to commit the party or parties offending to the common gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, division, city, liberty, town, or place, wherein the offence shall be committed, there to be dealt with according to law, where the nature of the offence shall authorize such commitment by any other law; and where the nature of the offence shall not authorize such commitment by any other law, then such commitment shall be for any time not exceeding three calendar months, at the discretion of such justice or justices."

Persons buying or taking in pledge unfinished goods or linen, or apparel intrusted to others to wash or mend, to forfeit double the sum lent, and restore the goods. [And see 30 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 6.]

Sect. 11. "If any person or persons shall knowingly buy or take in as a pledge or pawn, or in exchange, any goods of any manufacture, or of any part or branch of any manufacture, either mixed or separate, or any materials whatsoever, plainly intended for the composing or manufacturing of any goods, after such goods or materials respectively are put into a state or course of manufacture, or into a state for any process or operation to be thereupon or therewith performed, and before such goods or materials are completed or finished for the purposes of wear or consumption, or any linen or apparel, which goods, materials, linen, or apparel are or shall be intrusted to any person or persons to wash, scour, iron, mend, manufacture, work up, finish, or make up, and shall be convicted of the same, on the oath of one credible witness, or on confession of the party or parties, before one or more justice or justices, every such person or persons shall forfeit double the sum given for or lent on the same, to be paid to the poor of the parish where the offence is committed, to be recovered in the same manner as any other forfeitures are by this act directed to be recovered, and shall likewise be obliged to restore the said goods and materials to the owner or owners thereof, in the presence of the said justice or justices."

Sect. 12. 39 & 40 G. 3, c. 99. the commencement of this act, any person or persons who shall at any time produce any such note or memorandum as aforesaid, to the person or persons with whom the goods therein specified were pawned or pledged, as the owner thereof, or as authorized by the owner thereof, to redeem the same, and require a delivery of the goods or chattels mentioned therein, to him, her, or them, such person or persons shall be, and is and are hereby deemed and taken to be, so far as respects the person or persons having such goods and chattels in pledge, the real owner and owners, proprietor and proprietors, of such goods and chattels, and the person or persons so using the said trade and business of a pawnbroker shall be, and is and are hereby directed and required, after receiving satisfaction pursuant to the provisions of this act, respecting principal and profit, to deliver such goods and chattels to the person or persons who shall so produce the said note or memorandum to him, her, or them, and shall be, and is and are hereby indemnified for so doing, unless he, she, or they shall have had previous notice from the real owner or owners thereof not to deliver the same to the person or persons producing such note, or unless notice shall have been given to him, her, or them, that the goods and chattels pawned have been, or are suspected to have been, fraudulently or feloniously taken or obtained, and unless the real owner or owners thereof proceeds or proceed, in manner hereinafter provided and directed for the redeeming of goods and chattels pledged, where such note hath been lost, mislaid, destroyed, or fraudulently obtained from the owner or owners thereof."

Where notes or memorandums lost, pawnbroker to deliver a copy.

Sect. 16. "In case any pawnbroker shall have had such previous notice as aforesaid, or in case any such note or memorandum as aforesaid shall be lost, mislaid, destroyed, or fraudulently obtained from the owner or owners thereof, and the goods and chattels mentioned therein shall remain unredeemed, that then and in every such case the pawnbroker or pawnbrokers with whom the said goods and chattels were so pledged, shall, at the request and application of any person or persons who shall represent himself, herself, or themselves to the pawnbroker as the owner or owners of the goods and chattels in pledge as aforesaid, deliver to such person or persons so requesting and applying for the same, a copy of the note or memorandum so lost, mislaid, destroyed, or fraudulently obtained as aforesaid, with the form of an affidavit of the particular circumstances attending the case, printed or written, or in part printed and in part written, on the said copy, as the same shall be stated to him or her by the party applying as aforesaid, for which copy of such note or memorandum, and form of affidavit, in case the money lent shall not exceed the sum of five shillings, the pawnbroker shall receive the sum of one halfpenny; and in case the money lent shall exceed the sum of five shillings, and not exceed the sum of ten shillings, the pawnbroker shall receive the sum of one penny; and in case the money lent shall exceed the sum of ten shillings, the pawnbroker shall receive the like sum of money as he is entitled to receive and take on giving the original note or memorandum, such money to be paid by the party applying for the same at the time of making the said application; and the person or persons having so obtained such copy of the note or memorandum, and form of affidavit as aforesaid, shall thereupon prove his, her, or their property in, or right to, such goods and chattels, to the satisfaction of some justice of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, town, liberty, or place, where the said goods or chattels shall have been pledged, pawned, or exchanged, and shall also verify, on oath or affirmation, as the case may be, before the said justice, the truth of the particular circumstances attending the case mentioned in such affidavit or affirmation to be made as aforesaid, the caption of such oath or affirmation to be authenticated by the hand-writing thereto of the justice before whom the same shall be made, and who shall, and is hereby required, so to authenticate the same; whereupon the pawnbroker shall suffer the person or persons proving such property to the satisfaction of such justice as aforesaid, and making such affidavit or affirmation as aforesaid, on leaving such copy of the said note or memorandum, and the said affidavit or affirmation, with the said pawnbroker, to redeem such goods or chattels."

Sect. 17. "All goods and chattels which shall be pawned or pledged shall be deemed forfeited, and may be sold, at the expiration of one whole year, exclusive of the day whereon the goods and chattels were so pawned as aforesaid; and all goods and chattels so forfeited, on which any sum above ten shillings, and not exceeding ten pounds, shall have been lent, shall be sold by public auction, and not otherwise, by the order of the person having the same in pawn, at and after the expiration of the said year; but the person employed to sell such goods and chattels by auction shall, and he is hereby required to cause the same to be exposed to public view, and catalogues thereof to be published, containing the name and place of abode of the pawnbroker, and also the month such goods were received in pawn; and the number of every such pledge as entered in the book or books kept for that purpose, at the time the same were pawned, and an advertisement, giving notice of such sale, and containing the name or names and place of abode of the pawnbroker or pawnbrokers with whom the said goods or chattels were in pledge, and also the month such goods were received in pawn, to be inserted two several days in some public newspapers, two days at least before the first day of sale; and the goods and chattels pledged with every pawnbroker shall be inserted in every catalogue, separate and apart from each other, upon pain of forfeiting to the owner or owners of the said goods and chattels, for every offence in the premises, any sum not exceeding ten pounds, nor less than forty shillings."

Pawned goods deemed forfeited at the end of a year. Pledges above 10s. to be sold by auction (a).

Sect. 18. "All pictures, prints, books, bronzes, statues, busts, carvings in ivory and marble, cameos, intaglieos, musical, mathematical, and philosophical instruments, and china, which shall be sold by public auction as aforesaid, shall be sold by themselves, and without other goods being sold at such sale, four times only in every year (that is to say) on the first Monday in the months of January, April, July, and October, in every year, and on the following day and days, if the sale shall exceed one day, and at no other time; and the person who shall be employed to sell the same by auction shall, and he is hereby required to cause the same to be exposed to public view, and catalogues thereof to be published, and an advertisement giving notice of such sale, and containing the name or names of the pawnbroker or pawnbrokers with whom the said goods were in pledge, to be inserted two several days in some public newspaper, three days at the least before the first day of sale, upon pain of forfeiting to the owner or owners of the said goods, for every offence in the premises, any sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than forty shillings."

Pictures, prints, books, statues, &c. shall only be sold four times in a year, &c.

Sect. 19. "In case any person or persons entitled to redeem goods or chattels in pledge, shall, before or upon the expiration of the said one year from the time of pawning the same, give notice in writing, or in the presence of one witness, to the person or persons having the same in pledge, or leave the same at his, her, or their usual place of abode, not to sell the same at the end of the said one year, then, and in every such case, such goods or chattels shall not be sold or disposed of by the person or persons having the same in pledge until after the expiration of three calendar months, to be computed from the expiration of the said year, during which said term of three calendar months the owner or owners of the said goods and chattels shall have liberty to redeem the same, upon the terms stipulated and provided by this act."

On notice from persons having goods in pledge not to sell, three months further allowed beyond the year for redemption (a).

Sect. 20. "All and every person or persons with whom any goods or chattels shall have been pawned or pledged, shall from time to time enter in a book or books, to be kept by him, her, or them for that purpose, a true and just account of the sale of all goods and chattels pawned with him, her, or them, for upwards of ten shillings (b), which shall be sold as aforesaid,

Account of sales of pledges above 10s. to be entered by the pawnbrokers in a book;

(a) A pawnbroker has no right to sell unredeemed pledges after the expiration of the year, if the original owner tender the principal and interest due before actual sale. (Walter v. Smith, 5 B. & Ald. 439; 1 D. & R. 1, S. C.) (b) A very unfair advantage has been generally taken by pawnbrokers of

39 & 40 G. 3, c. 99. expressing the day of the month when such goods were pledged, and the name of the person pledging the same, according to the entry made at the time of receiving the same in pawn; and also the day when, and the money for which, such goods or chattels pawned were sold, together with the name and place of abode of the auctioneer by whom the same were sold, according to the information thereof from the auctioneer; and in case any such goods or chattels shall be sold for more than the principal money and profit aforesaid due thereon at the time of such sale, the overplus shall, by every such pawnbroker, be paid, on demand, to the person by whom or on whose account such goods or chattels were pawned, his, her, or their executors, administrators, or assigns, in case such demand shall be made within three years after such sale, the necessary costs and charges of such sale being first deducted; and such person or persons who pawned or pledged such goods or chattels, or for whom such goods or chattels were so pawned or pledged, his, her, or their executors, administrators, or assigns, shall, for his, her, or their satisfaction in this matter, be permitted to inspect the entry to be made as aforesaid of every such sale, paying for such inspection the sum of one penny and no more; and in case any person or persons shall refuse to permit any such person or persons who pawned or pledged such goods or chattels, or who is or are entitled to such overplus money, to inspect such entry as aforesaid in any such book or books, (such person or persons, if an executor or executors, administrator or administrators, or assignee or assignees, at such time producing his, her, or their letters testamentary, letters of administration or assignment,) or in case the goods or chattels were sold for more than the sum entered in any such book or books, or if any such person or persons shall not make such entry as aforesaid, or shall not have bonâ fide, according to the directions of this act, sold the same, or shall refuse to pay such overplus, upon demand, to the pawner or pawners, owner or owners, his, her, or their executors, administrators, or assigns, (he, she, or they producing such their letters testamentary, letters of administration or assignment,) every such person or persons so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of ten pounds, and treble the sum such goods and chattels shall originally have been pawned for, to the person or persons by whom or on whose account such goods and chattels were pawned, his, her, or their executors, administrators, or assigns, to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, by warrant under the hands and seals of any two justices of the peace for the county, riding, division, city, town, liberty, or place, where the offence shall be committed."

and overplus paid to owner of goods pawned or sold, &c.

on penalty of 10*l*. and treble the sum lent on pawn.

Pawnbroker shall not purchase goods while in his custody.

Pledges not to be taken from persons under twelve years of age or intoxicated.

Sect. 21. "No person or persons having any goods or chattels in pledge, shall, under any pretence whatsoever, either by himself or herself, or by any other person for him or her, purchase any such goods or chattels so being in pledge with him or her, during the time the same shall remain in his or her custody as such pledge, save and except at such public auction as aforesaid, nor shall suffer the same to be redeemed with a view or intention to purchase the same; nor shall any such person taking or having any goods or chattels in pledge, make or cause to be made any contract or agreement with any person or persons offering to pledge or pledging the same, or with the owner or owners of the pledge, for the purchase, sale, or disposition of the said goods and chattels before the expiration of one whole year from the time of pawning or pledging the same; nor shall any pawnbroker purchase or receive or take any goods or chattels in pledge of or from any person or persons who shall appear to be under the age of twelve years, or to be intoxicated with liquor; or purchase or take in pawn, pledge, or exchange the note or memorandum aforesaid of any other pawnbroker; nor buy any goods or chattels in the course of his, her, or their trade or business, before

39 & 40 G. 3, c. 99.
Hours of buying goods or taking in pawn limited.

Sect. 22. "All and every person and persons who shall follow and carry on the trade and business of a pawnbroker, shall cause to be painted or printed, in large legible characters, the rate of profit allowed by this act to be taken by him, her, or them, and also the various prices of the notes or memorandums to be given by him, her, or them, according to the rates aforesaid, and an account of what notes or memorandums are to be delivered gratis, and of the expense of obtaining a second note or memorandum where the former one has been lost, mislaid, destroyed, or fraudulently obtained, and place the same in a conspicuous part or parts of the shop or other place wherein he, she, or they shall carry on such trade or business, so as to be visible to and legible by the persons pledging goods and chattels standing in the several boxes or places provided for such persons coming to pawn or redeem goods and chattels at such shop."

Pawnbrokers to place in view the table of profits, &c.

Sect. 23. "For the better manifesting by whom the trade or business of a pawnbroker shall hereafter be carried on," enacts that "all and every person or persons who shall follow or carry on the trade or business of a pawnbroker, shall cause to be painted or written, in large legible characters, over the door of each shop or other place by him, her, or them respectively made use of for carrying on that trade or business, the Christian and surname (a) or names of the person or persons so carrying on the said trade or business, and the word 'Pawnbroker,' or 'Pawnbrokers,' as the case may be, following the same, upon pain of forfeiting the sum of ten pounds for every shop or place which shall be so made use of for the space of one week without having such name or names, and the said word, so painted or written as aforesaid, to be recovered by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, by warrant under the hands and seals of any two justices of the peace acting within the respective county, riding, division, city, town, liberty, or place (which warrant such justices are hereby authorized and required to grant), upon the confession of the party or parties, or upon the information of any credible witness or witnesses, upon oath or affirmation, as the case may be; and in case sufficient distress shall not be found, or such penalty shall not be forthwith paid, it shall be lawful for such justices, and they are hereby required by warrant under their hands and seals, to cause the offender or offenders to be committed to the county gaol or house of correction, there to remain without bail or mainprize, for any time not exceeding three calendar months, nor less than fourteen days,

Pawnbroker's names and business to be placed over his door on penalty of 10*l.* &c. (a).

Distress.

Commitment.

(a) Two persons carried on the business of pawnbrokers under a deed of partnership. The business was conducted solely in the name of one, and his name only appeared over the shop door, and on the printed tickets and duplicates used by pawnbrokers; and the person who conducted the business only was licensed. The court it seems were of opinion, that although the parties might have made themselves liable to the penalty imposed by the above enactment, and

s. 26, yet that it being no part of the contract to carry on the partnership in such manner as to contravene the law, the contract was not void. Armstrong v. Lewis, 2 C. & M. 274; 4 M. & Scott, 1, S. C. In another case, however, the Court of Chancery held that an agreement for a secret partnership, is a contravention of the laws regulating the business of a pawnbroker, and that no legal partnership was constituted thereby. (Armstrong v. Armstrong, 3 Mylne & K. 45.)

39 & 40 G. 3, c. 99. unless the said penalty, and all reasonable charges, shall be sooner paid and satisfied."

Pawnbrokers selling goods before limited time, or injuring them, &c., shall make a reasonable satisfaction on penalty of 10*l*.

Sect. 24. "If in the course of any proceedings before any justice or justices of the peace in pursuance of or under this act, it shall appear, or be proved to the satisfaction of the justice or justices upon oath or solemn affirmation, that any of the goods and chattels pawned as aforesaid have been sold before the time allowed by this act, or otherwise than according to the directions of this act, or have been embezzled or lost (a), or are become or have been rendered of less value than the same were at the time of pawning or pledging thereof, by or through the default, neglect, or wilful misbehaviour (b) of the person or persons by whom the same were so pledged or pawned, his, her, or their executors, administrators, or assigns, agents or servants, then and in any such case it shall be lawful for every such justice and justices, and he and they is and are hereby required, to allow and award a reasonable satisfaction to the owner or owners of such goods or chattels in respect thereof, or of such damage; and the sum or sums of money so allowed or awarded, in case the same shall not amount to the principal and profit aforesaid, which shall appear to be due to any person or persons with whom the same were so pledged or pawned, his, her, or their executors, administrators, or assigns, shall be deducted out of the said principal and profit; and in all cases where the goods and chattels pawned as aforesaid shall have been damaged as aforesaid, it shall be sufficient for the pawner or pawners, his, her, or their executors, administrators, or assigns, to pay or tender the money due upon the balance, after deducting out of the principal and profit as aforesaid, for the goods or chattels pawned, such reasonable satisfaction in respect to such damage, as any such justice or justices shall order or award, and upon so doing, the justice or justices shall proceed as if the pawner or pawners, his, her, or their executors, administrators, or assigns, had paid or tendered the whole money due for the principal and profit aforesaid; and if the satisfaction to be allowed and awarded to the owner or owners of such goods or chattels, shall be equal to or exceed the principal and profit aforesaid, then and in such case the person or persons to whom the same were so pledged or pawned, his, her, or their executors, administrators, or assigns, shall deliver the goods and chattels so pledged to the owner or owners thereof, without being paid any thing for principal or profit in respect thereof, and shall also pay such excess (if any) to the person or persons entitled thereto, under the penalty of ten pounds, to be recovered and applied in manner hereinafter mentioned (c)."

Pawnbrokers shall produce their books when necessary,

Sect. 25. "It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, upon complaint made to him on the oath or affirmation of one or more credible witness or witnesses, wherein any information shall be laid against any pawnbroker, for having offended against this act, or respecting any dispute between any pawnbroker and person having pawned goods, or the owner or owners of goods pawned, or respecting any felony or other matter, or on any other occasion whatsoever, which in the judgment of any justice or justices shall make the production of any book, note, voucher, memorandum, duplicate, or other paper necessary, which shall or ought to be in the hands, custody, or power of any pawnbroker, to summon such pawnbroker before him to attend, with all and every or any book, note, voucher, memorandum, duplicate, or paper which he or she may or ought to have in his or her custody or power relating to the same, which he or she is hereby required to produce before such justice or justices, in the state the same was or were made at the

(a) R. v. Beard, 12 East, 672. This was an application for a mandamus to be issued to the defendant, a magistrate of Lancashire, commanding him to hear and determine an information exhibited before him by J. S. against Robert Rawlinson, a pawnbroker, for certain trespasses and contempts against the late Pawnbroker's Act of the 39 & 40 Geo. III. c. 99. The information laid before the magistrate on the 4th of June, 1810, charged that Rawlinson, a pawnbroker at Manchester, unlawfully demanded, received, and took from one J. S., in the name of J. D., on redeeming the pledge after mentioned, 6*d.* by way of profit for the loan of 3*s.*, the same being an intermediate sum exceeding 2*s.* 6*d.* and not exceeding 40*s.*, which, on the 5th of Dec. 1809, was lent by Rawlinson to J. S. on a pledge of two spoons, the said pledge not having remained in pawn any time exceeding six calendar months, being more than at the rate of 4*d.* for the loan of 20*s.*

by the calendar month, contrary to the statute; and then claimed a penalty of not less than 40*s.* nor more than 10*l.* The question was, whether this were a case for a summary conviction in a penalty within the statute; the magistrate thought it was not, and refused to proceed upon the information. The 2nd and 3rd sections of the said act were cited. No penalty is given by these clauses, but penalties are given by several clauses of the act for specific offences, and the act also contains many regulating clauses; s. 26 also was cited. (Lord Ellenborough, C. J.) It is prohibited by the act to take more than the stipulated rate of profit; and, therefore, the taking more is an offence against the act; and as no particular penalty is provided for that transgression, it falls within the general words of the 26th clause. Sect. 28. "The churchwardens and overseers of the poor of any parish or place, where any offence shall be supposed to have been committed by any pawnbroker against this act, or some or one of such officers, at the discretion or direction of any justices of the peace, on having notice from such justice of the peace, of such offence being supposed to have been committed, shall, and they or some or one of them, to be nominated by such justice as afore-said, are and is hereby required to prosecute every offender for every offence, so to be suggested by such justice to have been committed against this act, at the expense of the respective parish whereof they or he are, is, or shall be for the time being such officers or officer."

Sect. 29. "No person who has been convicted of any fraud, or of obtaining money under false pretences, or of any felony whatsoever, shall be allowed to prosecute or inform against any person or persons, for any offence or offences committed against this act."

Sect. 30. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to any person or persons whomsoever, who shall lend money to any person or persons whomsoever upon pawn or pledge, at the rate of five pounds per centum per annum interest, without taking any further or greater profit for the loan or forbearance of such money lent, on any pretence whatsoever."

Sect. 31. "All and every the provisions, regulations, and clauses contained in this present act shall, from and after the end of this present session of parliament, extend to and include the executors, administrators, and assigns of all and every deceased pawnbroker, in the same manner as the same extend to and include the pawnbroker when living, save and except that no such executor or administrator of any such deceased pawnbroker shall be answerable for any penalty or forfeiture personally, or to be paid out of his, her, or their own monies or estates, unless the same shall be incurred and forfeited by his, her, or their own act or neglect."

Sect. 32. "If any person or persons shall at any time or times be sued, molested, or prosecuted, for any thing by him, her, or them done or executed in pursuance of this act, or of any clause, matter, or thing herein contained, such person or persons may plead the general issue, and give the special matter in evidence for his, her, or their defence; and if upon the trial a verdict shall pass for the defendant or defendants, or the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuited, then such defendant or defendants shall have double costs awarded to him, her, or them against such plaintiff or plaintiffs."

Sect. 33. "In all actions, suits, informations, trials, and other proceedings in pursuance of this act, or in relation to any matter or thing herein contained, any inhabitant of the parish, town, or place in which any offence or offences shall be committed, contrary to the true intent and meaning of this act, shall be admitted to give evidence, and shall be deemed a competent witness, notwithstanding his or her being an inhabitant of the parish, town, or place wherein any such offence or offences shall be supposed to have been committed."

Sect. 34. "The justice or justices before whom any person shall be convicted, in manner prescribed by this act, shall cause such respective conviction to be drawn up in the form or to the effect following; (that is to say,)

Peace. See post, "Surety for the Peace."

Pedlers. See "Pedlars," Vol. III.

Peers.

DUKES, Earls, and Barons, are not conservators of the peace at common law; and have no more power as such than mere private persons. (2 Haw. c. 8, s. 1.) Not conservators of the peace.

The safest way of proceeding against a peer for sureties of the peace or good behaviour, is by complaint to the Court of Chancery or King's Bench. (1 Haw. c. 60, s. 5. R. v. Earl Ferrers, 1 Burr. 631.) Sureties of peace against.

By the common law, peers of the realm of England and peeresses, whether by birth or marriage, are constantly privileged from arrest in civil suits. And this privilege is extended, by the act of union with Scotland, to Scotch peers and peeresses: and by the act of union with Ireland, to Irish peers and peeresses (a). Privileged from arrest.

They are not liable to be attached for the non-payment of money, pursuant to an order of nisi prius, which has been made a rule of court. (Walker v. Earl Grosvenor, 7 T. R. 171.) From attachments.

But they are not exempted from attachments for not obeying the process of the court, (R. v. Earl Ferrers, 1 Burr. 631); nor does the privilege extend to peeresses by marriage, if they afterwards intermarry with commoners.

The court will take judicial notice of an English peerage without its being specially pleaded. (Lofft, 49.) But the privilege of peerage must be pleaded in abatement specially, in which not only the right of peerage must be shown, but also how he derived that right, as by setting forth the letters patent, &c. (Rex v. Cooke, 2 B. & Cres. 871; 4 D. & R. 594, S. C.) So this must be shown in any pleading claiming the right of peerage. (See Earl of Stirling v. Clayton, 1 C. & M. 241.) And in the Countess of Rutland's case, (6 Co. 53.) the note says, "duke or not duke, earl or not earl, baron or not baron, shall not be tried by the country but by record; for if they be lords of parliament, it appears by the record, and therefore, by record, viz. the king's writ, it ought to be certified." (And see Lord Abergavenny's case, 12 Co. 71; Countess of Shrewsbury's case, 12 Co. 94.) Court take notice of.

A nobleman must be tried by his peers; but this is to be understood only at the suit of the king, upon an indictment for high treason, petit treason, felony, or misprision thereof; but in case of a præmunire, riot, or the like, and generally for all other crimes out of parliament, (unless otherwise specially provided for by statute, as it is in many instances,) though it be at the suit of the king, he shall not be tried by his peers, but by the freeholders of the county. (3 Inst. 30; 2 Haw. c. 44, s. 12, et seq.) Trial of peers.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 7, empowering the trial in England for murder or manslaughter committed abroad, it is provided that peers shall be

(a) An Irish peer, who has voted in the election of representative peers, cannot be arrested or sued by capias. (Coates v. Ld. Hawarden, 7 B. & C. 388; 1 Man. & Ry. 110, S. C.) The court will not, on motion, cancel a bail bond given by a person claiming to be an Irish peer, unless his peerage be clearly made out. (Storey v. Birmingham, 3 D. & R. 488. See Digby v. Ld. Stirling, a Scotch peer, 8 Bingh. 55; 1 M. & Scott, 116; 1 Dowl. P. C. 248, S. C.)

I. Perjury by the Common Law.

[And herein, 1st, Of the Offence itself; 2ndly, The Indictment for it; 3rdly, The Evidence; 4thly, The Certiorari, &c.; and 5thly, the Punishment.]

1. WHAT CONSTITUTES THE OFFENCE.

PERJURY by the common law seemeth to be a wilful false oath, by one who, being lawfully required to depose the truth in any judicial proceeding, swears absolutely in a manner material to the point in question, whether he be believed or not. (1 Haw. c. 69, s. 1; 3 Inst. 164.) Perjury at the common law.

Wilful.]—The false oath must be wilful, and proved to be taken with some degree of deliberation; for if upon the whole circumstances of the case it shall appear probable that it was owing rather to the weakness than perverseness of the party, as where it was occasioned by surprise or inadvertency, or a mistake of the true state of the question, it cannot but be hard to make it amount to voluntary and corrupt perjury, which is of all crimes whatsoever the most infamous and detestable. (1 Haw. c. 69, s. 2) Must be wilful.

False.]—It is said not to be material, whether the fact which is sworn to be in itself true or false; for however the thing sworn may happen to prove agreeable to the truth, yet if it were not known to be so by him who swears to it, his offence is altogether as great as if it had been false; inasmuch as he wilfully swears that he knows a thing to be true, which at the same time he knows nothing of, and impudently endeavours to induce those before whom he swears to proceed upon the credit of a deposition, which any stranger might make as well as he. (1 Haw. c. 69, s. 6.) But it is otherwise on stat. 5 Eliz. c. 9, post. Must be false.

So, in Pedley's case, 1 Leach, 327, it was holden by Lord Mansfield, C. J., that a man may be indicted for perjury in swearing that he believes a fact to be true, which he must know to be false.

It is further said, that upon this question being agitated in the Court of C. P. all the judges were unanimous, that belief was to be considered as an absolute term, and that an indictment might be supported upon such a statement. (1 Haw. c. 69, p. 88, note (a) edit. of 1795.)

But it is said that if a witness swears positively to a fact which he does not absolutely know, but which he has some grounds for believing has happened at the time he swears it, and which afterwards proves to be true, —as if he has instructed an agent or correspondent to do a certain thing at such a period at a distant place, and he swears positively that the thing was done, though he could not at the time by any possibility have received information, whether the thing was done or not; this although certainly a very rash and in strictness of law a false oath, yet in the absence of all wicked intention to deceive, and the fact really turning out as the witness had previously sworn, he could not it is apprehended in this instance be liable to the penalties of perjury, which must not only be wilful but must also be corrupt. (2 Deacon, Crim. Dig. 1000.)

Oath.]—The false affirmation or declaration of any of the people called Quakers, made instead of an oath, will subject the party to the penalties of perjury, by stat. 7 & 8 Wil. III. c. 34, 8 Geo. I. c. 6, and 22 Geo. II. c. 46. The latter stat. (by s. 36,) enacts, “If any person making such affirmation or declaration shall be lawfully convicted of having wilfully, falsely, and corruptly affirmed and declared any matter or thing, which, if the same had been deposed in the usual form, would have amounted to wilful and corrupt perjury, every person so offending shall incur and suffer the like pains, penalties, and forfeitures, as by the laws and statutes of this realm are to be inflicted on persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury,” See 9 Geo. IV. c. 32; also, “Evidence,” Vol. II. False affirmations of Quakers.

Must be legally sworn.

Being lawfully required.—It seemeth clear, that no oaths whatsoever, taken before persons acting merely in a private capacity, or before those who take upon them to administer oaths of a public nature without legal authority, or before those who are legally authorized to administer some kinds of oaths, but not those which happen to be taken before them, or even before those who take upon them to administer justice by virtue of an authority seemingly colourable, but in truth unwarranted and merely void, can amount to perjuries, but are altogether idle and of no force. (1 Haw. c. 69, s. 4; R. v. Dunn, 1 D. & R. 10. See also, 4 Bl. Com. 137; and “Oaths,” Vol. III.) In a late case where an order of reference at nisi prius directed that the witnesses should be sworn before a judge “or before a commissioner duly authorized,” and a witness was sworn before a commissioner for taking affidavits in the same court, and afterwards examined viva voce by the arbitrator: it was held that a witness so sworn was not indictable for perjury; as the commissioner though authorized to take affidavits was not authorized to administer an oath for a viva voce examination. (R. v. Hanks, 3 C. & P. 419.) Gaselee, J., however there said, “By the 29 Car. 2, c. 5, the courts are empowered to appoint commissioners for taking affidavits, and if this order had empowered a commissioner for taking affidavits to administer this oath, I would have reserved the point, because whether the court of K. B. has any power to authorize their commissioners to take anything but affidavits, is a question that I should have left them to decide.”

It seems a false oath taken before commissioners after the death of the king, though their commission is in strictness determined by such demise, will nevertheless amount to perjury if the commissioners had no notice of the demise when the oath was administered. (1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 4.)

Question must be a lawful one.

The question that is put to the witness must it seems be a lawful one in order to sustain an information for perjury—where the alleged perjury was in answer to a question asked the witness whether he had not been guilty of bribery, the court refused a criminal information against him as it was an unfair question, and one that he was not bound to answer. (R. v. Dummer, 1 Salk. 374; and see R. v. Lewis, 1 Str. 69.)

Must be in a judicial proceeding.

In any Judicial Proceeding.—For though an oath be given by him that hath lawful authority, and the same broken, yet if it be not in a judicial proceeding, it is not perjury, because such oaths are general and extrajudicial, but it serves for aggravation of the offence. Such are, general oaths given to officers or ministers of justice, the oath of fealty and allegiance, and such like. Thus, if an officer commit extortion, it is against his general oath, but yet not perjury, because not in a judicial proceeding: but when he is charged with extortion, the breach of his oath may serve for aggravation. (3 Inst. 166; R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 69.)

Where an oath is administered by a person that hath lawful authority to tender the same, and it is afterwards broken, yet if it be not in a judicial proceeding, it is no perjury, nor punishable by the common law. (3 Inst. 166. See R. v. Cohen, Stark. Rep. 511; R. v. White, M. & M. 271; 2 Chit. C. L. 303.) And whenever the proceedings are coram non judice, however false the oath may be, the party taking it cannot be indicted for perjury, as if a party take a false oath in a court of requests in a matter concerning lands, he would not be liable to an indictment, that court having no jurisdiction over questions concerning lands. (3 Salk. 269.)

It seems to be clearly agreed that all false oaths taken before those who are any way intrusted with the administration of public justice, in relation to any matter legally pending before them, are properly perjuries. And it seems therefore that all persons are indictable who wilfully forswear themselves in any judicial proceeding, depending before a court of law or equity, the spiritual court, or any other court, whether the proceedings therein be of record or not; or whether they concern the interest of the king, or the subject. And it is not material, whether the false oath be taken in the face of the court, or before persons authorized by it to examine a matter, the knowledge whereof is necessary for the right determination of a cause; or whether such matter relates to the merits of the cause, or is merely collateral thereto. Thus, a false oath taken before a sheriff upon a writ of inquiry of damages, or before a commissioner appointed to take cognizance of bail, where a person offering himself to be bail for another swears that his substance is greater than it is, is punishable the same as if the oath was taken before the court itself on the trial of the cause. (1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 3.)

Swearing falsely before a magistrate, to induce him to compel another to find sureties for the peace, is indictable as perjury. (1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 3; 1 Camp. 404.) But no indictment lies for perjury in a voluntary affidavit taken extra-judicially before a magistrate. (4 Bla. Com. 137.)

Swearing falsely in an affidavit to procure the re-admission of an attorney, seems indictable as perjury. (See Ex p. Wentworth, 2 Dowl. P. C. 607.)

The taking a false oath before a surrogate, to procure a marriage licence, will not support an indictment for perjury. (R. v. Foster, R. & R. C. C. 459; and see R. v. Alexander, 1 Leach, 63; R. v. Woodman, Id. 64.) But the correctness of this is questioned by Mr. Deacon in his Digest, p. 1001. It should seem, however, that if the indictment had stated that the defendant took the oath to procure the licence, or that a marriage had been had under such a licence, so procured, the party might have been punished for a misdemeanor. (Id.)

A party may be indicted for perjury though he have not complied with the rules and orders of a court, which are merely directory; and, therefore, where a party swore falsely in an affidavit which could not, from certain omissions in the jurat, be received in the court in which it was sworn, it was held he was indictable, the perjury being complete at the time of swearing. (R. v. Hailey, R. & M., C. N. P. 94; 1 C. & P. 258, S. C.)

Swears absolutely.]—For the deposition must be direct and absolute; and not as he thinketh, or remembereth, or believeth, or the like. (3 Inst. 166.) Unless, indeed, he must know what he so swears to is false. (See Pedley's Case, 1 Leach, 325, ante, 159.)

The false swearing as to the legal operation of a deed is not indictable. (1 Esp. Rep. 280.)

In a Matter material to the Point in Question.]—For, if it be not material, then, though it be false, yet it is no perjury, because it concerneth not the point in issue, and, therefore, in effect it is extra-judicial. (3 Inst. 167; R. v. M'Keron, 2 Russ. 541.)

But it is not necessary that it appear to what degree the point in which a man is perjured was material to the issue; for if it be but circumstantially material, it will be perjury. (Rex v. Gripe, 1 Lord Raym. 258.)

Though the statement made by a witness be not directly material to the issue, yet if it be made in answer to a question put to him, on cross examination, with a view to try his credit, and the witness deposes to any fact which is positively false, it seems that he will not be less liable to an indictment for perjury than if he had sworn to a matter directly material, for a witness may state many things which are circumstantially, though not directly material to the issue. (2 Deacon, C. D. 1003, and Cases there collected.)

Much less is it necessary that the evidence be sufficient for the plaintiff to recover upon; for in the nature of the thing an evidence may be very material, and yet it may not be full enough to prove directly the point in question. (Reg. v. Rhodes, 2 Ld. Raym. 889.)

In a late case in an indictment for perjury in an answer in Chancery, to a bill filed against a defendant for the specific performance of an agreement relating to the purchase of land, the defendant had relied on the Statute of Frauds (the agreement not being in writing), and had also denied having ever entered into such an agreement, and upon this denial he was indicted; but it was held, that the denial of an agreement, which by the Statute of Frauds was not binding on the parties, was immaterial and irrelevant, and not indictable. (R. v. Dunston, R. & M., C. N. P. 109.)

Whether believed or not.]—It hath been holden not to be material, upon whether believed or not.

2. Indictment.

False oath indictable in some cases, though not assignable as perjury.

an indictment of perjury at common law, whether the false oath were at all credited, or whether the party in whose prejudice it was intended were in the event any way aggrieved by it or not; insomuch as this is not a prosecution grounded on the damage of the party, but on the abuse of public justice. (1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 9; R. v. Crossley, 7 T. R. 315.)

In some cases where a false oath has been taken, the party may be prosecuted by indictment at common law, though the offence may not amount to perjury. Thus, it appears to have been holden, that any person making or knowingly using any false affidavit taken abroad, (though a perjury could not be assigned on it here,) in order to mislead our courts of justice, is punishable by indictment as for a misdemeanor; and Ld. Ellenborough, C. J., said, "that he had not the least doubt, that any person making use of a false instrument in order to prevent the course of justice was guilty of an offence punishable by indictment." (O'Mealy v. Newell, 8 East, 364; and see R. v. Foster, R. & R. C. C. 459.)

2. INDICTMENT FOR OFFENCE AT COMMON LAW.

Cannot be supported against two.

It may in the first place be as well to observe that the crime of perjury being in its nature a distinct and separate offence, several persons cannot be joined in one indictment. (Rex v. Phillips, 2 Stra. 921.) But two or more may be indicted for subornation of perjury. (R. v. Rhodes, 2 Lord Raym. 886.)

On prosecution for perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence.

In order to shorten and facilitate indictments and prosecutions for perjury, the 23 Geo. II. c. 11, s. 1, enacts, "And in every information or indictment for wilful and corrupt perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence, and by what court, or before whom the oath was taken (averring such court or person to have a competent authority to administer the same), together with the proper averment or averments to falsify the matter wherein the perjury is assigned, without setting forth any part of the record or proceedings either in law or equity (other than as aforesaid), or the authority of the court or person before whom the perjury was committed." See section 2, as to indictments for subornation of perjury, post, 170.

The provisions of this statute should be attended to.

In R. v. Dowlin, 5 T. R. 317, Ld. Kenyon, C. J., said, "We have occasion to lament, in almost all the trials for perjury, that the prosecutor does not avail himself of this excellent law, which was passed to obviate difficulties in drawing indictments for this offence." In the case referred to, the commission at the Admiralty session had been unnecessarily set forth in the indictment; and it was admitted that where a prosecutor undertakes to set out in the indictment more of the proceedings than he need under this statute, he must set them forth correctly; but it was holden that the commission at the Admiralty session, being set forth as directed to A., B., and C., and others not named, of which A., B., and C., amongst others, should always be one, the court must take it to mean, that if either of the persons named of the quorum were present, it would be sufficient. (See 1 Leach, 201.) Where the indictment was exorbitantly long in stating unnecessarily the various proceedings on a former prosecution, the Court of K. B. referred it to the master to see what part of the record was unnecessary, and made an order that the clerk of the peace should pay the expenses occasioned by the unnecessary matter.

Quashing indictment.

The court generally will not quash an indictment for a crime of so enormous a nature as perjury, for insufficiency in the caption or body of it, but will oblige the defendant either to plead or demur to it. (2 Hawk. c. 25, s. 146; sed vide R. v. Thomas, 3 D. & R. 621.) A judge may refuse to try an indictment for perjury clearly bad in point of law. (R. & M., C. N. P. 147, 210.)

Plea of autrefois acquit.

With respect to the plea of autrefois acquit by a defendant who has been acquitted of an indictment for perjury, but not on the merits, it may be generally observed of such plea, that it is an established principle, that unless the first indictment were such as the defendant (or, if for a felony, the prisoner) might have been convicted upon by proof of the facts contained in the second indictment, an acquittal on the first indictment can be no bar to the second. (R. v. Vandercom and Abbott, O. B. Jan. 1796, 2 East's P. C. 519.) See "Acquittal," Vol. I.

Inducement.]—Like in an indictment for a libel, some inducement is generally necessary to render the subsequent statements intelligible. No more inducement should be stated than is absolutely necessary to explain the perjury assigned. (See 2 Chit. C. L. 307.) Thus, it is sufficient to state that a certain cause had arisen, and was depending, and came on to be tried in due form of law; or that at such a court I. K. was in due form of law tried on a certain indictment, then and there depending against him, for murder, and that the perjury was committed on the trial either of the civil or criminal proceeding. (R. v. Dowlin, 5 T. R. 318; Cro. C. C. 7th ed. 612, n. a.; 2 Chit. C. L. 307; 1 Leach, 201; R. v. Schoole, Peake, N. P. 112.)

Time.]—The time of committing the perjury should sometimes be laid with precision (R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 69.) Where an indictment for perjury, in an answer in the Exchequer, alleged that the bill was filed on the 1st day of December, but, on its production, it appeared to be entitled generally of the preceding Michaelmas term, as is the practice when a bill is filed in the interval between two terms: this was held to be no variance, because the day was not alleged as part of the record. (R. v. Hucks, 1 Stark. Rep. 521.) Where, however, the time is material with reference to the crime of the defendant, as, for instance, with reference to his previous knowledge of a fact, which knowledge he subsequently denies on oath, the time must be proved as laid. Therefore, where the assignments of perjury were alleged in this form, "whereas, in truth and in fact, the said defendant, at the time of effecting the said policy, that is to say, a certain policy of insurance, purporting to have been underwritten by — Kite by his agent Meyer, on the 13th of August, 1807, &c. (and by other writers specified in the indictment,) well knew," &c., and, on the production of the policy, it appeared that it had been underwritten by Meyer for Kite on the 15th of August, the variance was held fatal. (R. v. Hucks, 1 Stark. Rep. 524.) See "Indictment," Vol. III.

Place.]—As to the statement of place and venue, see "Indictment," Vol. III. Where the perjury had been committed in the city of Gloucester, which is a county of itself, it was held that the indictment might be found and tried by a jury of the county at large. (R. v. Gough, Dougl. 760.)

When the party is indicted for perjury in an affidavit, the venue must not be laid in the county where the affidavit is used, but in the county where the offence was complete by taking the false oath; as where an affidavit is sworn before a commissioner in the country, and it is used in the Court of K. B. sitting in Middlesex. (See per Lord Kenyon, 7 T. R. 319.)

The Court.]—The court by which the oath was administered must be correctly described. An allegation that the oath was administered before justices assigned to hold the assizes, when by the evidence it appeared that the oath was administered when the judge was sitting under the commission of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, was holden to be a fatal variance. (R. v. Lincoln, R. & R. 421.) But an indictment for perjury in a cause tried at the assizes has been holden good, although it alleged the oath to have been taken before one only of the judges in the commission, whereas the names of both judges were, as usual, inserted in the nisi prius record. (R. v. Alford, 1 Leach, 150.) Where the indictment alleged that the cause came on to be tried before Lloyd, Ld. Kenyon, &c., William Jones being associated, &c., and from the judgment-roll it appeared that Roger Kenyon was associated, &c., the variance was held fatal. (R. v. Eden, 1 Esp. R. 97.) Where the indictment alleged a bill of discovery filed in the Ex-

2. Indictment. chequer (in the answer to which perjury was assigned) to have been filed on a day specified, viz. 1st of December, 1807, and it appeared, on the production of the bill, to have been filed in the preceding Michaelmas term, according to the practice of the court, where a bill is filed in vacation, it was held that the variance was immaterial, the day not having been alleged as part of the document. (R. v. Hucks, 1 Stark. C. N. P. 521.) Where the perjury was assigned in answer to a bill alleged to have been filed in a particular term, and a copy produced was of a bill amended in a subsequent term by order of the court, it was held to be no variance, the amended bill being part of the original bill. (3 Stark. Ev. 1138.) Where an indictment for perjury, assigned on evidence given in the Palace Court, described the court as "the Court of the King's Palace at Westminster," and it appeared from the record of the trial below, that it was called "the Court of the King's Palace of Westminster," it was held no variance. (R. v. Israel, 3 D. & R. 234.) And where the same indictment averred that the cause in which the alleged perjury was committed "came on to be tried, and was then and there duly tried by a jury of the county," and the record of the trial stated that the jury came of the neighbourhood of Westminster, it was held, that as the cause was in fact so tried, and no county being mentioned in the record, it was no objection. Id. Where an indictment for perjury, in setting out the record of a conviction, stated an adjournment to have been made by Const, Esq. and A., B., C., and D., and others, their fellow justices, &c., and an examined copy of the record of conviction, when produced, stated the adjournment to have been made by Const, Esq., and E., F., G., and others, &c., the variance was held fatal, unless the defect was supplied by evidence of an adjournment made by the persons stated in the indictment. (R. v. Bellamy, R. & M., C. N. P. 171.)

Authority of court.

It is unnecessary to set forth the commission, from which the authority of the court is derived, in which the perjury was committed. (See the 23 Geo. II. c. 11, ante, 162.) Nor is it necessary to set out the nature of the authority of the person or court administering the oath. (R. v. Callanan, 6 B. & C. 102; 9 D. & R. 97, S.C.) But it is necessary to aver concisely they had competent authority to administer the oath. (R. v. Lyme Regis, Dougl. 156.)

The oath.

The Oath.—It must be averred positively and distinctly that the defendant was regularly sworn, and deposed, &c. Therefore, in an indictment in which perjury was, by the first count, charged to have been committed at a trial therein mentioned, and another count alleged that, at the trial, the defendant was found guilty, "by means of the false and material testimony of the defendant in the first count mentioned," and that a rule nisi for a new trial was granted, and that the defendant, knowingly, falsely, wilfully, and corruptly, made affidavit that the evidence given by him at the trial was true, "whereas it was false in the particulars in the first count assigned and set forth;" this latter count was held bad, for not averring distinctly that the defendant was sworn as a witness, and deposed to certain facts at the trial, instead of leaving it to be taken by intendment. (R. v. Stevens, 5 B. & C. 246; R. v. Richards, 7 D. & R. 665.) It is sufficient, however, in all cases, to allege in the indictment that the defendant was duly sworn. (R. v. McCarthur, Peake, 155.) And where the indictment averred that the defendant was sworn on the holy gospel of God, proof that the defendant was sworn and examined as a witness was held sufficient to support the averment. (R. v. Rowley, R. & M. N. P. C. 302.)

Where it was averred in an indictment that the defendant was sworn on the gospels, and he appeared to have been sworn according to the custom of his own country, this was considered as a variance, which would have been fatal had not the indictment been saved, by proof that he was previously sworn in the ordinary mode, ib.; sed qu. for how can perjury be assigned upon an oath which the defendant conscientiously does not consider binding? (Collyer's Stat. 474.)

It is not necessary to set out the jurat of the affidavit, (R. v. Embden, 9 East, 437); nor is it necessary to state or prove that the affidavit was affiled in or exhibited to the court, or in any manner used by the defendant or others. (R. v. Crossley, 7 T. R. 315.)

2. Indictment.

The False Swearing.]—It should be averred that the defendant falsely swore, &c. (R. v. Perrott, 2 M. & Sel. 385.) An indictment at common law, alleging that the defendant falsely, maliciously, wickedly, and corruptly, swore, &c., without saying “wilfully,” has been held to be sufficient, on the grounds that the former words include the latter. But the word wilfully is essential on an indictment on the statute of Elizabeth. (Cox’s Case, 1 Leach, 83, 71, 4th ed.) And the words wilfully and corruptly cannot both be omitted in the indictment at common law. (R. v. Stevens, 5 B. & C. 246; R. v. Richards, 7 D. & R. 665.) If the same person swears contrary ways at different times, it should be averred on which occasion he swore wilfully, falsely, or corruptly. (R. v. Harris, 5 B. & Ald. 926; 1 D. & R. 578, S. C.)

Defendant falsely swore.

The Matter sworn to.]—Unlike to indictments for libels, it will suffice in an indictment for perjury to set out the substance of what the defendant swore. (See 6 B. & Cres. 103; R. v. Grendall, 2 C. & P. 563; R. v. Coppard, 3 C. & P. 59; 1 M. & M. 118, S. C.) The matter falsely sworn to need not be prefaced with the words, “to the tenor and effect following,” “as follows,” or “in words,” or “figures following,” or with other expressions which require an exact recital; but it should rather be “in substance and to the effect following.” (2 Campb. 138; Cro. C. C. 7th ed., 573, n. (a); Clay’s Case, 2 Russ. 1785; 2 Chit. C. L. 309.) Or “in manner and form following, that is to say,” which allow of a greater latitude. (1 Leach, 192.)

The matter sworn to.

But, in every case, accuracy is required, and any substantial variance will be fatal. In an indictment for perjury in an affidavit, if a word were accidentally omitted in the original document, it must not be supplied as if sworn, but the omissions must be explained by an innuendo. (R. v. Taylor, 1 Campb. 404; R. v. Leefe, 2 Campb. 134.) So where an indictment in setting out the substance and effect of a bill in equity, stated an agreement between the prosecutor and the defendant respecting houses; and the word in the bill was house in the singular number, this was held a fatal variance. (R. v. Spencer, R. & M. 98.) If, in an indictment for perjury before a committee of the House of Commons, on an election petition, it be stated that A. B. and C. D. were returned to serve as burgesses for the said borough of New Malton, and the indenture, when produced, describes them as returned for Malton, without the epithet “New,” the variance will be fatal. (R. v. Leefe, 2 Campb. 134, 141.) But it would suffice to say, that the election was had “by virtue of a certain precept of the high sheriff of the county, by him duly issued to the bailiff of the said borough of New Malton,” though the precept varied, because it is said not to be matter of description. (R. v. Leefe, 2 Campb. 140; 2 Chit. C. L. 310. As to other variances, see R. v. Dudman, 7 D. & R. 324; R. v. Dunn, 1 D. & R. 10; R. v. Coppard, 3 C. & P. 59; R. v. Israel, 3 D. & R. 234; R. v. Carter, 6 Mod 168; R. v. Greive, 1 Ld. Raym. 260.)

When perjury is assigned in several parts of an affidavit, those parts may be set out in the indictment, as if continuous, though they are, in fact, separated by the introduction of other matter. (R. v. Callanam, 6 B. & C. 102; 9 D. & R. 97, S. C., and see R. v. Solomon, R. & M. C. N. P. 252.)

Innuendo.]—In setting forth the matter in the record on which the assignment is made, as well as the perjury, it is frequently necessary to make use of innuendoes in order to explain the meaning. (2 Chit. C. L. 310.) An innuendo is defined to be a mode of explaining some matter already expressed: it serves to point out where there is precedent matter, but can never introduce a new charge; it may elucidate what is already averred, but cannot add or enlarge, or alter, its sense. (R. v. Greepe, 2 Salk. 513; 1 Ld. Raym. 256; 12 Mod. 139, S. C. See Roberts v. Camden, 3 East, 95; 2 Chit. C. L. 310.) If it is intended to explain anything, the matter must first be put on the record for it to explain. (4 Co. 20, a.)

Innuendoes.

2. Indictment. If any use be made of the innuendo which is imperfect it cannot be rejected as surplusage, nor will it be cured by verdict. (R. v. Griepe, 1 Ld. Raym. 256; 2 Chit. C. L. 311.)

Where, however, the oath of the defendant was that he had been arrested before he got to his own house, in the parish of St. Martin's-in-the Fields, an innuendo, his house in the Haymarket, in St. Martin's, &c., is good, as only a more particular description of the same house. So, an oath being that the defendant was arrested upon the steps of his own door, an innuendo that it was the outer door is good. (R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 70.)

Where the innuendo and the matter it introduces are altogether impertinent and immaterial, it may be rejected as surplusage. (R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 65; Roberts v. Camden, 9 East, 93.)

Assignments of perjury.

Assignments of Perjury.]—The indictment must assign positively the manner in which the matter sworn to is false. (R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 70.) A general averment that the defendant falsely swore, &c., upon the whole matter, is not sufficient: the indictment must proceed, by particular averments, to negative that which is false. (R. v. Perrott, 2 M. & Sel. 385.) Upon this principle it has been held, that if an insolvent debtor has sworn that his schedule contains a full, true, and perfect account of all debts owing to him, at the time of his petitioning for his discharge, an assignment of perjury on that oath, stating that "whereas, in truth and in fact, the said schedule did not contain a full, true, and perfect account," &c. (in the words of the oath), is too general; for it ought to state what debt he is charged with omitting. (R. v. Hepper, 1 C. & P. 608; R. & M. C. N. P. 210, S. C.) When the defendant swears only to belief, it may be proper to aver, "that he well knew" the contrary of what he swore, as in 4 Wentw. 231; 2 Chit. C. L. 312.

It should be here observed, that it will suffice to convict the defendant to prove any one of the material assignments of perjury. (R. v. Rhodes, 2 Ld. Raym. 886; R. v. Leefe, 2 Campb. 133.) Yet, if the least part of one entire material assignment be disproved, it will not suffice. (R. v. Leefe, 2 Campb. 134.)

Materiality.

Materiality.]—It must be shown either by a statement of the proceedings or by other averments, that the matter sworn to was material to the question depending. (R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 19; R. v. M'Keron, 5 T. R. 316.) But, though an allegation of this fact is essential, yet it is not necessary to set forth so much of the proceedings of the former trial as will show the materiality of the question on which the perjury is assigned: it is sufficient to allege generally that the particular question became a material question. (R. v. Dowlin, 5 T. R. 311.) On the other hand, if the materiality appear on the record, it is unnecessary to aver it, (T. P. C. 139,) though it is most usual to do so. (2 Stark, C. N. P. 423, n.; and see 2 Russ. 541.)

An indictment for perjury stated, that it became a material question, whether, on the occasion of a certain alleged arrest, L. touched K., &c. The defendant's evidence, as set out, was, L. put his arms round him, and embraced him; innuendo, that L. had, on the occasion to which the said evidence applied, touched the person of K.: held, that the materiality of the evidence did not sufficiently appear; et per Bayley, J.—An indictment must be good without the help of argument or inference. In the case of perjury, the indictment must show, either by a statement of the proceedings, or by other averments, that the question to which the offence related was material. That is not shown here in either way. The words on which perjury is assigned, if taken without innuendoes, have no necessary reference to the occasion of an alleged arrest; nor is there any thing in the indictment to connect them with it. It is contended, that the inquiry to which part of the evidence was an answer, would not have been relevant if applicable to any other matter and occasion than those now in question; but we know nothing of the merits of the case except from the indictment. The innuendoes rather introduce greater doubt than greater certainty, and lessen the force of the argument that only one occasion could have been contemplated. I am, therefore, of opinion, that the indictment is defective and the judgment ought to be reversed. (R. v. Nicholl, 1 B. & Ad. 21.) 3. Evidence.

Conclusion.]—After the perjury has been assigned, the indictment usually concludes, “that so the defendant did commit wilful and corrupt perjury.” (2 Leach, 860; Stark. 195.) But it should seem that this conclusion of law from the premises is immaterial. (See 2 Leach, 856; 2 Chit. C. L. 312.) Conclusion.

3. EVIDENCE OF OFFENCE AT COMMON LAW.

The evidence of one witness is not sufficient to convict of perjury, as, in such case, there would be only one oath against another. (R. v. Lee, 2 Russ. 545.) But two witnesses are not essentially requisite to disprove the particular fact sworn to; for, if any material circumstance be proved by other witnesses in confirmation of the witness who gives the direct testimony of perjury, it may turn the scale, and warrant a conviction. Ib. And the rule requiring two witnesses does not apply where the evidence consists of the contradictory oath of the party accused. (R. v. Knill, 5 B. & Ald. 929, n., and 2 Russ. 545.) Number of witnesses.

To convict a man of perjury, a probable evidence is not enough; but it must be a strong and clear evidence, and the witnesses must be more numerous than those on the side of the defendant; for otherwise it is only oath against oath. (Reg. v. Muscot, 10 Mod. 194; R. v. Broughton, 2 Str. 1229.) For there is this difference between a prosecution for perjury and a bare contest about property, that, in the latter case, the matter stands indifferent, and, therefore, a credible and probable witness shall turn the scale in favour of either party; but in the former, presumption is even to be made in favour of innocence, and the oath of the party will have a regard paid to it, until disproved. (Reg. v. Muscot, 10 Mod. 194.) Probable evidence.

Proof of the evidence set out in the indictment, by a witness who speaks from memory, but will not swear that he has given the whole of the defendant's former testimony, but says that he has stated, to the best of his recollection, all that was material to the transaction in question, and is positive that nothing was said qualifying the evidence proved, is sufficient to go to the jury. (R. v. Rowley, R & M., C. C. R. 111; Car. C. L. 186, S. C.) Speaking from memory.

Though the contrary doctrine appears at one time to have prevailed, it is now well established that the party prejudiced by the perjury is a competent witness to prove the offence; and though, at one time, it was considered necessary to show that such party had satisfied the judgment in the suit in which the perjury was committed, before he could be admitted as a witness, on the ground that he might possibly make use of a conviction for the purpose of obtaining relief in equity against the judgment, yet, as it is now an established rule, that a court of equity will not grant relief on a conviction which proceeds on the evidence of the prosecutor, there can be no objection to his being admitted a witness. And, even if the indictment proceed upon the 5 Eliz. c. 9, which gives the prosecutor half the forfeiture incurred, it is conceived that, as in an action to recover his moiety, he would be precluded from giving the conviction in evidence, there would be no objection to his competency. (2 Russ. 1791, and the authorities there cited; see also 1 Phil. Ev. 140. But this latter doctrine seems very doubtful; and see Bull. N. P. 289, and R. v. Williams, 9 B. & C. 549, 4 Man. & R. 471.) Prosecutor a competent witness.

Proof that the person before whom the oath was taken acted in the capacity of an officer fully capable of administering the oath, will suffice to raise a presumption that he had competent authority to receive it; it being a gene- Court before whom oath taken.

3. Evidence.

ral presumption of law, that an individual acting in a public capacity is duly authorized so to do. (R. v. Verelst, 3 Campb. 433; Berryman v. Wise, 4 T. R. 366; and see R. v. Creswell, 24th Dec. 1816; 2 Chit. C. L. 312, a.) Sometimes, special facts must be proved, to show the existence of the authority, where it is of a special nature, and limited to particular circumstances. Thus, on an indictment against a bankrupt for perjury on his last examination before the commissioners, it is necessary to prove the bankruptcy. (R. v. Punshon, 3 Campb. 96; 2 Chit. C. L. 312, a.; 1 Stark. C. L. 511; 3 Stark. Ev. 1135, 6.) But such strict proof would not be required if the indictment were against a witness for perjury, before such commissioners. (R. v. Punshon, 3 Campb. 96.)

Occasion of oath.

On an indictment for perjury, in an answer to a bill in equity, the bill, or a copy of it, must be proved as usual. (See Leach, 179, 3d ed.; Studdy v. Sanders, 2 D. & R. 348; Bull. N. P. 243, 4.) As to the mode of proving it, see ante, Vol. II. p. 54. (R. v. Laycock, 4 C. & P. 326.)

On an indictment for perjury committed on the trial of a former cause, the postea alone is sufficient evidence to prove that there was a trial, without showing a copy of the final judgment. (Bull. N. P. 243; 2 P. W. 563; Pitton v. Walter, Stra. 162; 2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 56; ante, Vol. II. p. 52.)

Where the prosecutor, to prove a trial at nisi prius, put in the nisi prius record, with the minute of the verdict indorsed on it by the associate, there was no postea drawn up, and the associate stated that none could be drawn up, as a rule for a new trial was pending, it was held sufficient proof of the trial at nisi prius. (R. v. Browne, 3 C. & P. 572; M. & M., C. N. P. 315, S. C.; and see R. v. Smith, 8 B. & C. 341.)

On an indictment at common law for perjury in an affidavit sworn before the Court of King's Bench, it is not necessary to prove that the affidavit was filed or exhibited, or in any manner used by the party. (R. v. Crossley, 7 T. R. 315.) But this is not so when the party is indicted under the statute of Elizabeth. (Skin. 403.) Where the perjury is assigned in an answer of the defendant in chancery, the answer itself must be produced, from the proper office. (Bul. N. P. 239; Bac. Ab. Ev. 624; 3 Stark. Ev. 1138.) And, in an indictment for such perjury, it should be proved that the jurat is in the handwriting of a master in chancery. (R. v. Morris, 2 Burr. 1189; 1 Leach, 50; R. v. Benson, 2 Campb. 508; and see ante, Vol. II.)

Identity.

The identity of the party charged with the perjury should be clearly proved: this may be done as in other cases. (See 1 Leach, 327; 3 Stark. Ev. 1139.) It is a question for a jury; but evidence of a conclusive nature is requisite, in order to show that the defendant was the person who took the oath. (3 Stark. Ev. 1139.) It is sufficient evidence of the identity of the prisoner with the party who actually took the oath in question, if his handwriting be proved. (R. v. Morris, 2 Burr. 1189; 1 Leach, 50; Anon. 3 Mod. 117; 2 Chit. C. L. 312, b.)

The perjury itself.

The perjury itself will be sufficiently shown by evidence that the defendant swore in substance and effect as stated in the indictment; and, as to what is a variance, see ante, 164; 3 Stark. Ev. 1141.

The whole of the defendant's evidence must be proved; because he might in one part have corrected any mistake made in another; though, when the perjury was committed on a cross-examination respecting a fact, not connected with the general merits of the case, proof of all the cross-examination will suffice. (R. v. Jones, Peake, 37; R. v. Dowlin, id. 170; 2 Chit. C. L. 312.) And it has been ruled in a case of a similar nature, that it is sufficient for the prosecutor to prove all the evidence given by the defendant referable to the fact on which perjury is assigned. (R. v. Rowley, R. & M. C. N. P. 299; 3 C. & P. 498, S. C.)

As to the mode of proving a bill and answer, and other written documents, see ante, "Evidence," Vol. II. 54, &c.

The innuendoes, if material, should be proved. (1 Stark. C. L. 2d. ed. 118; R. v. Aylett, 1 T. R. 63; Roberts v. Camden, 9 East, 83, 95; Wilner v. Hold, Cro. Car. 489; Smith v. Carey, 3 Campb. 461; 7 Price, 544; ante, 165.)

4. Certiorari,
&c.
Innuendoes.

The materiality of the perjury must be proved. (See ante, 161.)

Materiality.

If the matter referred to by the averment be material, and affects the charge in such a manner, that the omission of it would alter the character of the perjury assigned, either in the degree in which it is charged to be injurious, or in the degree of guilt, the court will hold it must be strictly proved as it is charged, and the failure of proof, or the disproof of it, would be fatal. (See Cowp. Rep. 72; Teesdale v. Clement, 1 Chit. Rep. 603; Shepherd v. Bliss, 2 Stark. 510; R. v. Burdett, 4 B. & Ald. 314.) But, where the matters referred to consist of several particulars, some of which are material, and others not, the court will distinguish between such as are material and such as are not; and, if any one particular be disproved, to which the perjury is alleged to relate, if the charge would remain entire, and constitute perjury, without such proof, the court will not consider it to be a variance. (See May v. Brown, 3 B. & C. 113; 4 D. & R. 670, S. C.; 2 Chit. C. L. 312, d.)

To prove that the perjury was wilful and corrupt perjury, evidence may be given of expressions of malice used by the defendant towards the person against whom he gave the false evidence. (R. v. Munton, 3 C. & P. 498.) The defendant may prove that the matter sworn to falsely was not sworn to corruptly. Though perjury be assigned by the defendant in his answer, affidavit, or deposition, in writing, the defendant may prove that an explanation was afterwards given, qualifying or limiting the first answer. (3 Stark. Ev. 1145, 6; R. v. Da. Ma. Carr, Sid. 418; 2 Chit. C. L. 312, d.)

Wilfulness.

A party who is indicted separately with others for perjury, in swearing to the same fact, either of them, before conviction, may be a witness on the trial of the others. (Fortes. Rep. 247; 2 Roll. Ab. 685; 2 Hale's P. C. 280.)

Evidence of Joint Offender.

4. CERTIORARI, &c.

It seems that the court will not ordinarily, at the prayer of the defendant, grant a certiorari for the removal of an indictment for perjury; for such crime deserves all possible discountenance, and the certiorari might delay, if not wholly discourage, the prosecution. (2 Hawk. c. 27, s. 28; see R. v. Richardson, 2 Leach, C. C. 500; "Certiorari," Vol. I.)

Certiorari.

Where the party is acquitted, no new trial is allowed in the case of perjury. (R. v. Fenwick, 1 Sid. 135.) But a new trial will be granted after verdict for the king, where it appears that the false swearing arose from mistake. (R. v. Smith, 2 Show. 165; 2 Jones, 163, S. C.)

New trial.

Where a true bill for perjury was found, and the judge at the assizes having refused to try it on account of manifest imperfections in the record, a new bill was preferred, whereupon the defendant was found guilty; but a new trial was granted, and then the prosecutor, instead of taking down the old record again, preferred a new indictment (for the same offence), and removed it into the Court of King's Bench by certiorari; the court refused to stay proceedings upon that indictment until the prosecutor paid the costs of the former proceedings. (R. v. Tremearne, 5 B. & C. 761; 8 D. R. 590, 684, S. C.)

ment.

As to quashing indictments for perjury, see ante, 162.

Quashing Indictment.

5. Punishment of, &c.

5. PUNISHMENT AND CONSEQUENCES.

Punishment.

Perjury at common law is punishable by fine, imprisonment, and pillory, at the discretion of the court before whom the offender is convicted; and now, by the 3 Geo. IV. c. 114 (a), hard labour may be added.

Further punishment of perjury or subornation.

For the further punishment of perjury, or subornation of perjury, it is enacted by the 2 Geo. II. c. 25 (made perpetual by the 9 Geo. II. c. 18), "that, besides the punishment already to be inflicted by law for so great crimes, it shall and may be lawful for the court or judge before whom any person shall be convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury, or subornation of perjury, according to the laws now in being, to order such person to be sent to some house of correction within the same county, for a time not exceeding seven years, there to be kept to hard labour (a) during all the said time, or otherwise to be transported to some of his majesty's plantations beyond the seas, for a term not exceeding seven years, as the court shall think most proper."

Perjured person not to be a juror or witness.

A person convicted of perjury is disabled from being a juror, (2 Hawk. c. 43, s. 25); or a witness, (2 Hawk. c. 46, s. 19; 2 Russ. 1798; Bla. Com. 137; see ante, "Evidence," Vol. II.)

But a pardon will restore his competency, except in the case of a conviction for perjury, or subornation of perjury, on the 5 Eliz. c. 9. s. 5. which provides that the offender shall never be admitted to give evidence in courts of justice until the judgment be reversed; and therefore the king's pardon will not, in such case, make him a competent witness. (1 Phil. Ev. 140; 2 Russ. 1798.)

II. Subornation of Perjury at Common Law.

Subornation at common law.

Subornation of perjury, by the common law, seems to be an offence in procuring a man to take a false oath, amounting to perjury, who actually taketh such oath. (2 Hawk. c. 69, s. 9.)

But it seemeth clear that, if the person incited to take such an oath do not actually take it, the person by whom he was so incited is not guilty of subornation of perjury; yet it is certain that he is liable to be punished, not only by fine, but also by infamous corporal punishment. (2 Hawk. c. 69, s. 3; R. v. Phillips, 6 East, 464; R. v. Higgins, 2 East, Rep. 17; Reg. v. Edwards, 2 Russ. 518. See "Attempts," Vol. I.)

Two or more persons may be indicted for subornation of perjury. (Reg. v. Rhodes, 2 Ld. Raym. 886.)

Indictment.

By the 23 Geo. II. c. 11, s. 2, "In every information or indictment for subornation of perjury, or for corrupt bargaining or contracting with others to commit wilful and corrupt perjury, it shall be sufficient to set forth the substance of the offence, without setting forth any part of the record or proceedings, or the commission or authority of the court or person before whom the perjury was committed, or was agreed or promised to be committed. (See ante, 162.)

It does not seem to be necessary to set forth the means used by the defendant to effect his design; but it is sufficient to state that he, "by sinister and unlawful labours and means," procured the commission of the perjury. (Reg. v. Rhodes, 2 Ld. Raym. 886; 2 Leach, 796.) And, although it must appear on the face of the proceedings that the intention of the defendant was consummated, the word "procured" or "persuaded" will sufficiently convey this idea. (Reg. v. Rhodes, 2 Ld. Raym. 889.)

Evidence.

In support of an indictment for subornation, the record of the witness's conviction for perjury is no evidence against the suborners, but the offence of the perjured witness must be again regularly proved. (1 Leach, 455; Russ. 1796; see, further, as to the evidence, ante, 167 to 169.)

Punishment.

The punishment is prescribed by the 2 Geo. II. c. 25, supra; and the same punishment may, it seems, be inflicted as in perjury itself. (See Flower's Case, 5 Co. Rep. 99.)

(a) See the 3 Geo. IV. c. 114. Vol. III. "Hard Labour."

III. Perjury, and Subornation of, by Stat. 5 Eliz. c. 9.

As to subornation of perjury, in the first place, by the 5 Eliz. c. 9, [made perpetual by the 29 Eliz. c. 5, s. 2, and 21 Jac. I. c. 28, s. 8,] it is enacted (s. 3) that all and every such person and persons which shall unlawfully and corruptly procure any witness or witnesses, by letters, rewards, promises, or by any other sinister and unlawful labour or means whatsoever, to commit any wilful and corrupt perjury, in any matter or cause whatsoever now depending, or which hereafter shall depend in suit and variance, by any writ, action, bill, complaint, or information, in anywise touching or concerning any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or any goods, chattels, debts, or damages, in any of the courts, viz. the king's courts of Chancery, the Star Chamber, the Whitehall, or elsewhere within any of the king's dominions of England or Wales, or the marches of the same, where any person or persons have, or from thenceforth should have authority by virtue of the king's commission, patent, or writ, to hold plea of land, or to examine, hear, or determine any title of lands, or any matter or witnesses concerning the title, right, or interest, of any lands, tenements, or hereditaments, or in any of the queen's majesty's courts of record, or in any leet, view of frank-pledge, or law day, ancient demean court, hundred court, court-baron, or in the court or courts of the Stannary in the counties of Devon and Cornwall; or shall likewise unlawfully and corruptly procure or suborn any witness or witnesses, which shall be sworn to testify in perpetuam rei memoriam; that then every such offender or offenders shall, for his, her, or their said offence, being thereof lawfully convicted or attainted, lose and forfeit the sum of forty pounds.

Procuring any witness to commit perjury in any matter in suit, &c. punishable by forfeiture of 40*l*.

Sect. 4. "And if it happen any such offender or offenders, so being convicted or attainted as aforesaid, not to have any goods or chattels, lands or tenements, to the value of forty pounds, that then every such person so being convicted or attainted of any of the offences aforesaid, shall for his or their said offence suffer imprisonment by the space of one half-year (a), without bail or mainprize, and to stand upon the pillory (b), the space of one whole hour, in some market town next adjoining to the place where the offence was committed, in open market there, or in the market town itself where the offence was committed."

Such offender not having goods, &c. to the value of 40*l*. to suffer imprisonment.

Sect. 5. And that no person or persons, being so convicted or attainted, be from thenceforth received as a witness to be deposed and sworn in any court of record (within England, Wales, or the marches of the same,) until such time as the judgment given against the said person or persons shall be reversed by attain or otherwise; and that, upon every such reversal, the parties grieved to recover his or their damages against all and every such person and persons as did procure the said judgment so reversed to be first given against them or any of them, by action or actions, to be sued upon his or their case or cases, according to the course of the common laws of this realm.

Persons convicted not to be witnesses until judgment reversed.

Sect. 6 enacts, that if any person or persons, either by the subornation, unlawful procurement, sinister persuasion or means of any others, or by their own act, consent, or agreement, wilfully and corruptly commit any manner of wilful perjury, by his or their deposition in any of the courts before mentioned, or being examined ad perpetuam rei memoriam, that then every person or persons so offending, and being thereof duly convicted or attainted by the laws of this realm, shall for his or their said offence lose and forfeit twenty pounds, and to have imprisonment by the space of six months without bail or mainprize; and the oath of such person or persons so offending from thenceforth not to be received in any court of record within this realm of England or Wales, or the marches of the same, until such time as the judgment given against the said person or persons shall be reversed by attain or otherwise: and that upon every such reversal the parties grieved to recover his or their damages against all and every such person and persons as Persons committing perjury to forfeit 20*l*. and to be imprisoned for six months; their oath not to be received until judgment reversed.

(a) See stat. 3 Geo. IV. c. 114; (b) See stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 138; "Hard Labour," Vol. III. post, "Pillory," &c.

3. By Statute. did procure the said judgment so reversed to be given against them or any of them, by action or actions to be sued upon his or their case or cases, according to the course of the common laws of this realm.

5 Eliz. c. 9.

And if such offenders have not goods to the value of 20*l* they are to be set in the pillory, and to be disabled from being witnesses until judgment reversed.

Sect. 7. And if it happen the said offender or offenders so offending not to have any goods or chattels to the value of twenty pounds, that then he or they to be set on the pillory (a), in some market place within the shire, city, or borough where the said offence shall be committed, by the sheriff or his ministers, if it shall fortune to be without any city or town corporate; and if it happen to be within any such city or town corporate, then by the said head officer or officers of such city or town corporate, or by his or their ministers, and there to have both his ears nailed, and from thenceforth to be discredited and disabled for ever to be sworn in any of the courts of record aforesaid, until such time as the judgment shall be reversed, and thereupon to recover his damages in manner and form before mentioned.

Disposal of forfeitures.

Sect. 8. One moiety of the said forfeitures shall be to the queen, and the other moiety to such person as shall be grieved, hindered, or molested by reason of any of the offences before mentioned, that will sue for the same, &c.

Trial of offences.

Sect. 9 enacts, that as well the judge and judges of every such of the said courts where any such suit shall be, and whereupon any such perjury shall be committed, as also the justices of assize and gaol delivery, and justices of peace at their quarter sessions, both within the liberties and without, may inquire of, hear, and determine all offences against the said act.

Proclamation at assizes.

Sect. 10. This act is to be proclaimed at all assizes.

Act is not to extend to spiritual courts.

Sect. 11 provides that this act shall no way extend to any spiritual or ecclesiastical court, but that every such offender, as shall offend in form as aforesaid, shall be punished by such usual and ordinary laws as are used in the said court.

Nor to restrain other punishment of perjury.

And sect. 13 also provides, that this statute shall not restrain the authority of any judge having absolute power to punish perjury before the making thereof; but that every such judge may proceed in the punishment of all offences punishable before the making of the said statute, in such wise as they might have done and used to do, to all purposes, so that they set not on the offender less punishment than is contained in this act.

Statute extends only to witnesses.

Any Witness.—If the defendant perjureth himself in his answer, in the Chancery, Exchequer Chamber, or the like, he is not punishable by this statute; for it extendeth but to witnesses. (3 Inst. 166.)

But he is punishable for the same by indictment at the common law. (R. v. Morris, 3 Burr. 1189.)

Mode of proceeding.

By any Writ, Action, Bill, Complaint, or Information.—It hath been resolved that these words are to be extended to the latter clause concerning perjury, as well as to this concerning subornation; because it cannot well be intended, that the makers of the act, who inflict a greater penalty on subornation of perjury than on the perjury itself, should mean to extend the purview of the law in relation to what they esteemed the lesser crime, farther than in relation to that which they esteemed the greater. (1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 19; Flower's Case, 5 Rep. 99 a.)

But it is to be observed, that perjury or subornation in an action depending by indictment or criminal information, is not within this statute; but only in an action depending by writ, action, bill, complaint, or information. (3 Inst. 164.)

A party must be aggrieved.

Half to the Party grieved.—It hath been collected from this clause, that no false oath is within the meaning of this statute which doth not give some person a just cause of complaint: and upon this ground it hath been said, that he who swears a thing which is true, but not known by him to be so, is not within this statute; because, howsoever heinous his offence may be in its own nature, yet when it proves in the event to be in maintenance of the truth, it cannot be said to give him a just cause of complaint, who would take advantage against another from his want of legal evidence to make out the justice of his cause. Also from the same ground it seemeth clearly to follow that no false oath can be within the statute, unless the party against whom it was sworn suffered some kind of disadvantage by it; for otherwise it cannot be said that any one was grieved by it; and therefore, in every prosecution upon this statute, it must appear upon the trial that there was such a suit depending, wherein the party might be prejudiced in the manner supposed. (1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 23.)

(a) See stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 138, post; "Pillory;" and stat. 3 Geo. IV. c. 114, "Hard Labour," Vol. III.

Justices at their Quarter Sessions.]—And one justice (Mr. Dalton says) may bind the offender over to the sessions. (Dalt. c. 70.) Justices at sessions.

But because the prosecution upon this statute is more difficult than by indictment at the common law, and some one must be aggrieved by the offence, offenders are seldom prosecuted upon this statute, especially at the sessions; and it seems generally the safer way to proceed by indictment at the common law, at the assizes, or in the Court of King's Bench.

Shall not restrain.]—From this it seemeth undoubtedly to follow, that the Court of King's Bench, &c., proceeding upon an indictment or information of perjury or subornation of perjury at the common law, may not only set a discretionary fine on the offender, but also condemn him to the pillory, without making any inquiry concerning the value of his lands or goods. (1 Hawk. c. 69, s. 16.) Punishment.

The statute 5 Eliz. prescribes the punishment; and see further, as to the punishment, the 2 Geo. II. c. 25, ante, 170.

Either by Subornation or otherwise.]—It is not necessary to set forth in the indictment, whether the party took the false oath through the subornation of another, or without any such subornation, these words being only superfluity. (1 Haw. c. 69, s. 18.) Indictment.

Wilfully and Corruptly.]—These words are necessary in an indictment or action on this statute, and cannot be supplied by adding “against the form of the statute,” or by concluding “and so a wilful and corrupt perjury did commit.” (1 Hawk. c. 69 s. 17; and see R. v. Stevens, 5 B. & Cres. 246; R. v. Richards, 7 D. & R. 665; ante, 164.)

An indictment for perjury cannot be maintained, where the supposed perjury depends on the construction of a deed; but the remedy is by a civil action, if the defendant acted inconsistently with the obligation entered into. (R. v. Crespigny, 1 Esp. 280.)

Like other indictments upon statutes, the indictment should conclude “contra formam,” though, if this be omitted, it will be good as at common law, and the defendant may be punished with the penalties which would be inflicted if the act had not been referred to, but cannot be sentenced to the additional punishment prescribed in the statute. (2 Hale, 191, 2; Cro. C. C. 8th ed. 40. See observations in Deacon, C. D. 1008.)

In support of an indictment on the statute, the evidence should show that the affidavit, &c. was used conformably to the indictment. (R. v. Crossley, 7 T. R. 319.) Evidence.

The party injured is not it seems a competent witness. (Ante, 167.)

The prosecutor, unless he is also a witness, and his name appears as such on the back of the bill, cannot claim costs as a party grieved, if the indictment is at common law, but only when it is framed on the statute. (R. v. Doyle, 1 Esp. Rep. 126.) Costs.

V. Power and Duty of Justices in.

Power of justices of the peace therein.

Mr. Hawkins says, it hath been of late settled, that justices of the peace have no jurisdiction over perjury at the common law; the principal reason of which resolution, he says, as he apprehended, was, that inasmuch as the chief end of the institution of the office of these justices was for the preservation of the peace against personal wrongs and open violence, and the word trespass, (in the commission,) in its most proper and natural sense, is taken for such kind of injuries, it shall be understood in that sense only, or, at most, to extend to such other offences only as have a direct and immediate tendency to cause such breaches of the peace: as, libels and such like, which, on this account, have been adjudged indictable before justices of the peace. (2 Hawk. c. 8, s. 38.)

And in the case of R. v. Bainton, 2 Str. 1088, an indictment at the quarter sessions for perjury at the common law was quashed for want of jurisdiction; and was said to have been done so about three years before, in the case of R. and Westiness. (Et vide Reg. v. Yarrington, 1 Salk. 406.)

And an indictment found at the quarter sessions for perjury at common law is void, the sessions having no jurisdiction over the offence; and if an indictment so found is removed by certiorari, and the case comes down for trial at nisi prius, the judge will not try it. (R. v. Haynes, R. & M., N. P. C. 298.)

Justices of the peace have jurisdiction over perjury created by the 5 Eliz., ante, 171.

Though there does not seem to be any difference in the power of magistrates and judges to issue their warrants in cases of misdemeanor, and they have therefore a power so to do in perjury, as well as in other cases, yet in the practice of the London police-offices, no warrant is usually granted to apprehend a party accused of this offence, before an indictment has been found against him. But by stat. 23 Geo. II. c. 11, s. 3, the judge of assize (sitting the court, or within twenty-four hours after), may direct any witness, if there shall appear to him a reasonable cause, to be prosecuted for perjury; and may assign the party injured, or other person undertaking such prosecution, counsel, who are to do their duty gratis: and such prosecution, so directed, shall be carried on without any duty or fees whatsoever. And the clerk of assize, or other proper officer of the court, shall give gratis, to the party injured or prosecutor, a certificate of the same being directed, together with the names of the counsel assigned him, which certificate shall be sufficient proof of such prosecution being directed: provided that no such direction or certificate shall be given in evidence on the trial.

6. Forms.

Process.

Judges may direct prosecution for perjury.

D.* into your custody, in the same common gaol, and him there safely to keep, until he shall be thence delivered by due course of law. Herein fail you not. Given under my hand and seal, the day of , in the year of our Lord J. P.

(2.) Indictment for perjury in an affidavit to hold to bail made before a judge.

Central Criminal Court, to wit. The jurors for our lord the king upon their oath present, that C. D., late of the parish of , in the county of , labourer, wickedly and maliciously contriving and intending unjustly to aggrieve one A. B., and to put him to great expense, and also unjustly and maliciously to cause him to be arrested for the sum of 100l. by virtue of a certain writ of our lord the king, called a capias, to be sued out and prosecuted at the suit of the said C. D., out of the court of our said lord the king, before the king himself at Westminster, on the day of , in the year of the reign of our Lord the now king, William the Fourth, at [London, in the parish of St. Dunstan in the West, in the ward of Farringdon Without], and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, came in his proper person, before Sir R. B., Knight, then being one of the justices of the court of our lord the king, before the king himself, and then and there produced a certain affidavit in writing of the said C. D., and then and there before the said Sir R. B., Knight, in due form of law was sworn, and took his corporal oath upon the Holy Gospel of God, concerning the truth of the matters contained in the said affidavit (he the said Sir R. B., Knight, then and there having a lawful and competent power and authority to administer the said oath to the said C. D., in that behalf); and that the said C. D., being so sworn as aforesaid, not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil, then and there upon his oath aforesaid, before the said Sir R. B., Knight (the said Sir R. B., Knight, then and there having a lawful and competent power and authority to administer the said oath to the said C. D., in that behalf), falsely, corruptly, knowingly, wilfully, and maliciously, in and by his said affidavit in writing, did depose and swear, in substance and to the effect following, that is to say, that the said A. B. was then justly and truly indebted unto him the said C. D. in the sum of [100l.] for money lent and advanced [as in the affidavit] by the said C. D. to the said A. B., and at his the said A. B.'s request, [or the affidavit may be set out verbatim with innuendoes] as in and by the said affidavit of the said A. B. will more fully and at large appear. Whereas in truth and in fact the said A. B., at the time the said C. D. took his said oath and made his affidavit aforesaid, was not indebted to him the said C. D. in the sum of [100l.] for [money lent and advanced by the said C. D. to the said A. B.]; and whereas in truth and in fact the said A. B. was not then indebted to the said C. D. in the sum of [100l.] on any account whatsoever. And so the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do say, that the said C. D., on the day and year aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, before the said Sir R. B., Knight, (he the said Sir R. B., Knight, then and there having such power and authority as aforesaid,) by his own act and consent, and of his own most wicked and corrupt mind, in manner and form aforesaid, falsely, wickedly, wilfully, and corruptly did commit wilful and corrupt perjury; to the great displeasure of Almighty God, in contempt of our lord the king and his laws, to the great damage of the said A. B., to the evil example of all others, and against the peace of our said lord the king, his crown and dignity.

Conclusion.

(3.) The likewhere the affidavit was sworn before the filacer for Middlesex, in C. P. (a).]

Central Criminal Court, to wit. The jurors for our lord the king, upon their oath present, that C. king, before the king himself, the said court then and still being at W. aforesaid, in the said county of M., and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, and then and there offered himself to be, and became one of the bail of the said I. J., in the action aforesaid, and thereupon the said C. D. was then and there in due manner sworn in and by the said court to make true answer to all such questions as should be demanded of him the said C. D., the said court then and there having sufficient and competent authority to administer such oath to the said C. D. And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further say, that the said C. D., so being sworn as aforesaid, then and there, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, at Westminster aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, in the said court of our said lord the king, before the king himself, was interrogated concerning the circumstances and property of him the said C. D., and thereupon he the said C. D., not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil, in order to impose upon the said last mentioned court, and to prevent the said last mentioned court from knowing the true circumstances and property of him the said C. D., and his then and former situation in life, on the day and year aforesaid, at Westminster aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, and before the said court of our said lord the king, before the king himself, upon his corporal oath aforesaid, did say and depose, in substance and to the effect following, that is to say, that [he the said C. D. was possessed of 500l. worth of wine] whereas in truth and in fact, at the time of taking of the said oath, the said C. D. was [not possessed of 500l. worth of wine]. And the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do further present, that on the occasion, and at the time of the said C. D. so swearing and deposing as aforesaid, it then and there became and was material for the purpose of allowing the said C. D. to become, or disallowing him from becoming such bail as aforesaid, to ascertain the truth of the matters so sworn and deposed to by him as aforesaid. And so the jurors aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do say, that the said C. D., on the said, &c., at, &c. aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, upon his oath aforesaid, falsely, wickedly, and by his own act and consent did commit wilful and corrupt perjury, to the great displeasure of Almighty God, to the evil example of all others, and against the peace of our said lord the king, his crown and dignity.

Central Criminal Court, to wit. The jurors for our lord the king upon their oath present, that to wit, on the day of , in the year of the reign of our lord the now king, William the Fourth, a certain action had been brought and was depending in the court of our lord the king, before his majesty's justices of the bench at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, in which action one A. B. was plaintiff, and one B. C. then being in the custody of the warden of the Fleet was defendant. And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present that such proceedings were therein had, and that afterwards, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, to wit, at London, in the parish of , the said B. C. by one J. T. his attorney in that behalf gave the said A. B. notice, that is to say, to Messrs. , his attornies in that behalf, that T. S. of H. in the county of , gentleman, and H. B. of L. in the county of , gentleman, would, on then instant, become bail for the said defendant in the said action, and would on the same day justify themselves before the Honourable Sir Joseph Littledale, knight, at his chambers in Serjeant's Inn, as good and sufficient bail for the said defendant, in the said cause: That the said T. S. was a housekeeper and had been resident at his said place of abode at H. aforesaid for the last six months, and that the said H. B. was a housekeeper and had been resident at his said place of abode at L. aforesaid for the last six months. And the jurors aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid do further present, that in pursuance of the said notice, and whilst the said action was depending as aforesaid, to wit, on the day of , at , the said T. S., late of , labourer, did come and appear in his own proper person before the said Sir Joseph Littledale before mentioned, then being one of the justices of the court of our said lord the king, before the king himself at Westminster, and duly authorized and empowered in that behalf according to the form of the statute in such case made and provided, at his chambers in Serjeant's Inn at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, and then and there offered himself to become bail for the said B. C. in the said action, and then and there before the said Sir J. L. aforesaid offered to justify himself as such bail; and in order that he might be and become such bail, and to justify himself as such, and to be allowed and approved of by the said court of our said lord the king of the Bench as such bail, the said T. S. was then and there on that occasion before the said Sir J. L. so being such justice as aforesaid, and duly authorized and empowered in that behalf, duly sworn and took his corporal oath upon the holy gospel of God, that he the said T. S. would true answer make to all such questions as should be demanded of him in that behalf, the said Sir J. L. then and there having sufficient power and authority to administer the said oath to the said T. S. in that behalf. And the jurors aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid do further present, that the said T. S. being so sworn as aforesaid, then and there before the said Sir J. L. upon the occasion aforesaid, was interrogated concerning the circumstances and property of the said T. S., and thereupon he the said T. S. not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being seduced by the instigation of the devil, did then and there before the said Sir J. L. upon his oath aforesaid, falsely, wickedly, wilfully, and corruptly answer and say, depose and swear in substance and effect, that he was possessed of property consisting of household furniture in his house at H. aforesaid, and that the same was worth 800l., and that the same had been paid for, and that he had never been in prison for debt; whereas in truth and in fact, the said T. S. at the time of his so deposing and swearing as aforesaid, was not possessed of any property consisting of household furniture in his house at H. aforesaid of the worth of 800l., nor was he then possessed of any property whatever of the worth of 800l. nor was he then possessed of any property whatever in any house at H. aforesaid, nor had he then any house whatever at H. aforesaid. And whereas in truth and in fact, the said T. S. at the time of his so deposing and swearing as aforesaid had been in prison for debt in this to wit, that to wit, on the day of he was in the custody of in the prison of and detained in such custody in the said prison, in a certain action before then brought and then pending in the court of by one against the said T. S. for the recovery of a certain debt, amounting to wit to £ , and for and in respect of which the said T. S. was so detained in custody as aforesaid. And the jurors aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid do further present, that on the occasion of the said T. S. so deposing and swearing as aforesaid, it became and was material for the purpose of allowing him to become, or disallowing him from becoming such bail as aforesaid, to ascertain the truth of the matters so by him deposed and sworn to as aforesaid. And so the jurors aforesaid upon their oath aforesaid do say, that the said T. S. on the said day of in the year of the reign aforesaid, at London aforesaid, in the parish and ward aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, before the said Sir J. L. duly authorized and empowered as aforesaid to administer the said oath to the said T. S., falsely, maliciously, and wickedly in manner and form aforesaid, did commit wilful and corrupt perjury, to the great displeasure of Almighty God, in contempt of our said lord the king and his laws, to the great damage of the said A. B., and against the peace of our said lord the king, his crown and dignity.

Central Criminal Court, to wit. The jurors for our lord the king upon their oath present, that heretofore, to wit, on the day of in the year of the reign of our lord the now king William the Fourth, in the court of our said lord the king, before the king himself at Westminster, a certain issue was joined in the said court of our said lord the king, before the king himself, in a certain action wherein one A. one G. H., late of the parish of _____ in the county of _____ labourer, did then and there, to wit, on the day and year aforesaid, at the parish of St. Margaret, within the liberty of Westminster, in the said county of Middlesex, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, appear and was produced as a witness for and on behalf of the said A. B., and that the said G. H. did then and there, before the said Thomas Lord Denman, the chief justice aforesaid, take his corporal oath, and was then and there duly sworn upon the Holy Gospel of God, that the evidence which he the said G. H. should give to the court and jury sworn between the parties aforesaid, touching the matters in question on the said issue, should be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth (he the said Thomas Lord Denman, the chief justice aforesaid, then and there having competent power and authority to administer the said oath to the said G. H. in that behalf); and then and there, upon the trial of the said issue, and for the purpose thereof, it became and was material to ascertain the truth of the matter hereafter alleged to have been sworn and deposed to by the said G. H.; and that thereupon the said G. H., being so produced and sworn as aforesaid, devising and wickedly intending to cause and procure a verdict to pass against the said C. D. and E. F. for the said A. B. on the trial of the said issue, and not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil, did then and there, to wit, on the said, &c. at the parish aforesaid, in the liberty and county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court aforesaid, before the said Thomas Lord Denman, the chief justice aforesaid, falsely, maliciously, wilfully, wickedly, and corruptly, and by his own proper act and consent, depose, swear, and give evidence, amongst other things, to the jurors of the said jury so sworn between the said parties as aforesaid, in substance and to the effect as follows: that is to say, that [the said C. D. and E. F. both struck the said A. B. on the 14th January, A.D. 1836.] Whereas, in truth and in fact, [the said C. D. and E. F. did not, nor did either of them, ever strike the said A. B. on the 14th January, A.D. 1836, or at any other time.] And so the jurors first aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do say, that the said G. H., at and upon the said trial of the said issue, and on the said, &c. aforesaid, at the parish of St. Margaret, within the liberty aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, before the said Thomas Lord Denman, the chief justice aforesaid, so as aforesaid having sufficient power and authority to administer the said oath to the said G. H. in that behalf, by his own proper act and consent, and of his own most wicked and corrupt mind, in manner and form aforesaid, did falsely, wickedly, and corruptly, upon his oath aforesaid, commit wilful and corrupt perjury, in contempt of our said lord the king and his laws, to the evil example of all others, and against the peace of our said lord the king, his crown and dignity.

before the king himself, a certain issue in due manner joined in the said court of our said lord the king, before the king himself, between our said lord the king and one C. D., upon a certain indictment then depending against him, the said C. D., for wilful and corrupt perjury, came on to be tried, and was then and there, in due form of law, tried by a certain jury of the country, in due manner sworn and taken for that purpose, and that at and upon the trial of the said issue, one E. F., late of the parish of _____ in the county of _____ labourer, did then and there, to wit, on the _____ day of _____ in the _____ year of the reign of our lord the now king William the Fourth, at, &c. in the great hall of pleas there, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, appear and was produced as a witness for and on the behalf of our said lord the king, against the said C. D., upon the trial of the said issue, and the said E. F. was then and there duly sworn, and did then and there take his corporal oath upon the Holy Gospel of God, as such witness as aforesaid, before the said Thomas Lord Denman, the chief justice aforesaid, that the evidence which he, the said E. F., should give to the court and jury sworn between our said lord the king and the said C. D. should be the truth, the whole truth, and nothing but the truth (the said Thomas Lord Denman, the chief justice aforesaid, then and there having competent authority to administer the said oath to the said E. F. in that behalf); and the said E. F. being so sworn as aforesaid, it then and there, upon the trial of the said issue, became and was material to ascertain the truth of the matters hereafter alleged to have been sworn and deposed to by the said E. F. And the jurors first aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that the said E. F., not having the fear of God before his eyes, but being moved and seduced by the instigation of the devil, and minding and corruptly and maliciously intending to injure and aggrieve the said C. D., and to cause and procure him to be convicted of the wilful and corrupt perjury whereof he then stood indicted as aforesaid, and to subject him to the pains and penalties by the laws of this realm inflicted on persons guilty of that crime, then and there, to wit, on the trial of the said issue, at the said sitting of nisi prius so holden as aforesaid, upon his oath aforesaid, before the said Thomas Lord Denman, the chief justice aforesaid, then and there having such competent authority to administer the said oath as aforesaid, falsely, wickedly, maliciously, knowingly, wilfully, and corruptly did say, depose, swear, and give evidence, amongst other things, in substance and to the effect following, that is to say, that, &c. [Here set out the substance of the false evidence,] whereas in truth and in fact, &c. [Here assign the perjury.] And so the jurors first aforesaid, on their oath aforesaid, do say, that the said E. F. then and there, to wit, at the said sitting of nisi prius holden as aforesaid, on, &c., at Westminster aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, in the great hall of pleas there, called Westminster Hall, at and upon the trial of the said issue, in open court, upon his oath aforesaid, before the said Thomas Lord Denman, the chief justice aforesaid, then and there having such competent power to administer the said oath as aforesaid, in manner and form aforesaid, falsely, &c. [June,] in the [6th] year of the reign of our Sovereign Lord the now King William the Fourth, at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, did falsely, corruptly, knowingly, wilfully, and wickedly, solicit, suborn, and procure one H. G. to go into the court of our said lord the king, before the king himself, the said court then and still being holden at Westminster, in the county aforesaid, and to produce to the said court a certain affidavit in writing of the said H. G., to be exhibited to the said court, for the purpose last aforesaid, and in and by the said affidavit falsely to swear and depose, to and before the said court, that the said A. B. was justly and truly indebted unto the said C. D. in the sum of [35l. and upwards, on a bill of exchange drawn by the said A. B. upon and accepted by one P. G., and payable to the order of the said A. B., at a certain day then past, and by the said A. B. indorsed to one J. S., and by the said J. S. indorsed to the said C. D.] And the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do further present, that in consequence and by the means, encouragement, and effect of the said wicked and corrupt subornation and procurement of the said C. D., he, the said H. G., afterwards, to wit, on the said [29th] day of [June,] in the year aforesaid, did go in his proper person into the said court of our said lord the king, before the king himself, the said court then and still being holden at Westminster, in the county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, and did then and there produce to the said court the said affidavit in writing of the said H. G., to be exhibited to the said court, for the purpose aforesaid; and the said H. G. then and there was sworn, and took his corporal oath, before the said court, on the Holy Gospel of God, the said court then and there having a lawful and competent authority to take and receive the said affidavit and administer the said oath to the said H. G. in that behalf; and the said H. G. being so sworn as aforesaid, by the means and in consequence of the said wicked solicitation, subornation, and procurement of the said C. D., for the purpose aforesaid, did then and there, upon his oath aforesaid, before the said court as aforesaid, falsely, wickedly, wilfully, and corruptly, depose and swear in and by the said affidavit in writing, in substance and to the effect following, that is to say, that the said A. B. then was justly and truly indebted unto the said C. D. in the sum of [35l. and upwards, on a bill of exchange, drawn by the said A. B. upon and accepted by one B. G., and payable to the order of the said A. B., at a certain day then past, and by the said A. B. indorsed to one J. S., and by the said J. S. indorsed to the said C. D.]; whereas in truth and in fact the said A. B. was not, at the time of making the said affidavit, by the said H. G., as aforesaid, indebted to the said C. D. in the sum of [35l. and upwards, in the said affidavit mentioned, on the said bill of exchange drawn by the said A. B. upon and accepted by one B. G., and indorsed to the said J. S., and by him indorsed to the said C. D.,] or on any other bill of exchange whatever. And whereas, in truth and in fact, the said A. B. was not, at the time of making the affidavit as aforesaid, or at any other time, indebted to the said C. D. in the said sum of [35l.] on any account whatever; and whereas, in truth and in fact, he, the said A. B., did not, at the time of making of the affidavit as aforesaid, owe to the said C. D. the said sum of [35l.,] or any part thereof, or any other sum of money whatsoever, which he, the said C. D., at the time of soliciting, suborning, and procuring the said H. G. wilfully, corruptly, and falsely to swear, as aforesaid, well knew, to wit, at Westminster aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court. And so the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do say, that the said C. D., on the said 29th day of June aforesaid, at Westminster aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, and within the jurisdiction of the said Central Criminal Court, did falsely, corruptly, knowingly, wilfully, and wickedly, suborn and procure the said H. G. to commit wilful and corrupt perjury, in and by his oath aforesaid, taken in the open court of our said lord the king, before the king himself, the same court then and there having lawful and competent authority to administer such oath to the said H. G. in that behalf, to the great displeasure of Almighty God, in contempt of our said lord the king and his laws, to the evil example of all others, and against the peace of our said lord the king, his crown and dignity.

Petition.

Tumultuous petitioning.

BY the 13 Car. II. c. 5, no person shall solicit above twenty hands to any petition to the king, or either house of Parliament, for alteration of matters established by law in church or state, unless the matter thereof hath been consented to by three or more justices of the county, or by the major part of the grand jury at the assizes or sessions; or, if arising in London, by the lord mayor, aldermen, and common council; nor shall present any such petition, accompanied with more than ten persons, on pain of a sum not exceeding 100*l.* and three months' imprisonment, on conviction at the assizes or sessions in six months, and proved by two witnesses.

But this shall not extend to debar any persons (not above ten in number) to present any complaint to any member of Parliament after his election, and during the continuance of Parliament, or to the king for any remedy to be thereupon had; nor to any address to the king by the Parliament. Pewter, and other Metals.

DURING the reigns of Henry VII. and VIII., and Edw. VI., five different statutes (19 Hen. VII. c. 6; 4 Hen. VIII. c. 7; 25 Hen. VIII. c. 9; 33 Hen. VIII. c. 4; 2 & 3 Edw. VI. c. 37) were passed for the purpose of preventing as well the importation of manufactured goods of tin or pewter, as the exportation of any brass, copper, or other metals (tin and pewter only excepted), in an unmanufactured state; as also to prevent any goods being manufactured within this kingdom of tin, pewter, or brass, of inferior quality to what they ought to be, on pain of forfeiting half to the king, and half to the finder. 2 Dick. 419.

By the 19 Hen. VII. c. 6, the master and wardens of the craft of Pewterers, and, where there are none such, the head and governors of the city or borough, might appoint searchers; and the justices at Michaelmas sessions were to appoint two persons, having experience therein, to search within the county; and of all such unlawful pewter or brass as they should find, half went to the king, and half to the searchers.

In default of the master and wardens not searching, any person, having sufficient knowledge in the said occupation, by oversight of the mayor or other head officer of the cities or boroughs, might search. Id.

But now, by 3 Geo. IV. c. 41, s. 2, 4, these several statutes are repealed.

Physicians, Surgeons, and Apothecaries.

No person within London, or seven miles thereof, shall practise as a physician or surgeon without licence from the bishop of London, or dean of St. Paul's; who are to call to their assistance four doctors of physic, on examination of the persons, before granted; and in the country, without licence from the bishop of the diocese, on pain of forfeiting 5*l.* a month. (Stat. 3 Hen. VIII., c. 11.) Physicians.

The charter for incorporating the College of Physicians is confirmed: they have power to choose a president, and have perpetual succession, a common seal, ability to purchase lands, &c. Eight of the chiefs of the college are to be called elects, who from among themselves shall choose a president yearly; and if any practise physic in the said city, or within seven miles of it, without licence of the college, under their seal, he shall forfeit 5*l.* Also persons practising physic in other parts of England are to have letters testimonial from the president and three elects, unless they be graduate physicians of Oxford or Cambridge, &c. (14 & 15 Hen. VIII., c. 5, confirmed and enlarged by 1 Mary, st. 2, c. 9.)

The 32 Hen. VIII., c. 40, ordains that four physicians (called censors) shall be yearly chosen by the college, to search apothecaries' wares, and have an oath given them for that purpose by the president: apothecaries denying them entrance into their houses, &c., incur a forfeiture of 5*l.*, and physicians refusing to make the search, are liable to a penalty of 40*s.*; and every member of the College of Physicians is authorised to practise surgery.

In the case of Dr. Bonham, 7 Jac. I., is shown the power of the College of Physicians in punishing persons for practising physic without licence. They imprisoned the doctor for practising without licence; but it was adjudged that they could not lawfully do it; for in such case they had no power by the statute to commit, but they ought to sue for the penalty of 5*l.* per month, qui tam, &c. But in case of mal-practice, the censors have power to commit, for they may, in such case, fine and imprison by their charter, and they are judges of record, and not liable to an action for what they do by virtue of their judicial power. (8 Rep. 107; Carth. 494.)

One who has taken his degree of doctor of physic in either of the universities, may not practise in London, and within seven miles of the same, without licence from the College of Physicians, by reason of the charter of incorporation, confirmed by 14 & 15 Hen. VIII., c. 5, penned in very strong and negative words. As to the testimonials granted by the universities on a person's taking the doctor's degree, these may have the nature of a recommendation, and give a man a fair reputation, but confer no right, consequently those statutes which have confirmed the privileges of the universities would revive or confirm nothing but the reputation that this testimonial might give such graduates; and as to the last clause of this statute, that "none shall practise in the country without a licence from the president and three elects, unless he be a graduate of one of the universities," all the inference from that would be, that possibly two licences may be necessary where a person is not a graduate. In the case of Dr. Levet, lord chief justice Holt did not think this question worth being found specially. The College of Physicians, without doubt, are more competent judges of the qualifications of a physician than the universities; and there may be many reasons for taking particular care of those who practise physic in London. (10 Mod. 353, 354.)

The statute of 14 & 15 Hen. VIII., c. 5, appointing and regulating the College of Physicians, is a public act. (Physicians' College v. Harrison, M. & M. 191.)

A doctor of physic, who has been licensed by the college to practise physic in London, and within seven miles, cannot claim, as a matter of right, to be examined by the college, in order to his being admitted a fellow of the college. (Rex v. Physicians' College, 7 T. R. 282.)

Physicians.

A mandamus will not lie to the College of Physicians, commanding them to examine a doctor of physic who has been licensed, in order to his being admitted a fellow of the college. (Id.)

The college, who have power by their charter (confirmed by act of parliament) to make bye-laws, have made bye-laws respecting the qualifications of persons to be admitted into their college; it is ordained by them that no person shall be admitted into the class of candidates before admission into the college, unless he has taken a degree of M.D. at Oxford, Cambridge, or Dublin, except in two cases; in one of those cases, the president may propose, once in every other year, a doctor of physic, of a certain standing, and if he be approved by the college, he may be admitted a fellow; in the other, any fellow may propose a doctor of physic, of a certain age or standing, and, if approved at certain meetings, he may be admitted a fellow.—Ruled, that these were reasonable bye-laws. (Id.)

Candidates, to be admitted of the college, are to be examined by the comitia majora, and elected by them before they can claim to be admitted. (Rex v. Askew, 4 Burr. 2186.)

It is questionable whether the licentiates in physic have in general a right to demand admission into the college. (Rex v. Physicians' College, 5 Burr. 2740.)

A doctor, who is not a member, has no right to inspect the books of the College of Physicians. (West v. Physicians' College, 1 Wils. 240; 5 Mod. 395.)

An apothecary, and freeman of London, attended a patient, and made up and administered proper medicines to him, but without having a licence from the faculty, or the direction of a physician, or demanding or taking any fee for his advice:—it was held, that this did not amount to a practising of physic within the meaning of the statute, 14 & 15 Hen. VIII., c. 5. (Rose v. Physicians' College, in error, 5 Bro. P. C. 553.)

It is clear that a physician cannot maintain an action for his fees; for, like those of a barrister, the fee is a quiddam honorarium. (Chorley v. Bolcot, 4 T. R. 317.)

If a medical practitioner write prescriptions, and pass himself off as a physician, although he have no diploma, and no right to assume that character, he cannot maintain an action for fees as a surgeon. (Lipscombe v. Holmes, 2 Camp. 441.)

Whether physicians are exempted from offices.

By the 32 Hen. VIII., c. 40, s. 1, the president of the commonalty and fellowship of the faculty of physic in London, and the commons and fellows of the same, shall be discharged of watch and ward there, and shall not be chosen constable or any other officer.

Yet it seems to have been holden, that the equity of this act doth not extend to other physicians not mentioned in it; perhaps for this reason, because physicians have no such special custom for their discharge as surgeons are said to have. (2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 44.)

And it seemeth that a practising physician, being chosen constable in pursuance of a custom in respect of his lands in a town, has no remedy for his discharge; for that there are no precedents of this kind, and his calling is private: yet, if he be chosen constable of a town, which hath sufficient persons beside to execute this office, and no special custom concerning it, perhaps he may be relieved by the King's Bench. (2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 41.)

By the 6 Geo. IV., c. 50, s. 2, members and licentiates of the College of Physicians, in London, are exempt from serving on juries. See "Jurors," Vol. III.

Surgeons.]—It is enacted by the statute 3 Hen. VIII., c. 11, s. 1, that no one shall act as a surgeon (i. e. for profit; see 34 & 35 Hen. VIII., c. 8, s. 3; Com. Dig. tit. Physicians (D.)); also, as to the College of Surgeons, &c. 18 Geo. II., c. 15) within the city of London, or seven miles around, unless he be examined and licensed by the College of Surgeons, under the penalty of 5*l.* per month. Upon this statute, Lord Ellenborough appeared to have been of opinion (Gremare v. Le Clerc Bois Valon, 2 Campb. 144), that as it contains no distinct prohibitory clause, a person may, though unlicensed, maintain an action for business done by him as a surgeon within the limits. (See, however, Beasley v. Bignold, 5 B. & Al. 335; Edgar v. Hunter, Holt, N. P. R. 528.) His lordship thought, that at any rate it was incumbent upon the defendant in such action to prove that the plaintiff was not regularly licensed according to the statute. (Gremare v. Le Clerc Bois Valon, 2 Campb. 146; sed vide Blogg v. Pinkers, 1 R. & M. 125.)

If a surgeon furnish a bill to his patient, leaving a blank for his charge for attendance, and the patient pay a certain sum on that account, the surgeon, as he made no specific charge, is bound by the sum so paid, and can recover no more. (Tuson v. Batting, 3 Esp. R. 192.)

In Allison v. Haydon, 4 Bingh. 619; 1 M. & P. 588; 3 C. & P. 246, S. C., it was held, that a surgeon, who is not an apothecary, cannot sue for medicine furnished by him during his attendance on a patient labouring under typhus fever, which cannot be considered a surgical case. The being a member of, and having a certificate from, the College of Surgeons, does not qualify the party to act as an apothecary in a case strictly within the sole province of an apothecary. Best, C. J., said, "In the infancy of medical science, surgeons were mere operators; and by the statute 32 Hen. VIII., c. 42, the barbers and surgeons of London were incorporated together, and made one company; but when the two corporations were made separate and distinct by statute 18 Geo. II., c. 15, by which examiners were appointed to examine and admit surgeons, &c., the latter became a more honourable profession, and moved in a higher grade. The province of a surgeon has properly been said to be confined to the reduction and cure of fractures and other injuries affecting the limbs, or such external ailments as may require the operation of the knife, and it cannot be extended to internal complaints, or local diseases. Whatever medicine may be necessary for the purpose of removing a complaint which it is the duty of a surgeon to attend to and cure, he might perhaps be allowed to recover for, but he is not entitled to recover unless the medicine he administered be clearly ancillary to his duty as a surgeon." (See Chit. jun. on Contracts, 437.)

Exemptions from Offices, &c.]—By the 6 & 7 Will. III. c. 4, s. 2, apothecaries within London and seven miles thereof, and also apothecaries in any other place who have served seven years' apprenticeship, shall be exempted from the office of constable, scavenger, overseer of the poor, and all other parish, ward, and leet offices.

Apothecaries

offices.

See also, as to surgeons and apothecaries being exempt from juries, the 6 Geo. IV. c. 50, s. 2 (ante, "Jurors," Vol. III.), which repeals the 6 & 7 Will. III. c. 4, and 5 Hen. VIII. c. 6, as to jurors.

By the 5 Hen. VIII. c. 6, surgeons shall be discharged of the constableness, watch, and all manner of office bearing any armour.

And, by the 18 Geo. II. c. 15, s. 10, all freemen of the Surgeons' Company in London shall be exempted from the office of constable, scavenger, overseer of the poor, and other parish, ward, and leet offices, and from serving on juries and inquests.

Mr. Hawkins, speaking of the former of these statutes, says, it seems by the equity thereof, and the ancient custom of the realm, all surgeons have been allowed the like privilege: that is, whether in London or elsewhere. (2 Hawk. c. 10, s. 43.)

Apothecaries.]—The 55 Geo. III. c. 194, “for better regulating the practice of Apothecaries throughout England and Wales,” s. 1, recites the first charter of James I. to the Apothecaries’ Company, and that some of the clauses and provisions contained in the said charter, so far as the same regard the said society of Apothecaries, have been found inadequate for the purposes thereby intended; and enacts, that the said charter of James I., and all the powers, penalties, and regulations, &c., therein contained (except such parts thereof as are hereby altered, varied, or repealed), shall be, and the same is, hereby declared to be in full force, &c.

By sect. 2, so much of recited charter as directs the master and wardens, &c., to enter the shops of apothecaries, and to examine their medicines, &c., and to impose penalties, is repealed.

Sect. 3. And, in lieu thereof, the master, wardens, and society, of apothecaries, and their successors, or any of the assistants, or persons properly qualified [viz. s. 4, for London and 30 miles around, being a member of the Society of Apothecaries of at least 10 years’ standing, and all other parts of England and Wales, an apothecary in actual practice for at least ten years], to be by the master and wardens nominated, not being fewer in number than two persons, may at all reasonable times, in the day-time, as often as to the said masters and wardens it shall seem expedient, enter into any shop of any apothecary in England and Wales, and search, survey, prove, and determine, if the medicines, simple or compound, wares, drugs, or things whatsoever therein contained, and belonging to the art or mystery of apothecaries, be wholesome, meet, and fit for the cure, health, and ease, of his majesty’s subjects; and all such medicines, &c., which they shall find false, unlawful, deceitful, stale, unwholesome, corrupt, pernicious, or hurtful, shall and may burn, or otherwise destroy; and also shall report to the master, wardens, and assistants of the said society, the name of such person as shall be found to have the same in possession; and the said master, wardens, and assistants, shall and may impose and levy the following fines and penalties upon every person whose names shall be so reported to them as hereinafter mentioned: for the first offence, 5*l.*; for the second offence, 10*l.*; and for the third and every other offence, 20*l.*

And, by the 1 Mar. Sess. II. c. 9, s. 6, all justices, mayors, sheriffs, bailiffs, constables, and other officers, in London, shall assist the president of the College of Physicians, and persons by them authorised, in searching for faulty apothecary wares.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 194, s. 5. And whereas it is the duty (a) of every person, using or exercising the art and mystery of an apothecary, to prepare with exactness and to dispense such medicines as may be directed for the sick by any physician lawfully licensed to practise physic by the president and commonalty of the faculty of physic in London, or by either of the two universities of Oxford or Cambridge; therefore, for the further protection, security, and benefit of his majesty’s subjects, and for the better regulation of the practice of physic throughout England and Wales, it is enacted, that if any person using or exercising the art and mystery of an apothecary, shall at any time knowingly, wilfully, and contumaciously, refuse to make, mix, compound, prepare, give, apply, or administer, or any way to sell, set on sale, put forth, or put to sale, to any person or persons whatever, any medicines, compound medicines, or medicinale compositions, or shall de-mix, compound, prepare, give, apply, or administer, or any way sell, set on sale, put forth, or put to sale to any person or persons whatever, any medicines, compound medicines, or medicinal compositions, as directed by any prescription, order, or receipt, signed with the initials, in his own handwriting, of any physician so lawfully licensed to practise physic, such person or persons so offending shall, upon complaint made within twenty-one days by such physician, and upon conviction of such offence before any of his majesty's justices of the peace, unless such offender can show some satisfactory reason, excuse, or justification, in this behalf, forfeit, for the first offence, the sum of 5*l.*; for the second offence, the sum of 10*l.*; and for the third offence he shall forfeit his certificate, and be rendered incapable in future of using or exercising the art and mystery of an apothecary, and be liable to the penalty inflicted by this act upon all who practise as such without a certificate, in the same manner as if such party so convicted had never been furnished with a certificate enabling him to practise as an apothecary; and such offender, so deprived of his certificate, shall be rendered and deemed incapable in future of receiving and holding any fresh certificate, unless the said party so applying for a renewal of his certificate shall faithfully promise and undertake, and give good and sufficient security, that he will not in future be guilty of the like offence.

Sect. 14. And, to prevent any person from practising as an apothecary, without being properly qualified to practise as such, it is enacted, that, after the 1st day of August, 1815, it shall not be lawful for any person (except persons already in practice as such) to practise as an apothecary in any part of England or Wales, unless he shall have been examined by the court of examiners, or the major part of them, and have received a certificate of his being duly qualified to practise as such from the said court of examiners, or the major part of them (a), who are hereby authorized and required to examine all persons applying to them, for the purpose of ascertaining the skill and abilities of such persons in the science and practice of medicine, and their fitness and qualification to practise as an apothecary; and the said court of examiners, or the major part of them, are hereby empowered either to reject such person, or to grant a certificate of such examination, and of his qualification to practise as an apothecary, as aforesaid: provided always that no person shall be admitted to such examination until he shall have attained the full age of 21 years.

Persons not to practise as apothecaries, &c., without due examination.

Sect. 15. No person shall be admitted to any such examination for a certificate to practise as an apothecary, unless he shall have served an apprenticeship of not less than five years to an apothecary, and unless he shall produce testimonials, to the satisfaction of the court of examiners, of a sufficient medical education, and of a good moral conduct.

Applicants for examination to produce testimonials.

Sect. 20. If any person (except such as are then actually practising as such) shall, after the 1st August, 1815, act or practise as an apothecary in any part of England or Wales, without having obtained such certificate, as aforesaid, every person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 20*l.*; and if any person (except such as are then acting as such, and excepting persons who have actually served an apprenticeship, as aforesaid) shall, after the said 1st of August, 1815, act as an assistant to an apothecary to compound and dispense medicines, without having obtained such certificate, as aforesaid, every person so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 5*l.* (a).

Penalty for acting without a certificate (a).

(a) In an action against a person for practising as an apothecary without a certificate, the proof of the certificate, or the exception as to practising before the 1st of August, 1815, rests on defendant. (Apoth. Comp. v. Bently, R. & M., C. N. P. 159; 1 C. & P. 538; 5 B. & Ald. 949, S. C.)

Practising as an apothecary, is the mixing up and preparing medicines prescribed either by a physician or by any other person, or by the apothecary himself. The acting as a surgeon or accoucheur is not practising as an apothecary; nor would the party supplying medicine to a friend be so. But if the party sought Apothecaries not to recover charges, unless duly licensed.

Sect. 21. And no apothecary shall be allowed to recover any charges claimed by him in any court of law, unless he shall prove on the trial that he was in practice as an apothecary prior to or on the 1st of August, 1815, or that he has obtained a certificate to practise as an apothecary from the said master, wardens, and society of apothecaries, as aforesaid (a).

his living by practising as an apothecary that is sufficient, as it is not essential that he should have gained his whole livelihood by his practice. (Woodward v. Ball, 6 Car. & P. 577.)

If an apprentice to an apothecary live in a house of his master's, at a distance from his master's residence, and attend patients there for his master, this is a practising as an apothecary within the 20th sect. of the above act, though his master occasionally comes to the place, and is consulted by the apprentice as to the patients. (Apothecaries' Company v. Greenwood, 2 B. & Ad. 708.)

A person who advises patients, and compounds and sells the medicines recommended by himself, but does not make up physicians' prescriptions, is liable to the penalties of the above act, 55 Geo. III., for practising as an apothecary without a certificate. (Apoth. Comp. v. Allen, 4 B. & Ad. 625; 1 Nev. & Man. 413.)

Practising while under the service of another, though for the party's own benefit, is not a practising within the act. (Brown v. Robinson, 1 C. & P. 264.) And the apothecary should show instances of compounding and making up prescriptions: merely attending local complaints is not sufficient. (Thompson v. Lewis, M. & M., C. N. P. 255; 3 C. & P. 483, S. C.)

In an action for a libel on the plaintiff, who had served upwards of three years as house apothecary at a public infirmary, before the 55 Geo. III. c. 194, it was held that such service was sufficient to qualify him as an apothecary, without proof of apprenticeship, or production of a certificate, in conformity with the statute. (Wogan v. Somerville, 1 Moore, 102; 7 Taunt. 401, S. C.)

But where it appeared that the defendant, who was sued for the penalty, never had or could have made up physicians' prescriptions prior to the 1st Aug. 1815, this was held to be cogent evidence to be left to the jury, and that they did right in finding that he had not practised as an apothecary, although he had administered medicines to the patients before that period. (Apoth. Comp. v. Warburton, 3 B. & Ald. 40.)

Nor is it sufficient, to bring a party within the exception, to show that, previously to and on the 12th of July, 1815, (when the act received the royal assent), he was practising as an apothecary; but he must show that he was so practising on the 1st of August, 1815. (Apoth. Comp. v. Roby, 5 B. & Ald. 949; 1 Dowl. & Ry. 564.)

In an action to recover the amount of an apothecary's bill, the plaintiff who, under this act, proves a certificate from the Society of Apothecaries, need not also prove an apprenticeship served. (Sherwin v. Smith, 1 Bing. 204; 8 Moore, 30, S. C.)

A person authorized to practise as a physician by diploma from a Scotch university, is not thereby exempted from the penalty imposed by 55 Geo. III. c. 194, s. 20, for practising as an apothecary in England or Wales without the certificate required by that act. (Apoth. Comp. v. Collins, 4 B. & Ad. 604; 5 Car. & P. 519; 1 N. & M. 401, S. C.)

(a) If, in an action on an apothecary's bill, the plaintiff fail to prove himself qualified within the act, he cannot recover even for the phials in which the medicines were supplied. (Steed v. Henley, 1 C. & P. 574.)

In an action by a payee of a promissory note, expressed to be "in consideration of the plaintiff's care and medical attendance bestowed on the maker," it was held that the plaintiff, to recover, must bring himself within section 21. (Blogg v. Pinkers, R. & M., C. N. P. 125.)

A general certificate of qualification to practise, without limitation as to time or place, is sufficient to enable an apothecary to sue for medicines, &c., furnished to patients in London; though the receipt indorsed on the certificate is for four guineas, and paid after the commencement of the action. (Chadwick v. Bunning, R. & M., C. N. P. 306.)

An apothecary may charge for attendance, or for the medicines he sends, but he cannot charge for both. (Towne v. Lady Gresley, 3 C. & P. 581.) A surgeon may recover for attendance. (Poucher v. Norman, 3 B. & C. 745; 5 D. & R. 648, S. C.) A surgeon and apothecary may recover for attendance as well as medicines. (Handey v. Houson, 4 C. & P. 110.)

A member of the Royal College of Surgeons cannot sue for medicines furnished, unless he be also certificated by the Apothecaries' Company. (Allison v. Haydon, 1 M. & P. 588; 3 C. & P. 246, S. C.)

Sect. 24. All sums of money which shall arise from the granting of certificates of examination shall be appropriated and disposed off by the said master, wardens, and society of apothecaries, in such manner as they shall, from time to time, direct and deem most expedient. 55 Geo. 3, c. 194.

Sect. 25. All sums arising from conviction and recovery of penalties for offences committed against this act, shall be applied and disposed of in manner following: viz. one half to the informer, and one half thereof to the said master, wardens, and society of apothecaries, to be disposed of in such manner as they shall deem most expedient. Application of monies arising from certificates.
Application of monies arising from penalties.

Sect. 26. All penalties and forfeitures by this act imposed (the manner of levying and recovering whereof is not otherwise directed) shall, if they exceed the sum of 5*l.*, be recovered by action, in the name of the master, wardens, and society of apothecaries, of the city of London, in any of his majesty's courts of record in England or Wales, &c.; and, if such penalty or forfeiture shall amount to less than the sum of 5*l.*, the same shall be levied and recovered by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the offender, by warrant under the hand and seal of any justice of the peace, acting for any county, city, town, or place where the offence shall be committed (which warrant such justice is hereby empowered and required to grant, upon the confession of the party, or upon the evidence of any credible witness upon oath, and which oath such justice is hereby empowered to administer), and the overplus (if any) of the money arising by such distress and sale shall be returned to the owner of such goods and chattels, after deducting the costs and charges of making, keeping, and selling the distress; and, in case sufficient distress shall not be found, or such forfeitures and penalties shall not be paid forthwith, it shall be lawful for such justice, and he is hereby authorised and required, by warrant under his hand and seal, to cause the offender to be committed to the common gaol for the county, city, town, or place where the offence shall be committed, there to remain without bail or mainprize for any time not exceeding one calendar month, unless such penalties, and forfeitures, and costs, shall be sooner fully paid and satisfied. Recovery of fines and penalties.

Sect. 27. And where any distress shall be made for any sum of money to be levied by virtue of this act, the distress itself shall not be deemed unlawful, nor the party making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the notice or information, summons, conviction, warrant, or distress, or other proceeding, relating thereto; nor shall the party distraining be deemed a trespasser ab initio, on account of any irregularity which shall be afterwards done by the party so distraining; but the person aggrieved by such irregularity may recover full satisfaction for the special damage, in an action upon the case. Distress not unlawful for want of form.
Party not a trespasser ab initio.

Sect. 28. Nothing in this act contained shall extend in any way to affect the trade or business of a chemist and druggist in the buying, preparing, compounding, dispensing, and vending drugs, medicines, and medicinal compounds, wholesale and retail; but all persons using or exercising the said trade or business, or who shall or may hereafter use or exercise the same, may use, exercise, and carry on the same trade or business, in such Act not to affect chemists and druggists.

such medicine as is necessarily furnished in a surgical case. (Id.)

As to who is a surgeon. (See Id.)

Surgeons and apothecaries must use a due and reasonable degree of skill and diligence. (Slater v. Baker, 2 Wils. 359; Seare v. Prentice, 8 East, 348; see Hancke v. Hooper, 7 Car. & P. 81.) And if the patient be injured in consequence of gross ill-treatment of his case the apothecary or surgeon guilty of it cannot recover his charges. (3 Stark. C. N. P. 6; Black v. Ld. Braybrook,

2 Stark. C. N. P. 8.) But, if improper remedies are adopted, or unfit medicines are administered, under the advice of a physician, the surgeon or apothecary is, at all events, entitled to be paid. (Kannen v. M. Mullen, Peake, Rep. 59.)

If a surgeon furnish a bill, leaving a blank for his charge for attendance, and the patient pay a certain sum on that account, the surgeon, as he made no specific charge, is bound by the sum so paid, and can recover no more. (Inson v. Batting, 3 Esp. 192; sed query.) manner, and as fully and amply, to all intents and purposes, as the same trade or business was used, exercised, or carried on, by chemists and druggists before the passing of this act. (See ante, 189.)

Sect. 29. Nothing in this act contained shall extend to prejudice or in anywise to interfere with any of the rights, privileges, &c., of the two Universities of Oxford or Cambridge, the royal College of Physicians, the royal College of Surgeons, or the said Society of Apothecaries, except such as shall or may have been altered or amended by this act, or of any person practising as an apothecary previously to the 1st day of August, 1815.

Sect. 30. No action or suit shall be brought or prosecuted against any person, bodies politic, corporate, or collegiate, for anything done in pursuance of this act, after six calendar months next after the fact committed; or, in case there shall be a continuation of damages, then after six calendar months next after such damage shall have ceased; and every such action shall be laid and brought in the county where the matter in dispute shall arise; and the defendant recovering shall have double costs.

The 6 Geo. IV. c. 133, explaining and amending the preceding act, and containing other regulations and provisions as to apothecaries, remained in force only till the 1st August, 1826, and has not been renewed.

Pillory and Tumbrel.

Pillory, what.

PILLORY (in Latin, collistrigium, from the person's neck being put between two boards) is a very ancient punishment, in this kingdom, and was used heretofore by the Saxons. (3 Inst. 219.)

Tumbrel, what.

The tumbrel seemeth to have been anciently the same with the ducking-stool; an engine for the punishment of scolding women, by ducking them over head and ears in water, and especially in muddy or stinking water, according to the etymology of Lord Coke, who tells us that the word tumbrel signifieth a dung-cart. (Lamb. 61; 3 Inst. 219.)

Who shall find them.

Every one that hath a leet or market ought to have a pillory and tumbrel to punish offenders; and it seems that a leet may be forfeited for not taking care to have a pillory and tumbrel. (3 Inst. 219; 2 Haw. c. 11, s. 5.)

Infamy of the punishment.

They that have been adjudged to the pillory or tumbrel are so infamous that they shall not be received to be jurors or witnesses. (3 Inst. 219.)

Judgment of pillory to be awarded for certain offences only.

Stat. 56 Geo. III. c. 138, reciting that, "as the punishment of the pillory has in many cases been found inexpedient, and not fully to answer the purpose for which it was intended," enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act judgment shall not be given and awarded against any person or persons convicted of any offence, that such person or persons do stand in or upon the pillory, except for the offences hereinafter mentioned; any law, statute, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding: provided that all laws now in force whereby any person is subject to punishment for the taking any false oath, or for committing any manner of corrupt and wilful perjury, or for the procuring and suborning any other person so to do, or for wilfully, falsely, and corruptly affirming or declaring, or procuring or suborning any other person so to affirm and declare, in any matter or thing which, if the same had been deposed in the usual form, would have amounted to wilful and corrupt perjury, shall continue and be in full force and effect; and that all persons guilty of any of the said several offences shall incur and suffer the same punishment, penalties, and forfeitures as such persons were subject to by the laws and statutes of this realm, or any of them, before the passing of this act, and as if this act had not been made." 56 Geo. III. c. 138.

Sect. 2. "In all cases where the punishment of the pillory has hitherto formed the whole or a part of the judgment to be pronounced, it shall and may be lawful for the court before whom such offence is tried, to pass such sentence of fine or imprisonment, or of both, in lieu of the sentence of pillory, as to the said court shall seem most proper: provided that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend in any manner to change, alter, or affect, any punishment whatsoever which may now be by law inflicted in respect of any offence, except only the punishment of pillory, in manner as herein-above is directed." Court may fine or imprison offenders. Not to change any punishment for offences, except pillory.

Piracy.

AT common law, the offence of piracy consists in committing those acts of robbery and depredation upon the high seas, which, if committed on land, would have amounted to felony there. (1 Russ. 100.) At common law.

Where several mariners on board a ship lying near the Groyne seized the captain, he not agreeing with them, and, having put him on shore, carried away the ship, and afterwards committed several piracies, this force upon the captain, and the carrying away the ship, which was explained by the use of it afterwards, was adjudged piracy. (R. v. May and others, 2 East, P. C. 796; 2 Russ. 103.)

If persons at sea force the captain of a vessel to sell part of his cargo for less than its value, it is piracy. (Kinloch v. Craig, 3 T. R. 783; see 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15, s. 4.) But if a pirate attack a vessel, and before he obtains possession of her, the captain, in order to redeem her, give an oath to pay a sum certain, this is no piracy, for there was no taking. (Molloy, 64, s. 18.) But if there be an actual taking, it is piracy, although the pirate afterwards allow the party to proceed on his voyage. (1 Sir L. Jenk. 98.)

If a party making a capture at sea, do so by the authority of any prince or state, it cannot be considered piracy; for a nation never can be deemed pirates: fixed domain, public revenue, and a certain form of government, exempt a people from that character. Even a capture by authority of the states of Algiers, Tunis, or Tripoli, cannot be treated as piracy. (2 Sir L. Jenk. 790; Grot. 2, c. 18, s. 2; but see now 11 & 12 Wil. III. c. 7, infra, and 18 Geo. II. c. 30, s. 1, post, 198.)

If the subjects of the same state commit robbery upon each other, upon the high sea, it is piracy. If the subjects of different states commit robbery upon each other, upon the high sea, if their respective states be in amity, it is piracy; if at enmity, it is not; for it is a general rule, that enemies never can commit piracy on each other, their depredations being deemed mere acts of hostility. (1 Sir L. Jenk. 94; 4 Inst. 154.) See further, "Robbery," post.

A variety of offences have been made piracies by different statutes.

By statute.

Thus the 11 & 12 Wil. III. c. 7, s. 8, (made perpetual by the 6 Geo. I. c. 19,) enacts, that, "if any of his majesty's natural-born subjects or denizens of this King's subjects, &c. committing kingdom shall commit any piracy or robbery, or any act or hostility, against others his majesty's subjects, upon the sea, under colour of any commission from any foreign prince or state, or pretence of authority from any person whatsoever, such offender and offenders, and every of them, shall be deemed, adjudged, and taken to be pirates, felons, and robbers; and they and every of them, being duly convicted thereof, according to this act, or the aforesaid statute of King Henry VIII. (28 Hen. VIII. c. 15,) shall have and suffer such pains of death, loss of lands, goods, and chattels, as pirates, felons, and robbers, upon the seas, ought to have and suffer." [But see now as to the punishment and consequences, post, 199.]

Sect. 9. "If any commander or master of any ship, or any seaman or mariner, shall, in any place where the admiral hath jurisdiction, betray his trust, and turn pirate, enemy, or rebel, and piratically and feloniously run away with his or their ship or ships, or any barge, boat, ordnance, ammunition, goods, or merchandizes, or yield them up voluntarily to any pirate, or shall bring any seducing messages from any pirate, enemy, or rebel, or consult, combine, or confederate with, or attempt or endeavour to corrupt, any commander, master, officer, or mariner, to yield up or run away with any ship, goods, or merchandizes, or turn pirate, or go over to pirates;" "or make or endeavour to make a revolt in the ship, (he) shall be adjudged, deemed, and taken to be a pirate, felon, and robber, and, being convicted thereof according to the directions of this act, shall have and suffer pains of death, loss of lands, goods, and chattels, as pirates, felons, and robbers, upon the seas, ought to have and suffer." [See now as to the consequences and punishment, post, 199.]

It has been decided that making, or endeavouring to make, a revolt, with a view to procure a redress of grievances, and without any intent to run away with the ship, or to commit any act of piracy, is an offence within the ninth section of this statute. (R. v. Hastings, R. & M. C. C. 82.)

Sect. 10, reciting that "several evil-disposed persons, in the plantations and elsewhere, have contributed very much towards the increase and encouragement of pirates, by setting them forth, and by aiding, abetting, receiving, and concealing them and their goods, and there being some defects in the laws for bringing such evil-disposed persons to condign punishment:" enacts, "that all and every person and persons whatsoever, who, after the 29th day of September, in the year of our Lord 1700, shall, either on the land or upon the seas, knowingly or wittingly set forth any pirate, or aid and assist, or maintain, procure, command, counsel, or devise any person or persons whatsoever, to do or commit any piracies or robberies upon the seas, and such person and persons shall thereupon do or commit any such piracy or robbery, then all and every such person or persons whatsoever, so as aforesaid setting forth any pirate, or aiding, assisting, maintaining, procuring, commanding, counselling, or advising the same, either on the land or upon the sea, shall be and are hereby declared, and shall be deemed and adjudged to be, accessory to such piracy and robbery done and committed; and further, that after any piracy or robbery is or shall be committed by any pirate or robber whatsoever, every person and persons, who, knowing that such pirate or robber has done or committed such piracy and robbery, shall, on the land or upon the sea, receive, entertain, or conceal any such pirate or robber, or receive or take into his custody, any ship, vessel, goods, or chattels, which have been by any such pirate or robber piratically and feloniously taken, shall be, and are hereby likewise declared, deemed, and adjudged to be, accessory to such piracy and robbery; and that, after the said 29th day of September, all such accessories to such piracies and robberies shall and may be inquired of, tried, heard, determined, and adjudged, after the common course of the laws of this land, according to the said statute made in the twenty-eighth year of King Henry VIII. as the principals of such piracies and robberies may and ought to be, and not otherwise; and, being thereupon attainted, shall suffer such pains of death, losses of lands, goods, and chattels, and in like manner, as the principals of such piracies, robberies, and felonies, ought to suffer, according to the said statute of King Henry VIII., which is hereby declared to be and continue in full force, any thing in this present act contained to the contrary notwithstanding." 11 & 12 W. 3, c. 7.

Sect. 12. "And for the better and more effectual prevention of combinations and confederacies for the running away with or destroying of any ship, goods, or merchandize: be it further enacted by the authority aforesaid, that a reward of 10*l.* for every ship or vessel of one hundred tons or under, and 15*l.* for every ship or vessel of a greater burden, shall be paid by the captain, commander, or master of every ship or vessel, wherein any such combination or confederacy shall be set on foot for the running away with or destroying any such ship, or the goods and merchandizes therein laden, to such person as shall first make a discovery thereof, upon due proof of such combination or confederacy; the same to be paid at the port where the wages of the seamen of the said ship are or ought to be paid, after such discovery and proof made."

Reward to discover any combination for running away with ship, &c.

Sect. 16. How commissions to the cinque ports shall be directed. See "Admiralty," Vol. I.

Seamen deserting merchant ships to lose their wages.

Sect. 17. For the prevention of seamen deserting of merchant ships abroad, in parts beyond the seas, which is the chief occasion of their turning pirates, and of great detriment to trade and navigation in general, it is enacted, "that all such seamen, officers, or sailors, who shall desert the ships or vessels wherein they are hired to serve for that voyage, shall for such offence forfeit all such wages as shall be then due to him or them."

By the 1 Geo. I. c. 24, (made perpetual by 2 Geo. II. c. 28,) sect. 1, reciting that "the number of persons committing piracies, felonies, and robberies upon the seas, is of late very much increased; and, notwithstanding the laws already made and now in being, many idle and profligate persons have turned pirates, and betaken themselves to that wicked course of life, whereby the trade and navigation into remote parts will greatly suffer, unless some further provision be speedily made for bringing such persons, and all others, who shall be any ways aiding and assisting, or in confederacy with them, to condign punishment;" it is enacted, "that if any commander or master of any ship or vessel, or any other person or persons shall, from and after the 25th day of March, which shall be in the year of our lord 1722, anywise trade with any pirate, by truck, barter, exchange, or in any other manner, or shall furnish any pirate, felon, or robber upon the seas, with any ammunition, provision, or stores of any kind, or shall fit out any ship or vessel knowingly, and with a design to trade with, or supply or correspond with any pirate, felon, or robber upon the seas; or if any person or persons shall anyways consult, combine, confederate, or correspond with any pirate, felon, or robber on the seas, knowing him to be guilty of any such piracy, felony, or robbery, such offender and offenders, and every of them, shall in each and every of the said cases be deemed, adjudged, and taken to be guilty of piracy, felony, and robbery, and he and they shall and may be inquired of, tried, heard, and adjudged of, and for all or any the matters aforesaid, according to the 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15, and the 11 & 12 Wil. III. c. 7, and he and they, being convicted of all or any the matters aforesaid, shall suffer such pains of death, loss of lands, goods and chattels, as pirates, felons, and robbers upon the seas ought to suffer; and in case any person or persons belonging to any ship or vessel whatsoever, upon meeting any merchant ship or vessel on the high seas, or in any port, haven, or creek whatsoever, shall forcibly board or enter into such ship or vessel, and though they do not seize and carry off such ship or vessel, shall throw overboard or destroy any part of the goods or merchandizes belonging to such ship or vessel, the person or persons who shall be guilty thereof, shall in all respects be deemed and punished as pirates as aforesaid."

Trading with pirates, furnishing them with stores, corresponding with them, &c.

Forcibly boarding any merchant ship, and throwing any goods overboard.

Sect. 3, reciting that there are some defects in the laws for bringing persons who are accessories to piracy and robbery upon the seas to condign punishment, if the principal who committed such piracy and robbery is not or cannot be apprehended and brought to justice, enacts, "that all and every person and persons whatsoever, who, by the said statute made in the

Sect. 4, excluded offenders from the benefit of clergy. [See now as to the consequences and punishment, post, 199.]

Sect. 6. "Masters or seamen, not defending themselves against pirates, or who shall utter any discouraging words, shall, if the ship be taken, forfeit their wages to the owners, and suffer six months' imprisonment."

18 Geo. 2, c. 30.

By the 18 Geo. II. c. 30, s. 1, reciting that, by an act made in the eleventh year of King William III., intituled, "An Act for the more effectual Suppression of Piracy," it is (amongst other things) enacted, "that all piracies, felonies, and robberies committed on the sea, or in any haven, river, creek, or place where the admiral or admirals have power, authority, or jurisdiction, may be examined, inquired of, tried, and determined and adjudged, according to the directions of the said act, in any place at sea, or upon the land, in any of his majesty's islands, plantations, colonies, dominions, forts, or factories, to be appointed for that purpose by the king's commission, in the manner therein directed; and it is also thereby further enacted, that if any of his majesty's natural-born subjects, or denizens of this kingdom, shall commit any piracy or robbery, or any act of hostility, against others of his majesty's subjects, upon the sea, under colour of any commission from any foreign prince or state, or pretence of authority from any person whatsoever, such offenders shall be deemed pirates, felons, and robbers; and they, being duly convicted, according to the said act, or according to an act of the twenty-eighth year of the reign of King Henry VIII. therein recited, shall have and suffer such pains of death, loss of lands, goods, and chattels, as pirates, felons, and robbers upon the seas ought to have and suffer; and whereas, since the present wars with France and Spain, divers of his majesty's natural-born subjects have entered in the service of his majesty's enemies, on board privateers or other ships, having commissions from the crowns of France and Spain, and committed divers hostilities against his majesty's subjects upon the seas, in the West Indies and other parts; and whereas doubts have arisen, whether, as such offenders have, by such their adherence to the king's enemies, been guilty of high treason, they can be deemed guilty of felony, within the intent of the said act, and, as such, liable to be tried by the said court of admiralty, appointed, or to be appointed, by virtue of the said act: therefore, to put an end to the said doubts, and to prevent the inconveniences that must arise, by the want of speedy justice on such offenders," it is enacted, that all persons, being natural-born subjects, or denizens of his majesty, who, during the present or any future wars, have committed, or shall commit, any hostilities upon the sea, or in any haven, river, creek, or place, where the admiral or admirals have power, authority, or jurisdiction, against his majesty's subjects, by virtue or under colour of any commission from any of his majesty's enemies, or have been or shall be any other ways adherent, or giving aid or comfort to his majesty's enemies upon the sea, or in any haven, river, creek, or place, where the admiral or admirals have power, authority, or jurisdiction, may be tried as pirates, felons, and robbers in the said Court of Admiralty, on shipboard, or upon the land, in the same manner as persons guilty of piracy, felony, and robbery, are by the said act directed to be tried; and such persons, being upon such trial convicted thereof, shall suffer such pains of death, loss of lands, goods, and chattels, as any other pirates, Subjects or denizens, during any wars, committing hostilities at sea, against his majesty's subjects, where the admirals have power, or giving aid, &c. to enemies at sea, may be tried as pirates.

felons, and robbers ought, by virtue of the said recited act of the eleventh year of King William III., or any other act, to suffer." [See now as to the consequences and punishments, infra.] 18 Geo. 2, c. 30.

Sect. 2. "Any person who shall be tried and acquitted, or convicted, according to this act, for any of the said crimes, shall not be liable to be indicted, prosecuted, or tried again in Great Britain, or elsewhere, for the same crime or fact, as high treason." Not to be tried again for the same crime as high treason.

Sect. 3. Nothing in this act contained shall be construed to extend to prevent any persons guilty of any of the said crimes, who shall not be tried according to this act, from being tried for high treason within this realm, according to the aforesaid act of the twenty-eighth year of King Henry VIII. Criminals not tried by this act, may be tried for high treason by 28 H. 8, c. 5.

By 5 Geo. IV. c. 113, s. 9, "if any subject or subjects of his majesty, or any person or persons residing or being within any of the dominions, forts, settlements, factories, or territories, now or hereafter belonging to his majesty, or being in his majesty's occupation or possession, or under the government of the united company of merchants of England, trading to the East Indies, shall, except in such cases as are in and by this act permitted, after the first day of January, 1825, upon the high seas, or in any haven, river, creek, or place, where the admiral has jurisdiction, knowingly and wilfully carry away, convey, or remove, or aid and assist in carrying away, conveying, or removing, any person or persons as a slave or slaves, or for the purpose of his, her, or their being imported or brought as a slave or slaves, into any island, colony, country, territory, or place whatsoever, or for the purpose of his, her, or their being sold, transferred, used, or dealt with as a slave or slaves, or shall, after the said first day of January, 1825, except in such cases as are in and by this act permitted, upon the high seas, or within the jurisdiction aforesaid, knowingly and wilfully ship, embark, receive, detain, or confine, or assist in shipping, embarking, receiving, detaining, or confining on board any ship, vessel, or boat, any person or persons for the purpose of his, her, or their being carried away, conveyed or removed, as a slave or slaves, or for the purpose of his, her, or their being imported or brought as a slave or slaves into any island, colony, country, territory, or place whatsoever, or for the purpose of his, her, or their being sold, transferred, used, or dealt with as a slave or slaves, then, and in every such case, the person or persons so offending shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of piracy, felony, and robbery, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death without benefit of clergy, and loss of lands, goods, and chattels, as pirates, felons, and robbers upon the seas, ought to suffer." [See now as to the punishment, infra.] Dealing in slaves on high seas, &c. to be deemed piracy.

By 28 Hen. VIII. c. 15, s. 2, 3, piracy at common law is punishable with death, and with loss of lands and goods in the same manner as upon an attainder for robbery upon land. The 39 Geo. III. c. 39, s. 1, however, made offences committed within the jurisdiction of the admiralty, punishable in the same manner as if they had been committed on land. The 1 Geo. IV. c. 90, s. 1, extended to such offences the benefit of clergy, as if committed on land; and the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 12, enacted that "all offences prosecuted in the High Court of Admiralty of England should, upon every first and subsequent conviction, be subject to the same punishment whether of death or otherwise, as if such offences had been committed upon the land." Plague and Quarantine.

THE performance of quarantine, or forty days' probation, when ships arrive from countries infected with contagious disorders, is of the highest importance, as it affects the public health of the nation, and has been enforced from time to time by various legislative enactments. (4 Bla. Com. 161. See 1 Chit. Commercial Law.)

6 Geo. 4, c. 78.

Repeal of former statutes.

What vessels shall be liable to quarantine.

The principal statute upon this subject now in force, is the 6 Geo. IV. c. 78. By that act, "all acts and parts of acts of Parliament, relating to the performance of quarantine," are repealed, and other regulations enacted in their stead, for the disobedience of which various pecuniary penalties are inflicted.

By s. 2, "All vessels, as well his majesty's ships of war as others coming from any place from whence his majesty, by the advice of his privy council, shall have adjudged it probable that the plague, or other infectious disease, may be brought, and all vessels and boats receiving any person, goods, or any other article whatsoever, out of any vessel so coming from such infected place, whether such persons, goods, or other articles shall have come in such vessels, or such persons shall have gone, or articles have been put on board the same either before or after the arrival of such vessels at any port or place in the United Kingdom, or the Islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Alderney, Sark, or Man, and whether such vessels were or were not bound to any port or place in the United Kingdom or the islands aforesaid, and all persons, goods, or any other article whatsoever, on board of any vessels so coming from such infected place, or on board of any such receiving vessels or boats, shall be liable to quarantine from the time of the departure of such vessels from such infected place, or from the time when such persons, goods, or other articles, shall have been received on board respectively, and all such vessels and boats as aforesaid, and all persons, (as well pilots as others,) goods, and all other articles as aforesaid, whether coming in such vessels or boats from such infected place, or going on board the same either before or after the arrival of such vessels or boats at any port or place in the United Kingdom, or the islands aforesaid, and all persons, goods, and other articles as aforesaid, on board such receiving vessel or boat, shall, upon their arrival at any such port or place, be obliged to perform quarantine in such place or places, for such time and in such manner as shall from time to time be directed by his majesty, by his order in council, and that, until such vessels and boats, persons, goods, and other articles, shall have respectively performed, and shall be duly discharged from quarantine, no such person, goods, or other articles, shall come on shore or be put on board any other vessel or boat in order to come on shore, although such vessels so coming from such infected place as aforesaid, may not be bound to any port or place in the United Kingdom, or the islands aforesaid, unless in such manner and in such cases and by such licence as shall be directed or permitted by such order or orders made by his majesty in council; and all such vessels and boats, whether coming from such infected place as aforesaid, or being otherwise liable to quarantine as aforesaid, and all persons, (as well pilots as others,) goods, wares, and merchandize, and other articles as aforesaid, whether coming or brought in such vessels or boats, or going or being put on board the same, either before or after the arrival of such vessels or boats at any port or place in the United Kingdom or the islands aforesaid, and although such vessels or boats shall not be bound to any port or place in the United Kingdom or the islands aforesaid, and all commanders, masters, or other persons having the charge or command of any such vessels or boats, whether coming from any infected place or being otherwise liable to quarantine as aforesaid, shall be subject to all provisions, rules, regulations, and restrictions, contained in this act, or in any order or orders which shall be made by his majesty, his heirs, and successors, in council as aforesaid, concerning quarantine and the prevention of infection, and to all the pains, penalties, forfeitures, and punishments contained in this act, for any breach or disobedience thereof, or of any order or orders of his majesty in council, made under the authority thereof."

Sect. 3. "It shall be lawful for his majesty, by his order in council, or for the privy council or any two of them, by their order, as often as they may see reason to apprehend that the yellow fever or other highly infectious distemper prevails on the continent of America or in the West Indies, to require that every vessel coming from any port or place on the continent of America or in the West Indies, shall come to an anchor at certain places, to be appointed by the commissioners of his majesty's customs, for the purpose of having the state of health of the crew of such vessel ascertained before such vessel shall be permitted to enter the port whereto she shall be bound, or any other port of the United Kingdom; but that such vessel shall not be deemed liable to quarantine unless it shall be afterwards specially ordered under that restraint."

Power for privy council to order vessels coming from America or the West Indies, when the yellow fever, &c., prevails there, to go to certain places without being liable to quarantine.

Sect. 4. "It shall be lawful for the lord lieutenant of Ireland, by his order or orders, made by the advice and consent of his majesty's privy council in Ireland, and notified by proclamation, to give directions, where the urgency of the case shall require, as to the place or places, and as to the time and manner in which ships and vessels arriving, and persons, goods, and merchandizes coming or imported into any port or place in Ireland, shall make their quarantine in pursuance of the provisions of this act; and that until such ships, vessels, persons, goods, and merchandizes shall have respectively performed and been discharged from such quarantine, pursuant to the provisions of this act, it shall be lawful for any such persons, goods, or merchandizes, to come or be brought on shore, or to go or be put on board any other ship or vessel in any place in Ireland in such cases, and by such licence as shall be directed or permitted by any order or orders to be made by the lord lieutenant of Ireland, by the advice and consent of the privy council there, and notified as aforesaid; and that all such ships and vessels, and the persons or goods coming or imported in, or going and being put on board such ships or vessels, and all ships, vessels, boats, and persons receiving any goods or persons out of the same, and all persons going on board any such ship or vessels, shall be subject to such orders, rules, and directions concerning quarantine and the preventing infection, as shall be made from time to time by the lord lieutenant of Ireland in council, and shall be notified by proclamation as aforesaid; and that the proclamation in the Dublin Gazette of any order or orders of the lord lieutenant and council shall be deemed to be sufficient notice to all persons concerned of all matters contained in any such order or orders respectively."

Power to lord lieutenant, where the urgency of the case requires, to give directions by proclamation where vessels shall perform quarantine, &c.

6 Geo. 4. c. 78.

Regulations for vessels in which infection shall appear within or without the Straits of Gibraltar.

Sect. 5. Goods and vessels specified in any order of council are made subject to quarantine, as also all vessels arriving from any port under suspicious circumstances as to infection.

Sect. 6. The privy council may make such order as they shall think necessary upon emergencies.

Sect. 7. "If the plague or such other infectious disease shall appear on board any vessel within or without the Straits of Gibraltar, then the commander, master, or other person having the charge, shall immediately proceed to such place as his majesty by the advice of his council shall from time to time direct and appoint, where being arrived he shall make known his case to some officer of the customs there, who shall with all possible speed send intelligence thereof to the commissioners of the customs in the port of London, to the end that such precautions may be used to prevent the spreading of the infection as the case shall require; and the said vessel shall there remain until directions shall be given thereto by the lords or others of his majesty's privy council, or any two or more of them, nor shall any of the crew or passengers on board thereof go on shore, and such master, and every other person on board such vessel, shall obey such directions as he shall receive from the lords and others of his majesty's privy council or any two or more of them as aforesaid; and the said commander, master, or any other person on board such vessel as aforesaid, who shall not act conformably to the provisions and regulations herein directed, or shall act in disobedience to such directions as shall be received on board such vessel from the lords or others of the privy council, or any two or more of them as aforesaid, shall forfeit the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 8. Masters of vessels liable to quarantine are to make signals on meeting other vessels at sea, or being within two leagues of the United Kingdom or Guernsey, &c., on penalty of 100*l*.

Sect. 9. Masters of vessels are to hoist certain signals when plague or infectious disease on board, on penalty of 100*l*.

Sect. 10. Penalty on persons hoisting signals when not liable, 50*l*.

Sect. 11. Masters of vessels on their arrival, are to give to the pilots an account of the places at which they shall have loaded and touched, on penalty of 100*l*. Pilots are to give notice of any proclamation or order in council requiring the performance of quarantine, on penalty of 100*l*.

Sect. 12. Pilots are to give notice if any articles be on board liable to quarantine, on penalty of 100*l*. Penalty on pilots unduly conducting vessels to any other place than that appointed for their reception, 200*l*.

Sect. 13. Pilots, &c. are to bring to at request of officer of customs, on penalty of 100*l*.

Sect. 14. Regulations are made for better ascertaining whether vessels be actually infected, or the persons on board liable to orders touching quarantine; masters of vessels refusing to answer interrogatories, or answering untruly, &c., are to forfeit 200*l*.

Sect. 15. Vessels subject to quarantine arriving at any port than that at which it ought to be performed, may be forced to repair to the appointed place. Masters of vessels that have touched at infected places, &c., omitting to disclose the same, or omitting to hoist the prescribed signal, to forfeit 300*l*.

Sect. 16. Commanders are to deliver up bills of health, manifests, and log-book, to the superintendent of quarantine, on penalty of 100*l*.

Sect. 17. A penalty is imposed on masters, &c., quitting vessels, or permitting persons to quit them, or not conveying same to the appointed places, 400*l*. Penalty on persons coming in such vessels, or going on board and quitting them before discharged from quarantine, to suffer imprisonment for six months and forfeit 300*l*.

Sect. 18. For punishing disobedience or refractory behaviour in persons under or liable to quarantine, or persons having intercourse with them: persons refusing to repair to the lazarette or vessel, to forfeit 200*l*.

Sect. 19. Persons quitting vessels liable to perform quarantine, &c., may be seized.

Sect. 20. Intercourse with stations allotted for quarantine of vessels may be prohibited by order in council, and penalty for breach, 200*l*.

Sect. 21. Penalty on persons embezzling goods performing quarantine, neglecting or deserting their duty, or permitting persons, vessels, &c., to depart without authority, or giving false certificates, or damaging goods.

6 Geo. 4, c. 78.

Sect. 23. After proof of performance of quarantine, and proper certificate, vessels or persons, &c., are not to be liable to further detention.

Sect. 24. Goods liable to perform quarantine are to be opened and aired, as directed by order in council, and proof thereof is to be made, &c., and a certificate thereof is to be granted.

Sect. 25. Persons forging or uttering false certificates, required by order in council, guilty of felony. See "Forgery," Vol. II.

Sect. 26. Penalty on persons landing goods, &c., from vessels liable to perform quarantine, or receiving them or secreting them from vessels performing quarantine, 100*l*.

Sect. 27. His majesty in certain cases may prohibit vessels under one hundred tons from sailing until bond be given by the master with certain conditions. Penalty for sailing without giving such security, forfeiture of vessel, &c., 200*l*.

Sect. 28. Consuls and vice-consuls may administer oaths.

Sect. 29. Persons authorized to take examinations may administer oaths; false oaths incur the penalty of wilful and corrupt perjury.

Sects. 31, 32, 33, 34, relate to the recovery and application of penalties particularly specified in the act.

Sect. 35. "All offences committed against any of the provisions of this act for which no specific penalty, forfeiture, or punishment is provided by this act, shall and may be tried, heard, and determined before any three justices of the peace of the county, riding, division, city, or place where such offence or disobedience shall happen; and if any person shall be convicted of any such offence or disobedience, he or she shall be liable to such forfeiture and penalty, not exceeding the sum of 500*l*., for any offence, or to such imprisonment not exceeding twelve months for any one offence, as shall in the discretion of the three justices be judged proper; and such forfeiture and penalty shall be paid, two-thirds to the person suing for the same, and the remainder to his majesty, to be applied as the proceeds of other forfeitures and penalties are hereinbefore directed to be applied."

Offences not being felony, and offences for which no specific penalty is provided, may be determined before three justices, who may fine or imprison.

Application of penalties.

Sect. 36 enacts how far the answers of persons, having the charge of vessels, are to be received in evidence, and other matters as to evidence.

Sect. 37 relates to actions, &c. against persons for acts done under the statute.

Statutes 46 Geo. III. c. 98, 50 Geo. III. c. 20, and 51 Geo. III. c. 46, are repealed by the 6 Geo. IV. c. 78, and 6 Geo. IV. c. 105.

By 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 10, and 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 11, as amended by 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 27, provisions are made for the prevention of the disease called cholera. These acts are continued by the 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 75.

Cholera.

Plaint. See "County Court," Vol. I.

Plate.

TO prevent frauds in the true making of plate, it is enacted by the 12 & 13 Wil. III. c. 4, the 1 Anne, st. 1, c. 9, and 13 Geo. III. c. 52, that (besides the city of London) York, Exeter, Bristol, Chester, Norwich, Newcastle-upon-

Assayers.

Assayers.

Tyne, Sheffield, and Birmingham, shall be appointed for the assaying and marking of plate.

And the goldsmiths, silversmiths, and plateworkers in the said places, shall be incorporated into a company, and choose wardens yearly.

An assayer shall be elected by the company in each of the said places, who shall take an oath of office.

Maker to be entered with wardens of company.

By the said acts, every goldsmith, silversmith, and plateworker within the said places, and elsewhere, shall, before he takes upon him to exercise the said trade, enter his name, and mark, and place of abode, with the wardens of the company where an assayer is; and if he shall not make such entry, or shall strike any other mark but what is so entered, he shall forfeit double value, half to the king, and half to him that shall sue in any court of record in the county or place where the offence shall be committed.

Assaying.

Every goldsmith, silversmith, and plateworker, inhabiting where there is not an assayer, shall first fix his mark, and then send it to an assayer; and if it be found by the assayer to be of the fineness of the standard, then he shall mark it: and if any such person shall make any plate less in fineness than the standard, or put any to sale (except what by reason of its smallness is not capable of the touch) before it shall be assayed and marked, he shall forfeit the same or the value thereof.

And by the 24 Geo. III. c. 53, s. 4, every working gold or silversmith shall send to the Assay Office all plate made by him, to be touched or assayed, and with every parcel shall send a written note, containing the day of the month and year, the name of the maker, and place of his abode, and also the species in such parcel, and number of each species, with the total weight of each parcel, and the duty payable for the same.

Fineness by the standard.

As to the fineness thereof by the standard, it is enacted by the 6 Geo. I. c. 11, s. 41, that plate may be made, either according to the old standard (of 11 ounces and 2 pennyweights fine silver, in every pound troy), or according to the new standard (of 11 ounces and 10 pennyweights); but differently marked.

Mark.

That is to say, plate of 11 ounces and 2 pennyweights shall be marked with the maker's mark, viz. the first letters of his christian and surname, the mark of the Goldsmiths' Company in London, viz. the leopard's head, lion passant, and a distinct variable mark to denote the year (or, with the mark of the worker or maker, and with the mark appointed to be used by the assayers at the several respective places).

And by the 12 Geo. II. c. 26, s. 5, plate of 11 ounces and 10 pennyweights shall be marked with the maker's mark, viz. the first letters of his christian and surname; and the mark of the said company, viz. a lion's head erased, the figure of a woman, called Britannia, and the said mark or letter to denote the year (or, with the mark of the worker or maker, and the mark of one of the said cities or towns respectively).

Sect. 41. And it shall not be lawful to make any vessels of silver plate or manufactures of silver of a coarser alloy than what is herein specified, under the penalties and forfeitures prescribed by any of the laws now in being concerning wrought plate.

Additional mark.

And moreover, by the 24 Geo. III. c. 53, s. 1, 5, all plate shall be marked with a new mark of the king's head, beside the old marks, and the duties shall be paid previous to the marking thereof.

And by s. 8, no gold or silver plate shall be sold or exchanged until marked, on pain of 50*l*.

Allowance to be made.

But by s. 7, 10, the duties shall be returned for all plate defaced for being coarser than the standard (if no fraud appear). And an allowance of one-fifth part shall be made for goods sent to be assayed in a rough state.

Goods excepted.

And by s. 9, the said duties shall not extend to any jeweller's work other than mourning rings, nor to any jointed night ear-rings of gold, or gold springs of lockets, or to goods excepted by the 12 Geo. II. c. 26, s. 6.

Duties.

By the 55 Geo. III. c. 185, all former duties upon plate (except arrears) are repealed; and the following substituted in lieu thereof:—

Plate of gold made or wrought in Great Britain, and which shall or ought to be touched, assayed, and marked in Great Britain, for every ounce thereof, and so in proportion for any greater or less quantity 17s. per ounce. 55 Geo. 3. c. 185.

Exemption.—Gold watch-cases.

Plate of silver made or wrought in Great Britain, and which shall or ought to be touched, assayed, or marked in Great Britain, for every ounce thereof, and so in proportion for any greater or less quantity 1s. 6d. per ounce.

Exemptions.—All watch-cases, chains, necklace-beads, lockets, filigree work, shirt buckles or brooches, stamped medals, and spouts to china, stone or earthenware tea-pots, of silver, of any weight whatsoever:

Tippings, swages, or mounts, not weighing ten pennyweights of silver each, and not being necks or collars for castors, cruets, or glasses appertaining to any sort of stands or frames, wares of silver not weighing five pennyweights of silver each; but this exemption not to include necks, collars, and tops for castors, cruets, or glasses, appertaining to any sort of stands or frames; buttons to be affixed to or set on any wearing apparel, solid silver buttons, and solid studs, not having a bezelled edge soldered on, wrought seals, blank seals, bottle-tickets, shoe-clasps, patch-boxes, salt-spoons, salt-ladles, tea-spoons, tea-strainers, caddy-ladles, buckles, and pieces of garnish, cabinets, or knife-cases, or tea-chests, or bridles, or stands, or frames. Exemptions continued.

As to the offence of forging marks on plate, &c., and uttering forged marks, &c., see "Forgery," Vol. II. Forgery of.

R. v. Jackson, 1 Cowp. 297, 298. The defendant had been convicted upon the 28 Edw. I. c. 20 (the punishment of which is imprisonment and ransom at the king's pleasure) for making silver plate of worse alloy than the standard alloy of the realm. The indictment also contained a count upon the 6 Geo. I. c. 11, and the third for an offence at common law. He was found guilty upon all the counts. In Mich. 1774, motion was made in arrest of judgment, upon the ground of the 28 Edw. I. c. 20, being repealed, when the Court of King's Bench took time to consider and look into the acts of Parliament: Lord Mansfield declared the unanimous opinion of the court, that it "is in full force, and not repealed or abrogated by any of the subsequent statutes since enacted." His Lordship observed, that the preamble of the 12 Geo. II. c. 26, recites the 28 Edw. I. c. 20, and some other acts, as subsisting laws; but says not one word as to a repeal of any of the former laws. He farther instanced two similar cases decided by him, where sentence of fine and imprisonment was pronounced, and no objection was made in either case. "Therefore," said he, "I suppose it was taken for granted, as it is at this time by the Goldsmiths' Company, that the statute was still in force. We are all of opinion that it is in force, and, consequently, that the indictment is good." The rule for arresting judgment was discharged.

As to the licence for dealing in plate, see tit. "Excise," Plate, Vol. II. and the 6 Geo. IV. c. 118; 9 Geo. IV. c. 49, s. 12. Licence for dealing in.

Players and Playhouses.

IF we go back to a very ancient period in the history of the country, we shall find no trace of players existing: as we advance further in point of time, we ascertain from acts of Parliament, and other documents, that exhibitions of the stage did then take place under the protection, in some instances, of the king and nobles, sometimes in religious houses, and sometimes in towns, and other places, with the sanction of the governing local authorities. In the time of Elizabeth, players were declared by statute to be rogues and vagabonds, unless acting as the servants of some baron, or person of higher degree. The statute of 12 Ann. s. 2, c. 23, classed all common players of interludes among rogues and vagabonds, and to explain this (a), the act of 10 Geo. 2, c. 28, was passed ; by the first section of which it was enacted that every person who shall, for hire, gain, or reward, act, represent, or perform, or cause, &c., any play or other entertainment of the stage, or any part therein, if he shall not have any legal settlement where the same shall be acted, &c., without authority, by patent from the king or licence from the lord chamberlain, shall be deemed a rogue and a vagabond within the 12 Anne (which act is repealed, but the same was re-enacted by the 17 Geo. II. c. 5). But this provision is repealed by the 5 Geo. IV. c. 83 ; and players are no longer within the penalties of the Vagrant Act.

10 Geo. 2, c. 28.

Vagrant law.

Acting, &c. without licence.

By the 10 Geo. II. c. 28, sect. 2, "If any person having or not having a legal settlement, as aforesaid, shall, without such authority or licence, as aforesaid, act, represent, or perform, or cause to be acted, represented, or performed, for hire, gain, or reward, any interlude, tragedy, comedy, opera, play, farce, or other entertainment of the stage, or any part or parts therein, every such person shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 3. No person shall, for hire, gain, or reward, act, or cause to be acted, any new play, or any part therein, or any new part added to an old play, or any new prologue or epilogue, unless a true copy thereof be sent to the lord chamberlain fourteen days before the acting, together with an account when and where it is intended to be acted, signed by one of the managers.

The lord chamberlain may prohibit the same, as he thinks fit ; and if any such person shall, for hire, &c., act, or cause to be acted, without such copy being sent, or against such prohibition, he shall forfeit 50*l*., and the licence of the playhouse shall be void.

Sect. 5. And no person shall be authorised to act, except within the liberties of the city of Westminster, and where the king shall reside.

Sect. 6, all pecuniary penalties inflicted by this act may be recovered in the courts at Westminster, or before two justices, by the oath of one witness or confession, to be levied by distress ; and for want of sufficient distress, the offender to be committed to the house of correction for a time not exceeding six months, there to be kept to hard labour, or to the common gaol, not exceeding six months, without bail or mainprize. Persons aggrieved by order of the justices, may appeal to the next sessions. The said penalties to be distributed, half to the informer, or persons suing, and half to the poor.

Sect. 7, if any interlude, &c., (as supra), be acted, represented, or performed, in any place where wine, ale, beer, or other liquors, shall be sold or retailed, the same shall be deemed to be acted for gain, hire, and reward.

Sect. 8, prosecution to be within six calendar months. And the section provides as to actions for acts done under the statute.

By special acts of Parliament, playhouses are permitted to be erected in particular places.

What an offence within 10 Geo. 2, c. 28.

Tumbling is not an entertainment of the stage within the 10 Geo. II. c. 28, (R. v. Handy, 6 T. R. 286.) The defendant was convicted in the penalty of 50*l*., under the 10 Geo. II. c. 28, for acting, representing, and performing, a certain entertainment of the stage, called tumbling, &c., at Birmingham ; which conviction was removed by certiorari, in order to take the opinion of the court whether this offence came within the statute. Lord Kenyon, C. J. (inter alia), said, "I do not think that tumbling is an entertainment of the stage within the meaning of the act ; it might equally be said that fencing on a public stage is. By the third section of this act, a copy of the piece to be represented is to be sent to the lord chamberlain for his approbation, previous to the acting ; but no copy could have been given of this entertainment. This is a penal act, and cannot be extended to entertainments which did not exist when the act was made."

A conviction under the statute of 10 Geo. II. c. 28, s. 2, for performing without patent from the king, or licence from the lord chamberlain, at Manchester, is good ; it is for the defendant to show, if such be the fact, that he had a licence from the sessions. (R. v. J. G. Neville, 10 Geo. 2, c. 28. 1 B. & Ad. 489.)

(a) See per Lord Tenterden, C. J., in R. v. Neville, 1 B. & Ad. 494, post, 209.

A conviction by two justices under this statute having been affirmed on appeal, was, together with the order of sessions, removed into this court by certiorari, and confirmed. A levari facias issued out of this court for the penalty, and there was a return of nulla bona. The Court of King's Bench, not having authority to exercise the discretion given by the statute to the justices, as to the term of imprisonment, granted a procedendo to carry back to the sessions the record of conviction, and the order of sessions, and commanding the justices to enter continuances upon the appeal from session to session, and proceed to award execution. (R. v. Neville, 2 B. & Ad. 299.)

In the Court of King's Bench, on the sixth of December 1831, one Parsons recovered from one Chapman seven penalties of 50*l.* each, for performing and causing to be performed, during March, 1830, various regular plays, such as The Beggar's Opera, Cure for the Heart Ache, The Irish Tutor, at the Theatre in Tottenham-street, Tottenham Court-road, without having a licence, according to the 10 Geo. II. c. 28. Two legal objections were submitted on behalf of the defendant—first, that the plaintiff was bound to prove that the defendant had no licence; secondly, that by the second section of this act of 10 Geo. II. c. 28, on which this action was founded, the players came under the description of rogues and vagabonds; and if so, then the section was repealed by the subsequent general Vagrant Act of the 17 Geo. II.; or, if not repealed by that act, it was directly repealed by that of 3 Geo. III. c. 40.—Lord Tenterden was of opinion that the onus of proving a patent or licence lay on the defendant; and also, that under the second section of 10 Geo. II. c. 28, the players were not included under the description of rogues and vagabonds. The expression “offence” did there occur, but it was the offence of performing without licence, and not that of being rogues and vagabonds.

R. v. Glossop, 4 B. & Ald. 616. In a conviction of defendant for causing to be acted, at a certain place called the Cobourg Theatre, in the parish of St. Mary, Lambeth, for gain and reward, a certain entertainment of the stage, called Richard the Third, the evidence set forth was, that the defendant was seen once or twice at the rehearsals of Richard; that another person was stage-manager; that defendant engaged J. B. B. to perform, and gave him a check for the amount of his benefit: it was held that this was sufficient to warrant the justices in drawing the conclusion, that the defendant caused the play of Richard the Third to be performed. The conviction also stated, after the appearance and plea of defendant, that divers credible witnesses, to wit, J. B. B., &c., came before the justices upon their several oaths, to them severally and respectively, and in the presence of the said J. B. B., &c., duly administered: held that, taking it altogether, it did substantially appear that the oath was administered to the witnesses in the presence of the magistrates. The evidence also stated, that the Cobourg Theatre was in the parish of Lambeth, and the adjudication of the penalty was to the poor of the parish of St. Mary, Lambeth: it was held, that this was no variance, it not appearing that there were two distinct parishes so named. The conviction stated, “that on, &c., at, &c., C. W. W. came before two justices for the county of Surrey, and informed them that defendant, late of the parish of St. Mary, Lambeth, in the county of Surrey, in a certain place in the parish aforesaid, called the Royal Cobourg Theatre, without lawful authority of letters patent, and without licence from the Lord Chamberlain, did cause to be acted, for gain and reward, a certain entertainment of the stage, to wit, a certain tragedy called Richard the Third, or the Battle of Bosworth Field, &c., contrary to the statute,” &c. The conviction then stated the appearance of defendant, and plea of not guilty; and then proceeded thus: “Nevertheless, upon this same day and year last aforesaid, at the said police-office, Union Hall, in the said parish of St. Saviour aforesaid, divers credible witnesses, to wit, one John Tovey, one Junius Brutus Booth, and one William Allway, came before us, the said justices, upon their several oaths on the holy Gospel of God, to them severally and respectively now here, and in the presence of the said John Tovey, Junius Brutus Booth, and William Allway, respectively duly administered, depose, swear, and, in the presence of the said Joseph Glossop, upon their oaths aforesaid, severally affirm and say," &c. In the evidence it was stated that the Cobourg Theatre was in the parish of Lambeth, and that an alteration of the play of Richard the Third was acted there for money. As to the defendant's causing that play to be represented, the evidence stated was, that J. B. B. became acquainted with defendant as manager and proprietor of the Cobourg Theatre; that defendant was seen once or twice at the rehearsals of Richard; that another person was stage-manager; that J. B. B. engaged with defendant to perform several characters; that J. B. B. applied to defendant for that purpose; and that defendant made him an offer for twelve nights to perform; that the contract was in writing; that J. B. B. afterwards performed there; that, at his benefit, defendant gave him a check for the amount. The conviction concluded that defendant was guilty, and adjudged the penalty of 50*l.*; one half to the informer, and one half to the poor of the parish of St. Mary Lambeth, being the parish where the offence was committed. The conviction having been removed into the Court of King's Bench by certiorari, three objections were taken. First, that it did not sufficiently appear that the defendant had caused the play of Richard the Third to be performed: all that appears is, that he was seen at one or two rehearsals of Richard, and that he offered to engage performers, and paid them. But these facts do not show, even prima facie, that he caused that particular play to be performed, which is necessary. Secondly, the witnesses do not appear to have been sworn in the presence of the magistrates, or of the defendant; they are stated to have been sworn in the presence of themselves only: if so, the evidence was improperly taken. Thirdly, the adjudication of the penalty is to the poor of St. Mary, Lambeth; whereas the evidence states the Cobourg Theatre to be in Lambeth only, and non constat that Lambeth and St. Mary, Lambeth, are the same parish. Abbott, C. J., said, "As to the first objection, it is sufficient to say, that it cannot prevail, unless the evidence stated on the face of the conviction be such as that no reasonable person could draw the conclusion, that the defendant caused this particular play to be performed. I am very far from thinking that to be the case. The magistrates might very reasonably draw the conclusion; and, having done so, we cannot overturn their decision as to the fact. As to the second objection, the whole forms one sentence; and it is there stated that the defendant, having appeared before the magistrates, and pleaded not guilty, 'nevertheless, upon this same day and year, divers credible witnesses, to wit, &c., came before us upon their several oaths, on the holy Gospel of God, now here in the presence of the said witnesses duly administered,' &c. Taking the whole together, I think it substantially appears that the oath was administered in the presence of the magistrates to the witnesses. As to the last objection, I think the evidence sufficient to support the adjudication. It does not appear that Lambeth and St. Mary, Lambeth, are two parishes; and, unless that be so, it is no variance. If, in the trial of an ejectment, the premises were described to be in St. Mary, Lambeth, and the evidence stated them to be in Lambeth, I think it would be no variance. And it was so held in Doe d. Tollet v. Salter, 13 East, 9, where the ejectment was for lands in Farnham, which, at the trial, were proved to be in Farnham Royal; and there it was held no variance, the defendant not having proved that there were two Farnhams. I do not think, therefore, that the magistrates were wrong in the adjudication made by them on this evidence. Upon the whole, therefore, none of these objections are sufficient; and the conviction, being regular, must be affirmed." Conviction affirmed. See further as to variances in the statement of places. "Indictment," Vol. III.

Taking the second and fifth sections of the above act of 10 Geo. II. together, their effect is clear, that no person shall perform at all without patent or licence, nor with it, unless within the limits prescribed. Subsequently to this statute, it happened that many great towns in various parts of the country were desirous of having theatrical entertainments, and acts of parliament were passed enabling the king to authorize them. There were other places where it was found desirable that theatrical performances should occasionally take place, but which could not bear the expense of obtaining an act of parliament for that purpose, or to which, on other accounts, such an act could not conveniently be extended. For the accommodation of such places the following statute of 28 Geo. III. c. 30, was passed; and the effect of that is, that what was unlawful by the act of 10 Geo. II. c. 28, is now lawful, if a licence shall have been granted by the magistrates pursuant to the 28 Geo. III. c. 30. (Per Lord Tenterden, C. J., in R. v. Neville, 1 B. & Ad. 495.) The following is the enactment of that statute.

By s. 1, "It shall be lawful for the justices at the general or quarter sessions, at their discretion, to grant a licence to any person making application for the same by petition for the performance of any such tragedies, comedies, interludes, operas, plays, or farces, as are or shall be represented at the patent or licensed theatres in Westminster, or have been submitted to the inspection of the lord chamberlain, as aforesaid, at any place within their jurisdiction, or within any city, town, or place, situate within the limits of the same, for any time not exceeding sixty days, to commence within the next six months, and to be within such four months as shall be specified in the said licence, so as there be only one licence in use at the same time within the jurisdiction so given, and so as such place be not within twenty miles of London or Westminster, or eight miles of any patent or licensed theatre, or ten miles of the residence of the king, or of any place within the same jurisdiction, at which, within six months preceding, a licence under this act shall have been had and exercised; or within fourteen miles of either of the universities, or within two miles of the outward limits of any city, town, or place, having peculiar jurisdiction, and so also as no licence under this act shall have been had and exercised at the same place within eight months then next preceding."

Sect. 2. "But no such licence shall be granted to be exercised within any city, town, or place, having peculiar jurisdiction, unless proof be made that the majority of the justices acting for such place have, at a public meeting, signed their consent; or unless an express condition be therein inserted, that the same shall not be valid until approved by the majority of the justices of such place, at a meeting holden expressly for that purpose."

Sect. 3. "Nor shall such licence be granted by the justices within any city, town, or place, unless notice shall have been given by the person applying for such licence three weeks before such application to the mayor, bailiff, or other chief civil officer of such place, of such intended application."

It has been laid down, that though the audience at a theatre have a right to express their disapprobation of any performance or performer exciting their displeasure at the moment, yet if a number of persons go thither with an intention to make a disturbance, and render the performance inaudible, though they offer no actual violence to the house, or any person there, yet they will be guilty of a riot, or a rout. (Clifford v. Brandon, 2 Camp. 358; and see "Conspiracy," Vol. I.)

Playhouses may become nuisances, like any other disorderly house. (See Bac. Ab. tit. Nuisances (a); 1 Hawk. c. 75, s. 7; "Disorderly House," Vol. I.)

It seems that players may be prosecuted as guilty of a nuisance in acting obscene plays. (R. v. Curl, 2 Stra. 790.)

If a person be told on entering a theatre that there is room, when in fact there is not, his proper course is to leave the theatre and demand the return of his money. He is not justified in getting into a private box or other part of the theatre, for the use of which he has not expressly paid; and if he does he is a trespasser, and the proprietor or his servants may remove him, using no more force than is necessary, and he cannot be imprisoned for such an act; if, however, he commit a breach of the peace by striking any one in the presence of a constable, such constable may arrest him, (Lewis v. Arnold, 4 C. & P. 354); and if any other person be assisting in, or promoting such breach of the peace, he may also be arrested by the constable. (Id. See ante, "Arrest," Vol. I.)

Plea.

Plea or demurrer.

WHEN the indictment is found, the defendant may either plead to it, or demur. By pleading, he puts in issue the facts of the charge; by demurring, he admits the facts, and contends that they charge no offence indictable by law. See "Demurrer," Vol. I. as to demurrers.

Pleas in abatement.

Pleas are either in abatement or bar.

Pleas in Abatement may be for the omission of the addition of the defendant, under the statute of additions, or for misnaming him, &c. See "Abatement," Vol. I.

Pleas in bar.

Pleas in Bar are either special pleas, or the general issue. Special pleas may be of a previous conviction of the same offence, or a previous acquittal on a valid indictment, or of a pardon. See "Autrefois Convict," "Acquittal," "Autrefois Attaint," Vol. I., ante, "Pardon." Other special pleas are in practice confined to the cases of prosecutions for neglect of duty in repairing highways and bridges, when the parish indicted or presented for omitting to repair a highway, or the county indicted for omitting to repair a bridge, and desiring to throw the liability on some other party, must show that liability by specially pleading it. See "Highways in General," Vol. III. "Bridges," Vol. I.

The general issue.

The plea employed in the infinitely greater number of cases in which the charge is denied, both misdemeanors and felonies, is the general issue, not guilty. This plea not only casts on the prosecutor the burden of making out every part of his charge, but except in the instances of prosecutions for not repairing highways and bridges above alluded to, it entitles the defendant to give in evidence every possible ground of justification and excuse which can form an answer to the accusation.

7 & 8 Geo. 4, c. 28.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 1, reciting that "trials for criminal offences in that part of the United Kingdom called England, are attended with some forms which frequently impede the due administration of justice, and it is, therefore, expedient to abolish such forms, and also to abolish the benefit of clergy, and to make better provision for the punishment of offenders in certain cases," it is enacted, "that if any person, not having privilege of peerage, being arraigned upon any indictment for treason, felony, or piracy, shall plead thereto a plea of 'not guilty,' he shall, by such plea, without any further form, be deemed to have put himself upon the country for trial, and the court shall, in the usual manner, order a jury for the trial of such person accordingly."

A plea of "not guilty," without more, shall put the prisoner on his trial by jury.

If he refuses to plead, court may order a plea of "not guilty" to be entered.

Sect. 2. "If any person, being arraigned upon, or charged with, any indictment or information for treason, felony, piracy, or misdemeanor, shall stand mute of malice, or will not answer directly to the indictment or information, in every such case it shall be lawful for the court, if it shall so think fit, to order the proper officer to enter a plea of 'not guilty' on behalf of such person; and the plea so entered shall have the same force and effect as if such person had actually pleaded the same."

Police of the Metropolis.

BY the 10 Geo. IV. c. 44, intituled "An act for Improving the Police in and near the Metropolis," reciting, "Whereas offences against property have of late increased in and near the metropolis; and the local establishments of nightly watch and nightly police have been found inadequate to the prevention and detection of crime, by reason of the frequent unfitness of the individuals employed, the insufficiency of their number, the limited sphere of their authority, and their want of connexion and co-operation with each other: and whereas it is expedient to substitute a new and more efficient system of police in lieu of such establishments of nightly watch and nightly police, within the limits hereinafter mentioned, and to constitute an office of police, which, acting under the immediate authority of one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, shall direct and control the whole of such new system of police within those limits:" it is therefore enacted, "that it shall be lawful for his majesty to cause a new police-office to be established in the city of Westminster, and by warrant under his sign manual to appoint two fit persons as justices of the peace of the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Hertford, Essex, and Kent, and of all liberties therein, to execute the duties of a justice of the peace at the said office, and in all parts of those several counties, and the liberties therein, together with such other duties as shall be hereinafter specified, or as shall be from time to time directed by one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, for the more efficient administration of the police within the limits hereinafter mentioned; and his majesty may remove either of the said justices, if he shall see occasion so to do, and may, upon

Westminster, and parts of Middlesex, Surrey, and Kent, to be formed into one district to be called "The metropolitan Police District."

A police force for the whole district to be appointed.

Justices, subject to approbation of secretary of state, may make regulations for management of police force.

Police-men may be suspended or any vacancy in the said office by death, removal, or otherwise, appoint another fit person as a justice of the peace of the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Hertford, Essex, and Kent, and of all liberties therein, to execute the duties aforesaid, in lieu of the person making such vacancy; and it shall be lawful for his majesty to appoint any person to be a justice of the peace by virtue of this act, and for such person, during the continuance of his appointment, to execute the duties of a justice of the peace for the several counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Hertford, Essex, and Kent, and for all liberties therein, although he may not have any such qualification by estate as is required by law in the case of any other person being a justice of the peace for any county: provided always, that no such person shall act as a justice of the peace at any court of general or quarter sessions, nor in any matter out of sessions, except for the preservation of the peace, the prevention of crimes, the detection and committal of offenders, and in carrying into execution the purposes of this act."

Sect. 2. "Every person to be appointed a justice of the peace by virtue of this act shall, before he shall begin to execute the duties of his office, take the following oath before some justice or baron of one of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster; (that it to say,)

"I, A. B., do swear, that I will faithfully, impartially, and honestly, according to the best of my skill and knowledge, execute all the powers and duties of a justice of the peace, under and by virtue of an act passed in the tenth year of the reign of King George the Fourth, intituled, 'An Act for Improving the Police in and near the Metropolis.'"

Sect. 3, "It shall be lawful for his majesty to direct that an annual salary, not exceeding the sum of eight hundred pounds, shall be paid out of the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, to each of the justices to be appointed under this act, and that the same shall be payable quarterly." [See further, 3 Wil. IV. c. 19, s. 3, post, 226.]

Sect. 4. "The whole of the city and liberties of Westminster, and such of the parishes, townships, precincts, and places in the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, and Kent, as are enumerated in the schedule to this act, shall be constituted for the purposes of this act, into one district, to be called 'The Metropolitan Police District;' and a sufficient number of fit and able men shall from time to time, by the directions of one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, be appointed as a police force for the whole of such district, who shall be sworn in by one of the said justices to act as constables for preserving the peace, and preventing robberies and other felonies, and apprehending offenders against the peace; and the men so sworn shall, not only within the said district, but also within the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Hertford, Essex, and Kent, and within all the liberties therein, have all such powers, authorities, privileges, and advantages, and be liable to all such duties and responsibilities, as any constable duly appointed now has or hereafter may have within his constablewick by virtue of the common law of this realm, or of any statutes made or to be made, and shall obey all such lawful commands as they may from time to time receive from any of the said justices for conducting themselves in the execution of their office."

Sect. 5. "The said justices may from time to time, subject to the approbation of one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, frame such orders and regulations as they shall deem expedient, relative to the general government of the men to be appointed members of the police force under this act; the places of their residence; the classification, rank, and particular service of the several members; their distribution and inspection; the description of arms, accoutrements, and other necessities to be furnished to them; and which of them shall be provided with horses for the performance of their duty; and all such other orders and regulations relative to the said police force, as the said justices shall from time to time deem expedient for preventing neglect or abuse, and for rendering such force efficient in the discharge of all its duties; and the said justices may at any time suspend or dismiss from his employment any man belonging to the said police force whom they shall think remiss or negligent in the discharge of his duty, or otherwise unfit for the same; and when any man shall be so dismissed, or cease to belong to the said police force, all powers vested in him as a constable by virtue of this act shall immediately cease and determine." 10 Geo. 4, c. 44.

Sect. 6. "If any victualler or keeper of any house, shop, room, or other place for the sale of any liquors, whether spirituous or otherwise, shall knowingly harbour or entertain any man belonging to the said police force, or permit such man to abide or remain in his house, shop, room, or other place during any part of the time appointed for his being on duty, every such victualler or keeper as aforesaid, being convicted thereof before any two justices of the peace, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay such sum, not exceeding five pounds, as they shall think meet." Penalty on publicans harbouring police-men during hours of duty.

Sect. 7. "It shall be lawful for any man belonging to the said police force, during the time of his being on duty, to apprehend all loose, idle, and disorderly persons whom he shall find disturbing the public peace, or whom he shall have just cause to suspect of any evil designs, and all persons whom he shall find between sunset and the hour of eight in the forenoon lying in any highway, yard, or other place, or loitering therein, and not giving a satisfactory account of themselves, and to deliver any person so apprehended into the custody of the constable appointed under this act, who shall be in attendance at the nearest watch-house, in order that such person may be secured until he can be brought before a justice of the peace, to be dealt with according to law, or may give bail for his appearance before a justice of the peace, if the constable shall deem it prudent to take bail, in the manner hereinafter mentioned." Powers of police.

A police officer is not justified under this section in laying hold of and pushing along the highway, and ordering to be off, a person found by him conversing in a crowd with another, merely because the person with whom he happened to be conversing is known to be a reputed thief. (Stocken v. Carter, 4 Car. & P. 477—Gaselee, J.)

The provision of the now repealed act, 3 Geo. IV. c. 55, s. 21, was held only to apply to the apprehension of persons of general bad character, as rogues and vagabonds, and not to apprehension on suspicion of a felony. (Cowles v. Dunbar, 1 M. & M. 37; 2 C. & P. 565, S. C.) The above provision in the 10 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 7, seems more extensive. (See "Arrest," Vol. I.; and see further 3 W. IV., c. 19, s. 31, &c., post, 236.)

Sect. 8. "If any person shall assault or resist any person belonging to the said police force in the execution of his duty, or shall aid or incite any person so to assault or resist, every such offender, being convicted thereof before two justices of the peace, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay such sum, not exceeding five pounds, as the said justice shall think meet." (See further "Assault," Vol. I.) Assaults on police-men.

Sect. 9. "Where any person charged with any petty misdemeanor shall be brought, without the warrant of a justice of the peace, into the custody of any constable appointed under this act, during his attendance in the night-time at any watch-house within the metropolitan police district, it shall be lawful for such constable, if he shall deem it prudent, to take bail by recognizance, without any fee or reward, from such person, conditioned that such person shall appear for examination before a justice of the peace, at some place to be specified in the recognizance, at the hour of ten in the forenoon next after such recognizance shall be taken, unless that hour shall fall on a Sunday or on Christmas-day or Good Friday, and in that case at the like hour on the succeeding day; and every recognizance so taken shall be equal obligation on the parties entering into the same, and liable to the same proceedings for the estreating thereof, as if the same had been taken before a justice of the peace; and the constable shall enter, in a book to be kept for that purpose in every watch-house, the names, residence, and occupation of the party, and his surety or sureties, if any, entering into such recognizance, together with the condition thereof, and the sums respectively acknowledged, and shall lay the same before such justice as shall be present Constables attending at watch-houses in night may take bail from persons brought before them for petty misdemeanors; recognizance to be conditioned for appearance of parties before a magistrate.

10 Geo. 4, c. 44.

In default of appearance recognizance to be forfeited.

Time of hearing may be postponed.

His majesty may appoint a person to be the receiver of all monies applicable to the purposes of this act, who shall give security.

at the time and place when and where the party is required to appear; and if the party does not appear at the time and place required, or within one hour after, the justice shall cause a record of the recognizance to be drawn up, to be signed by the constable, and shall return the same to the next general or quarter sessions of the peace, with a certificate at the back thereof, signed by such justice, that the party has not complied with the obligation therein contained; and the clerk of the peace shall make the like estreats and schedules of every such recognizance as of recognizances forfeited in the sessions of the peace; and if the party not appearing shall apply, by any person on his behalf, to postpone the hearing of the charge against him, and the justice shall think fit to consent thereto, the justice shall be at liberty to enlarge the recognizance to such farther time as he shall appoint; and when the matter shall be heard and determined, either by the dismissal of the complaint, or by binding the party over to answer the matter thereof at the sessions, or otherwise, the recognizance for the appearance of the party before a justice shall be discharged without fee or reward."

Sect. 10. "It shall be lawful for his majesty to appoint a proper person to receive all sums of money applicable to the purposes of this act, who shall be called 'The Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District;' and his majesty may remove any such receiver, if he shall see occasion so to do, and may upon any vacancy in that office, by death, removal, or otherwise, appoint another person to be such receiver; and the receiver for the time being shall give security to his majesty, in a bond, with two sureties, in such sum as the commissioners of his majesty's treasury of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland shall direct, such bond to be conditioned for the faithful performance of his duty by such receiver, and for the due application of all monies paid to him under this act; and the receiver for the time being shall receive all sums of money applicable to the purposes of this act, and shall keep an exact and particular account thereof, and shall immediately pay all monies, bills, and notes by him received under this act into the hands of the governor and company of the Bank of England; and the same shall be placed to an account in the books of the said governor and company, which shall be entitled, 'The Account of the Public Monies of the Receiver for the Metropolitan Police District,' inserting the name of the receiver for the time being; and the said receiver shall draw out of the Bank from time to time such sums of money as may be necessary for the payment of the salaries, wages, and allowances to be paid as hereinafter mentioned to the persons belonging to the police force appointed under this act, and also for the payment of all other charges and expenses in carrying this act into execution; and every draft or order for money on the Bank of England drawn by the receiver shall be countersigned by one of the justices appointed under this act; and all drafts and orders so drawn and countersigned, but not otherwise, shall be a sufficient authority to the Bank to pay the amount thereof to the persons named in them, or to the bearers of them." [See further as to the receiver, 3 Wil. IV. c. 19, s. 14, &c., post, 229.]

Sect. 11. "The receiver shall account for the due application of all monies so to be drawn by him out of the Bank of England and shall, once in every six months, and oftener, if required by one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, make out and sign a full and particular account of all monies which shall have been received by him under this act, and how much thereof hath been paid by him, and for what purposes, together with proper vouchers for the receipts and payments; and such account shall be delivered, for the purpose of being examined and audited, either to the commissioners for auditing the public accounts of this kingdom, or to any other person or persons whom such principal secretary of state may from time to time direct; and the receiver, if directed to account before the said commissioners, shall be subject to the same regulations and penalties in that respect as any public accountant."

Sect. 12. "The receiver, out of the monies so received by him, shall be allowed a yearly salary not exceeding seven hundred pounds, to be payable quarterly; and the receiver, out of the same monies, shall from time to time pay to the persons belonging to the police force appointed under this act, such salaries, wages, and allowances, and at such periods, as one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state shall direct, and also any extraordinary expenses which they shall appear to have necessarily incurred in apprehending offenders and executing the orders of either of the justices appointed under this act, such expenses being first examined and approved of by one of the said justices; and the receiver shall likewise pay any further sums which such principal secretary of state shall direct to be paid to any of the persons belonging to the said police force, as a reward for extraordinary diligence or exertion, or as a compensation for wounds or severe injuries received in the performance of their duty, or as an allowance to such of them as shall be disabled by bodily injury received, or shall be worn out by length of service; and he shall also pay all other charges and expenses which such principal secretary of state shall direct to be paid for carrying this act into execution." Salaries and wages of policemen to be regulated by secretary of state.

Rewards for activity, and superannuation allowances.

Sect. 13. "Upon the death, resignation, or removal of any receiver appointed under this act, the balance of cash for which he shall at that time have credit on his account, as receiver, with the governor and company of the Bank of England, shall, as soon as a successor shall be appointed to the office of receiver, actually vest in such successor, and shall be immediately transferred to the account of such successor, to be applied for the purposes of this act; and the receiver for the time being is hereby required to issue his drafts or orders, countersigned as aforesaid, for all unsatisfied charges and demands payable out of the monies in the Bank, although the same shall have accrued in the time of any former receiver."

Upon death or removal of receiver, balance of cash at the Bank shall be transferred to his successor.

Sect. 14. "If any person having resigned or having been removed from the office of receiver, shall neglect, within twenty-one days after notice for such purpose, to account for and pay to any succeeding receiver all such sums of money as shall remain in his hands applicable to the purposes of this act, it shall be lawful for the receiver for the time being, in his own proper name only, or by his name and description of office, to sue for and recover the same from such person, with double costs of suit, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, by action of debt; in which action it shall be sufficient for such receiver to declare as for money had and received to the use of such receiver for the purposes of this act; and the defendant in the action may, at the discretion of any judge of such court, be held to special bail in such competent sum as the judge shall order; and the court in which the action shall be brought may, at the instance of either of the parties, refer the account in dispute in a summary manner to be audited by any officer of the court or other fit person, who may examine both plaintiff and defendant upon oath (which oath the said referee shall have power to administer); and upon the report of such referee, unless either of the parties shall show good cause to the contrary, the court may make a rule, either for the payment of such sum as upon the report shall appear to be due, or for staying the proceedings in the action, and upon such terms and conditions as to the court shall appear reasonable; or the court may order judgment to be entered up by confession, for such sum as upon the report shall appear to be due." the same from such executors or administrators; and the like action may be brought against any executors or administrators of executors or administrators; and in all such actions the defendant or defendants may plead in like manner, and avail themselves of the like matters in defence, as in any action founded upon simple contracts of the original testator or intestate; and the court may refer the account in dispute to be audited by any officer or person, and may proceed upon the report of such referee in like manner as is hereinbefore mentioned; and in all actions to be brought, as well as in all proceedings whatsoever to be instituted or carried on, by any receiver by virtue of this act, proof of his acting in the execution of the office of receiver shall be sufficient evidence of his holding such office, unless the contrary shall be shown in evidence by the defendants in such actions, or the parties against whom such proceedings shall be instituted or carried on." [See further 3 Wil. IV. c. 19, s. 17, post, 231.]

Sect. 16. "The receiver for the time being shall make all such contracts and disbursements as shall be necessary for purchasing or renting any land or buildings, or for erecting, fitting up, furnishing, or repairing any buildings, for the purposes of this act, in such manner as one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state shall direct; and of all lands and buildings so to be purchased or rented, and of the fixtures and furniture thereof, and of all goods and chattels whatsoever to be from time to time held or purchased for the purposes of this act, the property acquired therein shall be vested in the receiver for the time being, in whom also shall be vested the property of all watch-houses, watch-boxes, arms, accoutrements, and other necessities to be given up as hereinafter mentioned; and the receiver for the time being may, by the directions of such principal secretary of state, sell, assign, or dispose of the whole or any part of any such property as aforesaid, and shall execute all such lawful matters for carrying this act into execution as such principal secretary of state shall from time to time direct."

Sect. 17. "It shall be lawful for all bodies corporate, and also for all commissioners, vestrymen, or trustees for public purposes, and for tenants for life or in tail, and for the husbands, guardians, trustees, committees, or attorneys of such of the proprietors or persons interested in any lands or buildings required for the purposes of this act as shall by reason of any legal disability or of absence beyond the seas be incapable of acting for themselves, to contract and agree with the receiver for the time being, either for the absolute sale of such lands or buildings, or for a lease thereof for such period as the receiver shall require, and to convey, demise, or grant the same to the receiver in trust for the purposes of this act; and all such contracts, sales, conveyances, leases, and grants shall be valid and effectual in law to all intents and purposes; and in case any body corporate, commissioners, vestrymen, trustees, or other persons hereby authorized to contract on behalf of themselves or others as aforesaid, shall neglect or refuse to agree with, or by reason of disability or absence shall be prevented from agreeing with the receiver for the sale or lease of any lands or buildings required by him, or in case the proprietors or persons interested therein cannot be found or known, or shall not produce and evince a clear title to the land or buildings so to be purchased or rented, or to the interest they shall claim therein, to the satisfaction of the receiver, in every such case all the provisions contained in an act passed in the fifth year of his present majesty's reign, intituled 'An Act for more effectually paving, lighting, watching, cleansing, and regulating the Regent's Park, together with the New Street from the Regent's Park to Pall Mall, and the New Streets and Improvement in the Neighbourhood of Parliament Street and Privy Gardens, and for maintaining a convenient Sewage for the same,' with regard to the valuation of estates and interests by a jury, the conclusive effect of the verdict of the jury, and all matters preparatory to, concomitant with, and consequent or contingent upon, the valuation by a jury, shall, so far as the same are or can be applicable, be applied and extended to the valuation of any land or buildings required for the purpose of this act, in as full and ample a manner, to all intents and purposes, as if those provisions had been repeated and expressly re-enacted in this act; and all such matters as by those provisions of the said act are authorized or required to be done by the sheriff of Middlesex and by a jury of Middlesex, or by the high bailiff of Westminster or his deputy and by a jury of Westminster, shall, under this act, be done by a sheriff and a jury of Middlesex, if the premises to be valued are situate in Middlesex, and by the high bailiff or his deputy and a jury of Westminster, if the premises are situate in Westminster; and all such matters as by those provisions of the said act are authorized or required to be done by the sheriff and a jury of the county of Middlesex, shall, if the premises to be valued are situate in any other county, be done under this act by the sheriff of such other county and by a jury qualified to try causes at nisi prius in such other county; and all such matters as by those provisions of the said act are authorized or required to be done by the commissioners therein mentioned shall, under this act, be done by the receiver for the time being."

Sect. 18. "No justice of the peace or receiver appointed by virtue of this act shall, during the continuance of such appointment, be capable of being elected, or of sitting as a member of the House of Commons; and no justice, receiver, or person belonging to the police force appointed by virtue of this act shall, during the time that he shall continue in any such office, or within six calendar months after he shall have quitted the same, be capable of giving his vote for the election of a member to serve in parliament for the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Hertford, Essex, or Kent, or for any city or borough within the metropolitan police district, nor shall, by word, message, writing, or in any other manner endeavour to persuade any elector to give, or dissuade any elector from giving, his vote for the choice of any person to be a member to serve in parliament for any such county, city, or borough; and if any such justice, receiver, or person belonging to the police force shall offend therein, he shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*, to be recovered, by any person who will sue for the same, by action of debt, to be commenced within six calendar months after the commission of the offence; and one moiety of the sum so recovered shall be paid to the informer, and the other moiety thereof to the receiver appointed under this act, to be by him added to and applied as part of the funds for the purposes of the police under this act: provided always, that nothing in this enactment contained shall subject any such justice, receiver, or person belonging to the police force, to any penalty for any act done by him at or concerning any of the said elections in the discharge of his official duty." [See further the 3 Wil. IV. c. 19, s. 19, post, 231.]

No justice, &c. under this act to sit in parliament.

No justice, receiver, policeman, &c. appointed under this act, to vote at certain elections.

Proviso.

By sect. 19. The present watch in each parish, &c. in metropolitan districts, shall continue until it shall be notified to such parish that the new police is appointed, and then all watch-boxes, arms, &c. shall be given up to the new police, and the present watch-rate shall cease. A penalty is imposed for not giving up watchboxes, &c.

Sect. 20. "Any rate for defraying the expenses of the night watch or night police in any parish, township, precinct, or place, made previous to the day on which the police force to be appointed under this act shall undertake the charge thereof, shall be levied and collected in the same manner as if this act had not been passed:" it provides also, "that nothing herein contained shall be deemed to affect or alter any powers or authorities for assessing and levying any rate in any such parish, township, precinct, or place, so far as such rate may relate to paving, lighting, cleansing, or any other object, except the night watch, night police, or any expenses incident thereto."

Proviso for watch-rates already imposed.

monies and debts in any parish, township, precinct, or place, of which the police to be appointed under this act shall undertake the charge, shall, notwithstanding any thing hereinbefore contained, be chargeable upon the rates out of which such monies or debts have been heretofore in part paid, or would have been payable if this act had not been passed; and such rates shall be from time to time assessed and levied for the payment of such monies and debts, until the same shall be entirely discharged and satisfied."

Sect. 22. "The justices appointed under this act, subject to the approbation of one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, may order such a number of watch-boxes as they shall from time to time think fit to be placed or fixed in such parts of the highways in any of the parishes, townships, precincts, or places within the metropolitan police district, as the said justices shall deem most convenient."

Sect. 23. "As soon as the police to be appointed under this act shall take charge of any parish, township, precinct, or place, whether parochial or extra-parochial, within the metropolitan police district, it shall be lawful for the justices appointed under this act forthwith, and so from time to time, subject to the approbation of one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, to issue a warrant under their hands to the overseers of the poor of every such parish, township, precinct, or place; by which warrant they shall command the said overseers, out of the money collected for the relief of the poor in such parish, township, precinct, or place, to pay the amount mentioned in the warrant for the purposes of the police under this act, or to levy such amount as a part of the rate for the relief of the poor in such parish, township, precinct, or place, and that the overseers shall pay over the amount mentioned in the warrant, to the receiver to be appointed under this act, within forty days from the delivery of such warrant to any one of the overseers: provided always, that the sum to be paid for the purposes of the police under this act shall not exceed in the whole in any one year the rate of eightpence in the pound on the full and fair annual value of all property rateable for the relief of the poor within such parish, township, precinct, or place, such full and fair annual value to be computed according to the last valuation for the time being acted upon in assessing the county rate; and that the warrant shall specify the rate in the pound at which the sum mentioned therein shall be computed." [See the provisions of 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 89, post. As to who are liable to the poor rate, see "Poor," Vol. IV.]

Sect. 24. "Where any persons other than the overseers of the poor shall, by virtue of any office or appointment, be authorized and required to make and collect or cause to be collected the rate for the relief of the poor in any parish, township, precinct, or place within the metropolitan police district, such persons, by whatsoever title they may be called, shall be deemed to be overseers of the poor within the meaning of this act, and to be included under and denoted by the words 'overseers of the poor,' for all the purposes of this act, as fully as if they were commonly called or known by the title of overseers of the poor."

Sect. 25. "The overseers of the poor of every parish, township, precinct, or place within the metropolitan police district, to whom any such warrant as aforesaid shall be issued, shall pay the amount mentioned in the warrant out of any money in their hands collected for the relief of the poor; and if there be no such money in their hands, or an insufficient sum, they shall levy the amount required as a part of the rate for the relief of the poor, and shall for that purpose proceed in the same manner, and have the same powers, remedies, and privileges as for levying money for the relief of the poor; and such overseers shall pay to the receiver the amount mentioned in the warrant within the time specified for that purpose, and at the time of making any payment to the receiver shall deliver to him a note in writing signed by them, specifying the amount so paid, which note shall be kept by the receiver as a voucher for his receipt of that particular amount; and the receipt of the receiver, specifying the amount paid to him by the overseers shall be a sufficient discharge to the overseers for such amount, and shall be allowed as such in passing their accounts with their respective parishes, townships, precincts, or places." [See as to the collection of the poor rate, title "~~P~~oor," Vol. IV.]

10 Geo. 4, c. 44.

Sect. 26. "In case the amount ordered by such warrant as aforesaid to be paid by the overseers in any parish, township, precinct, or place in the metropolitan police district, shall not be paid to the receiver within the time specified for that purpose in the warrant, the justices appointed under this act, upon complaint thereof made to them by the receiver, may issue their warrant for levying the amount, or so much thereof as may be in arrear, by distress and sale of the goods of all or any of the said overseers; and in case the goods of all the overseers shall not be sufficient to pay the same, the arrears thereof shall be added to the amount of the next levy which shall be directed to be made in such parish, township, precinct, or place for the purposes of the police under this act, and shall be collected by the like methods; and the said justices, in case of any default or neglect of any overseer or overseers, or in any other case in which one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state shall so direct, may appoint two or more persons to act as overseers of the poor within any parish, township, precinct, or place in the metropolitan police district, for levying the money for the purposes of the police under this act; and the persons so appointed shall proceed in the same manner, and shall have the same powers, remedies, and privileges, and shall be subject to the same regulations and penalties, with reference to the levying of such money, as if they had been appointed overseers of the poor by virtue of any law or laws now in force."

Overseers, on non-payment of police rate, shall be distrained upon; and in default of sufficient distress, arrears may be levied on parish.

In case of default, &c. occasional overseers may be appointed for levying police rate.

Sect. 27. "Where any messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments within the metropolitan police district shall be occupied by any ambassador, agent, or other public minister of any foreign prince or state, or by the servant of any such ambassador, agent, or minister, or by any other person not liable by law to the payment of the poor's rate, all such money as would by virtue of this act have been payable for the purposes of the police by the occupier of such messuages, lands, tenements, or hereditaments, if such occupier had been rateable to the relief of the poor, shall in such case be paid by and recoverable from the landlord or owner thereof, who shall for this purpose be deemed the occupier thereof, and shall be liable to all such proceedings for non-payment of such money as any person is by law liable to for non-payment of poor rate."

In property occupied by ambassadors, landlords shall pay police rate.

Sect. 28. "Any justice appointed under this act, or any person having an order for that purpose under the hand of any such justice, may inspect any county rate made or to be made for any county, any part of which shall be situate within the metropolitan police district, and may also inspect any returns concerning all or any of the parishes, townships, precincts, and places, whether parochial or extra-parochial in the said district, delivered or to be delivered in pursuance of any of the acts relating to county rates, and may take copies or extracts from any such rates or returns without payment of any fee or reward; and if any person having the custody of any such rate or return shall wilfully neglect or refuse to permit any such justice or other person to inspect the same, or to take copies or extracts from the same, within two days after such order shall have been produced and shown to him, or a copy thereof left at his usual place of abode, he shall, on conviction thereof before any two justices of the peace, forfeit and pay for every such offence such sum, not exceeding ten pounds, as they shall think meet."

Right of inspecting county rates, &c.

Sect. 29. "An account of all monies received and expended for the purposes of this act, made up to the 31st of December in each year, shall annually be laid before both Houses of Parliament within thirty days thereafter, if Parliament be then sitting, or within thirty days after the first meeting of Parliament subsequent to the 31st of December, and such account shall specify the total sum charged upon and received from every parish, township, precinct, and place for the purposes of this act, the rate in the pound at which such sum shall have been computed, and the total annual value of the entire property in every such parish, township, precinct,

Sect. 30. "And whereas it is expedient to provide for those precincts and places in the metropolitan police district in which no rate is made for the relief of the poor, or in which property may be deemed not to be rateable thereto: it is enacted, "that the respective inhabitants and occupiers of all messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments in any precinct or place, whether parochial or extra-parochial, in the metropolitan police district, although such messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments may not be rated to the relief of the poor, or may be deemed not to be rateable thereto, shall nevertheless be liable to contribute to the expenses of the police under this act, as if the property so inhabited or occupied were rateable and rated to the relief of the poor; and the justices appointed under this act may from time to time, by warrant under their hands, appoint a proper person to be an assessor, for the purpose of assessing the full and fair annual value of such property, and rating the same to a police rate to be levied under this act: provided always, that the sum to be levied as a police rate shall not exceed in the whole in any one year the rate of eightpence in the pound on the full and fair annual value of such property; and such assessor shall, within forty days after the delivery to him of the warrant of his appointment, make, sign, and return to the said justices an assessment for the precinct or place named in such warrant; and the assessment shall be fairly written in a book, and shall specify, in different columns, the names of the respective inhabitants or occupiers of all messuages, lands, tenements, and hereditaments, the full and fair annual value of the same, and the amount of police rate charged on the inhabitants or occupiers thereof, and, when the premises shall be unoccupied, the full and fair annual value thereof to let; and every such assessor shall be allowed for his trouble and expenses such remuneration as one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state shall direct, and the same shall be paid out of the amount of the police rate which shall be collected after such assessment."

Sect. 31. "When such assessment shall have been allowed by the justices appointed under this act, public notice of such assessment, and of the place where the same may be inspected, shall be given by fixing such notice on the door of the church or chapel, or some other conspicuous part of the precinct or place to which such assessment shall relate, upon the Sunday next or next but one after the same shall have been so allowed; and any person in whose custody such assessment may be shall permit every inhabitant or occupier of property included in such assessment to inspect the same, and to make any extracts therefrom, without payment of any fee or reward; and if such person shall wilfully neglect or refuse to permit any such inhabitant or occupier to inspect such assessment, or to make any extract therefrom, he shall, on conviction thereof, before any two justices of the peace, forfeit and pay for every such offence such sum, not exceeding five pounds, as the justices shall think meet."

Sect. 32. "The justices appointed under this act shall from time to time nominate one or more person or persons for levying the amount of police rate charged in every such assessment, who shall proceed in the same manner, and shall have the same powers, remedies, and privileges, and shall be subject to the same regulations and penalties, with reference to the levying of such police rate, as if he or they were an overseer or overseers of the poor in a precinct or place rated to the relief of the poor, and shall pay over the amount of such police rate to the receiver to be appointed under this act, or, in default thereof, shall be proceeded against in the same manner as overseers are by this act to be proceeded against for non-payment."

Sect. 33. "If any person, who shall have paid the amount of police rate charged upon him by the assessment made by an assessor appointed under this act, shall think himself aggrieved by such assessment, on the ground that such assessment includes any property for which he is not rateable under this act, or that it assesses his rateable property beyond its full and fair annual value, or that any person or persons is or are omitted out of such assessment, or that the property of any person or persons is assessed below its full and fair annual value, the person so aggrieved may appeal to the next court of general or quarter sessions which shall be holden for the county in which the cause of appeal shall have arisen, not less than twenty-one days after public notice of such assessment shall have been given, as hereinbefore mentioned: provided that the person so intending to appeal shall give to the receiver to be appointed under this act a notice in writing of such appeal, and of the cause and matter thereof, ten clear days at the least before such sessions; and shall also, within three days after his notice of appeal, enter into a recognizance before some justice of the peace of the county, with two sufficient sureties, conditioned to try such appeal at the said sessions, and to abide the order of the court thereupon, and to pay such costs as shall be by the court awarded; and, in case such person shall appeal on the ground that any person or persons is or are omitted out of the assessment, or that the property of any person or persons is assessed below its full and fair annual value, the party so appealing shall not only give such notice of appeal to the receiver, and enter into such recognizances as aforesaid, but shall also give a like notice of appeal to the person or persons so interested in the event of such appeal, as aforesaid, and shall enter into a like recognizance within the times hereinbefore respectively mentioned; and the person or persons so interested shall, if he or they shall desire it, be heard upon the appeal; and the justices of the peace at such sessions, or some adjournment thereof, upon due proof of the notice having been given, and of the recognizance having been entered into, as aforesaid, shall hear and determine the matter of the appeal in a summary manner, and shall make such order therein, with or without costs to either party, as the said justices shall think proper; and, in case the said justices shall think the appellant entitled to relief, they shall order the assessment to be amended in such manner as may be necessary for giving him relief, and shall also order any money paid by him which he was not liable to pay to be returned to him; and, in case he shall have appealed on the ground that any person or persons is or are omitted out of the assessment, the said justices may order the name or names of such person or persons to be inserted in the assessment, and to be therein rated at such amount as they shall deem just; and, in case the appellant shall have appealed on the ground that the property of any person or persons is assessed below its full and fair annual value, the said justices may order the amount at which such person or persons is or are rated in the assessment to be altered in such manner as they shall deem just; and the proper officer of the court shall, in each of the cases aforesaid, forthwith amend the assessment accordingly, but the assessment shall not be quashed or altered with respect to any other persons named therein; and the determination of the justices at any such sessions or adjournment shall be final and conclusive." His majesty may hereafter, by order in council, direct any parishes within a certain distance of metropolis to be added to the district; and such parishes, when so added, shall be subject to this act.

Sect. 34. "And whereas circumstances may occur which may render it expedient that the provisions of this act should be extended to other places, in addition to the places which are enumerated in the schedule to this act:" be it therefore enacted, "that it shall be lawful for his majesty from time to time, by the advice of his privy council, to order that any parishes, townships, precincts, and places, whether parochial or extra-parochial, in the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Hertford, Essex, and Kent, of which any part shall be situate within twelve miles of Charing Cross, in the city of Westminster, shall, after a certain day to be named in such order, be added to and form part of the metropolitan police district, and be placed under the charge of a police to be appointed under this act; and all provisions hereinbefore contained, with regard to the discontinuance of the night-watch and night-police appointed previously to or independently of this act.

10 Geo. 4, c. 44.

the cessation of their powers, the cessation of the powers for levying watch rates, the giving up of watch-houses, or parts of buildings used as watch-houses, watch-boxes, arms, accoutrements, and other necessities, together with the penalties for neglect or refusal in that behalf, the exception as to any watch rate previously made, and the power to assess and levy rates for debts previously incurred, and also all provisions hereinbefore contained with regard to the levying of money for the purposes of the police, the levying thereof as a part of the poor's rate, the amount of such levy, the payment thereof to the receiver, the proceedings against overseers for default, the addition of arrears to the next levy, the appointment of persons to act as overseers, and all provisions with regard to the assessment of property, and the rating of the same to a police rate by assessors appointed under this act, and with regard to the powers and duties of such assessors, as well as all other matters whatsoever previous to, concomitant with, or consequent or contingent upon, such assessment, shall apply and be enforced in every parish, township, precinct, and place, which shall by order in council be added to the metropolitan police district, as fully and effectually as if such parish, township, precinct, or place, had been originally included in such district by virtue of this act."

Misnomers not to affect the execution of the act.

Sect. 35. "No misnomer or inaccurate description of any parish, township, precinct, or place, mentioned in the schedule to this act, or in any order in council to be made as aforesaid, shall prevent or in anywise affect the execution of this act, but that this act and every part thereof shall apply and be enforced in every such parish, township, precinct, and place, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if the same had been correctly named and described in such schedule or order in council, provided that the same be designated therein to common intent and understanding; and united parishes shall, for all the purposes of this act, be deemed to be included under and denoted by the word 'parish.'"

Summons, &c. for offences punishable on summary conviction under this act.

Sect. 36. "And for the more effectual prosecution of offences punishable upon summary conviction by virtue of this act, be it enacted, that where any person shall be charged, on the oath of a credible witness, with any such offence before any justice of the peace, the justice may summon the person charged to appear before any two justices of the peace, at a time and place to be named in such summons; and if the person charged shall not appear accordingly, then (upon proof of the due service of the summons, by delivering a copy thereof to such person, or by delivering a copy to the wife or servant, or some inmate of the family of such person, at his usual place of abode,) the justices before whom he ought to have appeared may either proceed to hear and determine the case ex parte, or may issue their warrant for apprehending such person, and bringing him before them: provided always, that the prosecution for any offence punishable upon summary conviction, by virtue of this act, shall be commenced within three calendar months after the commission of the offence, and not otherwise."

Limitation of time for such proceedings.

Application of penalties.

Sect. 37. "Every sum which by any justices of the peace shall be adjudged to be paid for any offence against this act shall be paid to the receiver appointed under this act, to be by him added to and applied as part of the funds for the purposes of the police under this act; and no person, although liable to the payment of money for the maintenance of the police under this act, shall, by reason thereof, or by reason of the application of any penalty to the use of the police funds, be deemed to be an incompetent witness before any court or justice or justices of the peace in any proceeding whatever for any offence against this act, or in any matter relating to the money to be raised for the maintenance of the police, or in any other matter mentioned in this act; and no justice of the peace shall be disabled from acting in the execution of this act by reason of his being liable to the payment of any money for the maintenance of the police under this act."

Persons paying police rate may give evidence or act as justices.

Scale of imprisonment for non-payment of penalties.

Sect. 38. "The justices of the peace, by whom any person shall be convicted and adjudged to pay any sum of money for any offence against this act, may adjudge that such person shall pay the same, either immediately or within such period as they shall think fit; and that in default of payment at the time appointed, he shall be imprisoned in the common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding two calendar months, where the sum to be paid shall not exceed five pounds, and for any term not exceeding four calendar months, where the sum shall not exceed ten pounds, and for any term not exceeding six calendar months in any other case; the imprisonment to cease in each of the cases aforesaid upon payment of the sum due."

10 Geo. 4, c. 44.

Sect. 39. "The justices before whom any person shall be summarily convicted of any offence against this act may cause the conviction to be drawn up in the following form of words, or in any other form of words to the same effect, as the case may require; that is to say,

Form of conviction.

"Be it remembered, that on the day of in the year of our to wit. Lord , at , in the county of , A. B. is convicted before us [naming the justices], two of his majesty's justices of the peace for the said county, for that he the said A. B. did [specify the offence, and the time and place when and where the same was committed, as the case may be]; and we the said justices adjudge the said A. B., for his said offence, to forfeit and pay the sum of [here state the amount of the sum to be paid]; and in default of immediate payment of the said sum, to be imprisoned in the for the space of , unless the sum shall be sooner paid; [or, and we order that the said sum shall be paid by the said A. B. on or before the day of ; and in default of payment on or before that day, we adjudge the said A. B. to be imprisoned in the for the space of , unless the said sum shall be sooner paid]; and we direct that the said sum shall be paid to , the receiver for the Metropolitan Police District, to be by him applied according to the act passed in the tenth year of the reign of his late Majesty King George the Fourth, intituled, 'An Act for improving the Police in and near the Metropolis.' Given under our hands this day and year first above mentioned."

Sect. 40. "No conviction, order, warrant, or other matter, made or purporting to be made by virtue of this act, shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by certiorari or otherwise into any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster; and no warrant of commitment shall be held void by reason of any defect therein, provided that it be therein alleged that the party has been convicted, and there be a good and valid conviction to sustain the same; and where any distress shall be made for levying any money by virtue of this act, the distress itself shall not be deemed unlawful, nor the party making the same be deemed a trespasser, on account of any defect or want of form in the summons, conviction, warrant of distress, or other proceedings relating thereto: nor shall the party distraining be deemed a trespasser ab initio, on account of any irregularity afterwards committed by him, but the person aggrieved by such irregularity may recover full satisfaction for the special damage, if any, in an action upon the case."

No certiorari, &c.

As to informality in warrants, commitment, &c.

Trespasser ab initio.

Sect. 41. And for the protection of persons acting in the execution of this act, it is enacted "that all actions and prosecutions to be commenced against any person for any thing done in pursuance of this act (a) shall be laid and tried in the county where the fact was committed, and shall be commenced within six calendar months after the fact committed, and not otherwise; and notice in writing of such action, and of the cause thereof, shall be given to the defendant one calendar month at least before the commencement of the action; and in any such action the defendant may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon; and no plaintiff shall recover in any such action if tender of sufficient amends shall have been made before such action brought, or if a sufficient sum of money shall have been paid into court after such action brought, by or on behalf of the defendant; and if a verdict shall pass for the defendant, or the plaintiff shall become nonsuit, or discontinue any such action, after issue joined, or if, upon demurrer or otherwise, judgment shall be

"It shall be lawful for his majesty, his heirs and successors, by and with the advice of his or their privy council, to alter the situation of any of the said police offices, or to discontinue any of the said police offices, or to establish any additional police offices, or to make such regulations in the attendance of the justices, and in conducting such police offices, as may be deemed expedient."

Sect. 4. "The present receiver for the said police offices shall continue such receiver, and that it shall be lawful for his majesty, his heirs and successors, upon any vacancy in the said office of receiver by death or otherwise, to appoint any other proper person, not being one of the justices appointed to act at any of the said police offices, to be the receiver of the said police offices; and that the said receiver for the time being shall receive all fees, penalties, and forfeitures, and other sums of monies applicable to the purposes of this act; and shall keep an exact and particular account of all such monies as shall be received by him, and shall apply the same quarterly in discharge of the salaries, expenses, and charges attending the said police offices, and in carrying this act into execution; and shall make all such contracts and disbursements as shall be necessary for purchasing, hiring, fitting up, and furnishing proper and sufficient houses and buildings wherein the said police offices shall be held, in such manner as shall be directed by one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, of which houses and buildings so to be hired or purchased, and of all houses and buildings already hired or purchased for the like purposes, and of the fixtures and furniture thereof, and of all other necessities to be held or purchased for the purposes of this act, the property acquired therein shall be vested in the receiver for the time being, who shall and may sell, assign, and dispose of the same, or any part thereof, under the like directions and appointment, as occasion shall require; and such receiver shall prepare proper plans and estimates of all such contracts and disbursements as shall be necessary for the purposes aforesaid, and shall deliver the same to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state; and such receiver shall further do and execute all such other lawful matters and things towards the carrying this act into execution as from time to time shall be directed by one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state; and for his care and pains in the execution of such office shall and may retain to his own use, out of the monies so received by him as aforesaid, a sum not exceeding four hundred pounds per annum." [See further as to the receiver 10 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 12, ante, 214.]

Sect. 5. "A sufficient number of fit and able men shall from time to time, by the directions of one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, be appointed, retained, and employed as constables at the said police offices, and shall be sworn in by any of the said justices in their respective offices to act as constables for preserving the peace, and preventing robberies and other felonies, and apprehending offenders against the peace; which constables so sworn shall, within the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Essex, and Kent, and the liberty of his majesty's Tower of London, and all other liberties in the said counties, have all such powers, authorities, privileges, and advantages as any constable duly appointed now has or hereafter may have by virtue of any law or statute now made or hereafter to be made, and shall obey all such lawful commands as they shall from time to time receive from any of the said justices respectively for the apprehending offenders, or otherwise conducting themselves in the execution of their offices; and such justices may at any time suspend or dismiss from his employment any such constable attached to their respective offices whom they shall think remiss or negligent in the execution of his duty, or otherwise unfit for the same; and when any such constable shall be so dismissed or cease to belong to any of the said offices, all powers and authorities vested in him as a constable under and by virtue of this act shall immediately cease and determine to all intents and purposes whatever."

Sect. 6. "The justices appointed to the said police office in the parish of St. John of Wapping, commonly called the Thames police office, or any of them, shall (subject to the approbation of one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state) appoint, retain, and employ any number of fit and discreet men, who, under the name of Thames police surveyors, shall (being first duly sworn in manner above mentioned) have, within the counties and liberties aforesaid, the powers, authorities, privileges, and advantages of a constable as aforesaid, and shall direct and inspect the conduct of the constables attached to the Thames police office, and of all persons to be employed in and about ships and vessels in the said river Thames, or in or on the several creeks, docks, wharfs, quays, and landing places thereto adjacent, and (subject to the orders of any of the said last mentioned justices) shall have power by virtue of their offices to enter at all times, as well by night as by day, into and upon every ship, hoy, barge, lighter, boat, or other vessel (not being then actually employed in his majesty's service) lying or being in the said river or creeks, or in any dock or docks thereto adjacent, and into every part of every such vessel, for the purpose of inspecting and upon occasion directing the conduct of any constable who may be stationed on board of any such vessel, and of inspecting and observing the conduct of all other persons who shall be employed on board of any such vessel in or about the lading or unlading thereof, as the case may be, and for the purpose of taking all such measures as may be necessary for providing against fire and other accidents, and preserving peace and good order on board of any such vessel, and for the effectual prevention or detection of any felonies or misdemeanors; and the justices appointed to the said Thames police office may at any time suspend or dismiss any such Thames police surveyor whom they shall find remiss or negligent in the execution of his duty, or otherwise unfit for the same; and when any such surveyor shall be so dismissed, or cease to belong to the said office, all powers and authorities vested in him as such surveyor under and by virtue of this act shall immediately cease and determine to all intents and purposes whatever."

appointed with approbation of secretary of state.

Sect. 7. "It shall be lawful for the chief magistrate of the public office in Bow street to administer to the officers of that office and to the horse patrol acting under his authority, an oath duly to execute the office of constable within the said several counties and liberties, and within the royal palaces of his majesty, his heirs and successors, and ten miles thereof; and each of the said officers and patrol of the said public office, being sworn, shall, within the several liberties and counties aforesaid, and also within the royal palaces and ten miles thereof, have power to act as a constable, and shall have therein all such powers and authorities, privileges and advantages, as any constable duly appointed now has, or hereafter may have within his constablewick: provided always, that when any such constable or patrol shall be dismissed from his employment, or cease to belong to the said public office in Bow street, all powers and authorities, allowances, emoluments, privileges, and advantages, vested in the person so dismissed or ceasing to belong to the said office, shall immediately cease and determine."

Officers and patrols of Bow street office to act as constables.

Sect. 8. "All powers and authorities, privileges, advantages, exemptions, duties, obligations, and liabilities, by this act conferred and imposed upon the magistrates of the said public office in Bow street, and upon the clerks, constables, and others therein employed, and on the horse patrol acting under the authority of the chief magistrate of that office, shall, in case of the removal of that office from the said street to any other street or place, be used and exercised, enjoyed and performed, by the magistrates, clerks, officers, patrol, and others respectively, at the office to be substituted for the said public office in Bow street, in as full and ample manner, to all intents and purposes, as if such substituted had been expressly named in this act."

In case of removal of Bow street office, powers to continue.

Sect. 9. "It shall be lawful for the justices of the said public office in Bow street, or for the justices appointed to attend at the said police offices, or for any of them, if they should think fit, on the application of any person or persons showing the necessity thereof, to appoint any number of fit and competent men recommended by the person or persons so applying, and approved by such justice or justices, to be constables to keep the peace at any place within the limits of the weekly bills of mortality, or within the parishes of St. Mary-le-bone, Paddington, St. Pancras, Kensington, or St. Luke, Chelsea, in the county of Middlesex, for such period of time as such justice or justices shall deem fit and necessary, and to administer an oath to every such constable duly to execute that office within such place, and for the period of time for which he shall be appointed; and every constable so sworn shall, at such place, and during the time he shall so serve, have all such powers and authorities, privileges, advantages, and liabilities, as any constable duly appointed hath or shall have within his constablewick, and shall be paid by the person or persons on whose application he shall be appointed such wages as shall be deemed reasonable and adequate by the justice or justices by whom he shall be so appointed: provided always, that in case of any neglect of duty or misconduct of any constable so appointed, or upon the request in writing of the person or persons on whose application such appointment shall have been made, it shall be lawful for any of the aforesaid justices to determine such appointment, and all powers, authorities, privileges, advantages, and liabilities of such constable shall thereupon cease."

Power to punish constables for neglect of duty or other misconduct.

Sect. 10. "If any of the officers or patrols acting under the authority of the chief magistrate of the said public office, Bow street, or any of the constables retained and employed at any of the said police offices, or any of the constables appointed and sworn in under the authority of the justices of the metropolitan police, or any constable appointed and sworn in as herein-before last mentioned, shall be guilty of any disobedience of orders, neglect of duty, or of any misconduct as such constable, and shall be convicted thereof before two justices of the peace, he shall forfeit any sum not exceeding ten pounds, and in default of immediate payment shall suffer imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding three months: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall prevent any such person from being proceeded against by way of indictment for any offence committed by him as constable, so as that no person shall be proceeded against both by indictment and also under this act for the same offence."

Justices to be allowed a salary of 800*l.* per annum.

Further sums to be issued for payment of clerks, constables, &c., and for Bow-street office and horse patrol.

Sect. 11. "It shall be lawful for his majesty, his heirs and successors, to direct that such sum shall be issued quarterly, out of the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, to the said receiver, as will be sufficient to pay the yearly salary of eight hundred pounds, clear of all fees or deductions, to each of the justices appointed to attend at the said police offices for their time and trouble, and to pay such further sums as may be necessary for the expenses of the offices, and for the payment of clerks, constables, surveyors, and others therein employed, and for the payment of the expenses of the said public office in Bow-street, and of the magistrates' clerks, and constables, and others therein employed, and of the horse patrol acting under the authority of the chief magistrate of that office, and of such horse and foot patrol as have been superannuated under the provisions of the act passed in the third year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, for the more effectual administration of the office of justice of the peace in and near the metropolis; provided that the whole of the said charges shall not exceed the annual sum of fifty-eight thousand pounds, over and above the necessary disbursements for purchasing, hiring, repairing, fitting up, and furnishing the houses and buildings wherein the said offices shall be held; and that the said receiver, out of the monies so issued to him, shall and may pay to the constables and surveyors so appointed as aforesaid, for their trouble and attendance, such sum as may from time to time appear reasonable to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, and any extraordinary expenses necessarily incurred in apprehending offenders, and in executing the orders of the justices acting under, and by virtue of this act, such extraordinary expenses being first examined and approved of by the justices attending the police office to which such constables or surveyors shall be respectively attached; and shall and may pay, under the direction of such principal secretary of state, such further sum for rewarding the extraordinary diligence or exertion of any of the said constables, or for compensating them for wounds or severe injuries received in the performance of their duties, or for an allowance to such of them as shall be completely disabled by bodily injury, or worn out by length of service." 3 Wil. 4, c. 19.

Sect. 12. "No justice of the peace for the county of Middlesex, county of Surrey, city and liberty of Westminster, or liberty of the Tower of London, or his clerk, or any person on their behalf, elsewhere than at the said public office in Bow-street and at the said police offices, shall directly or indirectly, upon any pretence whatever, take or receive any fee, reward, gratuity, or recompence for any act by him or them done or to be done in the execution of his or their office or employ as justice of the peace or clerk as aforesaid, within the limits of the weekly bills of mortality, or within the parishes of St. Mary-le-bone, Paddington, St. Pancras, Kensington, or St. Luke Chelsea, in the county of Middlesex, upon pain of forfeiting the sum of one hundred pounds for every such offence, one moiety thereof to the said receiver, to be applied to the purposes of this act, and the other moiety thereof, with full costs of suit, to the person who shall sue for the same in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster; and that every summons which shall, after the passing of this act, be issued by any justice of the peace of the counties of Middlesex and Surrey respectively, requiring any person residing within the said limits and parishes to appear at any place without those limits and parishes, to answer any information or complaint touching any matter arising within the said limits and parishes, shall be utterly void and of none effect; any law, custom, or usage to the contrary notwithstanding: Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to extend to any fees taken at any general or quarter sessions of the peace, or at any meeting of justices for the purposes of licensing alehouses, or to any fees taken by the vestry clerk, or by the clerk to the churchwardens and overseers of any parish, for the purpose of enforcing the payment of any taxes or assessments arising within the same parish, or for the purpose of hearing and determining any offence cognizable before justices of the peace, by virtue of any statute made and provided for the special regulation or government of such parish." No justice shall take fees but at the public office Bow-street and at the police offices. Penalty 100*l*. Summons for persons to appear at any place without the limits specified in this act, void. Nothing herein to extend to fees at quarter sessions, or meetings of justices for licensing alehouse, &c.

Sect. 13. "In some conspicuous part of each of the said police offices, and also of the said public office in Bow-street, there shall be affixed a table of the fees which may legally be taken at such offices respectively under an act passed in the twenty-sixth year of the reign of king George the Second, intituled, 'An Act for the settling and ascertaining the Fees to be taken by Clerks to Justices of the Peace,' and under another act passed in the twenty-seventh year of the reign of king George the Second, intituled, 'An Act for making perpetual several laws for punishment of persons destroying turnpikes, locks, or other works erected by authority of Parliament; and that all acts made for erecting Courts of Conscience shall be deemed public acts; and to empower a certain number of the trustees of the British Museum to do certain acts; and for confirming the table of fees to be taken by the clerks to the justices of the peace for the county of Middlesex; and for giving further time for the payment of duties omitted to be paid for the indentures or contracts of clerks and apprentices; and for filing affidavits in the execution of contracts of clerks to attornies and solicitors; and for preventing persons driving certain carriages from riding upon such carriages;' and that it shall be lawful for any justice at such offices respectively to refuse to do any act for which any fee shall be demandable unless such fee shall be first paid; and that if any such act shall be done, and the fee due thereon shall not be paid, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace to summon the person from whom such fee shall be due, and to make order for payment of the same, with the costs of the proceedings, and in default of payment to levy the same, with the costs of the distress, by warrant under his hand and seal." Table of fees to be hung up. 26 Geo. 2, c. 14. 27 Geo. 2, c. 16.

Sect. 14. "The justices of the said public office in Bow-street and the justices appointed to attend at the said police offices, and their clerks respectively, shall, in books to be provided for that purpose, keep a full, true, and particular account of all fees taken and received at each of the said offices, Account of fees and forfeitures received at said offices shall be delivered quartogether with all penalties and forfeitures which shall have been recovered, levied, or received in pursuance of any adjudication, conviction, or order had or made at any of the said offices, or any process or warrant issuing from the same; to which books of account the said receiver shall at all times have free access; and the said justices shall, once in every quarter of a year, deliver unto such receiver such account, verified upon oath by such justice or justices, clerk or clerks, or such other person or persons as shall be employed in keeping such accounts respectively or any part thereof, before some justice of the peace for the said county of Middlesex or county of Surrey, and shall pay the amount of all such fees unto such receiver, to be applied in manner herein-before mentioned."

Sect. 15. "Where by any act or acts, other than an act passed in the tenth year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, intituled, 'An Act for improving the Police in and near the Metropolis,' any penalties or forfeitures, or shares of penalties or forfeitures, are or shall hereafter be made recoverable in a summary manner before any justice or justices of the peace, and by such act or acts respectively the same are or shall be limited and made payable to his majesty, or to any body corporate, or to any person or persons whatsoever, save and except the informer who shall sue for the same, or any party aggrieved, in every such case the same, if recovered or adjudged before any justice or justices at the said public office in Bow-street, or at any of the said police offices, shall, notwithstanding any thing in such act or acts respectively contained, be recovered for and adjudged to be paid to the said receiver for the time being, to be by him applied for the purposes of this act; and the same shall not in any case be recovered by or adjudged to be paid to any other person than the said receiver, unless such person be the informer or the party aggrieved: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to any penalties or forfeitures recovered under any act relating to the customs or to trade or navigation, and sued for by the direction of the commissioners of his majesty's customs, which shall be paid to such person as the said commissioners shall direct to receive the same."

Sect. 16. "If the justices appointed as aforesaid, or any other person, having received any such fees at the said public office in Bow-street, or at any of the said police offices, shall neglect to account for and pay the same in manner aforesaid, or if any justice, justice's clerk, constable, officer, or other person who shall levy or receive such penalties or forfeitures, or shares of penalties or forfeitures, shall neglect to pay the same into the hands of such receiver, or if any person having resigned any such office of receiver, or having been removed from the same, shall neglect, within twenty-one days after notice for that purpose, to account for and pay into the hands of the succeeding receiver all such sums of money as shall remain in his hands applicable to the purposes of this act, it shall be lawful for such receiver for the time being, in his own proper name only, or by his name and description of office, to sue for and recover the same, with costs of suit as between attorney and client, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, by action of debt, in which action it shall be sufficient for such receiver to declare as for money had and received to the use of such receiver for the purposes of this act; and the defendant or defendants in such action may, at the discretion of any judge of such court, be held to special bail in such competent sum as such judge shall order and direct; and in any such action the court in which such action shall be brought may, if such court shall think proper, at the instance of either of the parties, refer the account in dispute in a summary manner to be audited by any officer of the court or other fit person, at its discretion, who may examine both plaintiff and defendant upon oath (which oath the said referee shall have power to administer); and upon the report of such referee, unless either of the parties shall show good cause to the contrary, such court may make a rule, either for the payment of such sum as upon such report shall appear to be due, or for staying the proceedings in such action, and upon such terms and conditions as to the same court shall appear reasonable and just, or may order judgment to be entered up by confession for such sum as upon such report shall appear to be due." [See further 10 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 14, ante, 215.]

3 Wil. 4, c. 19.

Sect. 17. "In case of the death of any such receiver, or of any person having resigned or been removed from such office, or of any of the other persons whom the said receiver for the time being is authorized to sue as aforesaid, in every such case the receiver for the time being may, in his own proper name only, or by his name and description of office, sue for and recover such sum of money as shall have been remaining in the hands of such deceased receiver or other person applicable to the purposes of this act, or the executors or administrators of such person deceased, in which action it shall be sufficient for the plaintiff to declare that the deceased was indebted to the plaintiff for money had and received to his use for the purposes of this act, or that the deceased died possessed of money had and received for the purposes of this act, whereby an action accrued to the plaintiff to demand and have the same of such executors or administrators; and the like action shall and may be brought against any executors or administrators of executors or administrators; in all which actions the defendant or defendants may plead in like manner, and avail themselves of the like matters in their defence, as in any action founded upon simple contracts of the original testator or intestate; and in all actions to be brought by such receiver by virtue of this act, proof of the plaintiff's acting in the execution of such office shall be sufficient evidence of his holding the same, unless the contrary shall be shown in evidence by the defendant or defendants in such action." [See further 10 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 15, ante, 215.]

Receiver may sue for money in hands of deceased receivers, and recover from executors.

Sect. 18. "Such receiver shall every three months, or oftener if required, make out a full and particular account of all monies by him received and paid as aforesaid; and such account, together with proper vouchers, shall be delivered by him, for the purpose of being examined and audited, to any person or persons whom one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state may direct."

Receiver to render accounts quarterly or oftener if required.

Sect. 19. "No justice appointed as aforesaid shall, during his continuance in such appointment, be capable of being elected, or of sitting as a member of the House of Commons; and that no justice, receiver, Thames police surveyor, or police constable appointed by virtue of this act shall, during the time that he shall continue in his office respectively, or within six months after he shall have quitted the same, be capable of giving his vote for the election of a member to serve in Parliament for the counties of Middlesex or Surrey, or for the city of London, or for the city and liberty of Westminster, the borough of the Tower Hamlets, the borough of Finsbury, or the borough of Mary-le-bone, in the county of Middlesex, or for the borough of Southwark or the borough of Lambeth in the county of Surrey respectively, nor shall, by word, message, writing, or in any other manner, endeavour to persuade any elector to give or dissuade any elector from giving his vote for the choice of any person to be a member to serve in Parliament for any such county, city, or borough; and every such justice, receiver, surveyor, or constable offending therein shall forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds, one moiety thereof to the informer, and the other moiety thereof to the use of the poor of the parish or place where such offence shall be committed, to be recovered by any person that shall sue for the same in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster within the space of one year after such offence committed: provided nevertheless, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to subject any such justice, receiver, surveyor, or constable to any penalty for any act done by him at or concerning any of the said elections in the discharge of his duty in any of the said respective capacities." [See further the 10 Geo. IV. c. 44, s. 18, ante, 217.]

Justices not to sit in parliament.

No justice, receiver, Thames police surveyor, or police constable to vote at certain elections.

Sect. 20. "Where, by any law now in being or hereafter to be made, any act is directed or authorized to be done by any of the justices appointed as aforesaid, the same may be done and executed by any of the justices of the said public office in Bow-street, and where any act is directed or authorized to be done by any justice or justices of the peace residing in or near or next the parish or place where any offence or other matter cognizable before him or them shall be committed or shall arise, the same jurisdiction shall and may be exercised by a justice or justices acting in the said public office in Bow-street, or in such of the said police offices as may be situated next or near such parish or place; and that such of the aforesaid justices who shall be justices of the peace for the liberty of his majesty's Tower of London, shall and may sit and act as such justices for the said liberty at the said public office in Bow-street, or at any of the said police offices."

Sect. 21. "The justices of the said public office in Bow-street, and the justices appointed to attend at the said police offices, shall be and are hereby absolutely freed and exempted from being returned, and from serving on any juries or inquests whatsoever in the said counties of Middlesex or Surrey, or in the city of London, and shall not be inserted in any lists of men qualified and liable to serve as jurors, which shall be prepared and made out under and by virtue of an act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for consolidating and amending the Law relative to Juries;' any thing in any act contained notwithstanding."

Sect. 22. "And whereas divers fairs are held within the city and vicinity of London by charter or prescription, and other fairs without any lawful authority, which lead to scenes of riot, disorder, debauchery, and crime, and it is expedient to regulate such fairs as are legally held, and to suppress such as have no lawful origin; be it therefore enacted, that at all fairs held within fifteen miles of Temple Bar, all business and amusements of all kinds shall cease at the hour of eleven in the evening, and not recommence earlier than the hour of six in the morning; and that if any house, shop, room, booth, standing, tent, caravan, waggon, or other place shall, during the continuance of any such fair as aforesaid, be open within the hours herein-before prohibited, for any purpose of business or amusement in the place where such fair shall be held, or within three hundred yards thereof, then it shall be lawful for any constable or other peace officer, within his jurisdiction, to take into custody the master or mistress, or other person having the care, government, or management of any such house, shop, room, booth, standing, tent, caravan, waggon, or other place, and also every person being therein, and who shall not quit the same forthwith upon being bidden by any such constable or other peace officer so to do, and to convey every such person so taken, as soon as conveniently may be, before a justice of the peace, who shall proceed to hear the complaint in a summary way; and every person convicted before any such justice, as the master, mistress, or person having the care, government, or management of any such house, shop, room, booth, standing, tent, caravan, waggon, or other place, shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding five pounds; and every person so convicted as having been therein, and not having quitted the same forthwith upon being bidden by a constable or other peace officer so to do, shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding forty shillings; and if any party so convicted shall not immediately pay the penalty, the justice shall commit him or her to hard labour in the house of correction for any space of time not exceeding three months, unless the penalty shall be sooner paid; and if there shall appear to any two justices, within their respective jurisdictions, reason to believe that any fair usually held within the distance of ten miles of Temple Bar has been held without charter, prescription, or other lawful authority, or that any fair lawfully held within the said distance has been usually held for a longer period than is warranted by charter, prescription, or other lawful authority, it shall be competent to them to summon the owner or occupier of the ground upon which such fair is usually held to appear before such justices as may be present at some petty sessions, to be held at the time and place to be specified in the summons, not less than eight days after the service of the summons, to show his right and title to hold such fair, or to hold such fair beyond a given period (as the case may be); and if such owner or occupier shall not attend in pursuance of such summons, or shall not show to the justices present at such petty sessions sufficient cause to believe that such fair has been held by lawful right and title for the whole period during which the same has been usually held, such justices shall declare, in writing, such fair to be unlawful, either altogether or beyond a stated period (as the case may be), and shall give notice of such their declaration, by affixing copies thereof on the parish church, and on the most public places in and near the ground where such fair has been usually held; and if after such notices shall have been affixed for the space of six days, any attempt shall be made to hold such fair, if it shall be declared altogether unlawful, or to hold it beyond the prescribed period, if it shall be declared unlawful beyond a certain period, any justice of the peace within his jurisdiction may, by his warrant, direct any constable or other peace officer to remove every booth, standing, and tent, and every carriage, of whatsoever kind, conveyed to, or being upon such ground for the purpose of holding or continuing such fair, and to take into custody every person erecting, pitching, or fixing, or assisting to erect, pitch, or fix, any such booth, standing, or tent, and every person driving, accompanying, or conveyed in every such carriage, and every person resorting to such ground with any exhibitions, shows, swings, roundabouts, whirligigs, or other instruments of gambling or amusement, and to carry every person so taken before the justice granting such warrant, or before some other justice, who shall proceed to hear the complaint in a summary way; and every person convicted before any such justice of any of the offences last aforesaid shall forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding ten pounds; and if the party so convicted shall not immediately pay the penalty, the justice shall commit him or her to hard labour in the house of correction for any space of time not exceeding three months unless the penalty shall be sooner paid: Provided nevertheless, that if the owner or occupier of the ground whereon any such fair has been usually held shall, when summoned before the justices at their petty sessions as aforesaid, enter into a recognizance in the penal sum of two hundred pounds, (which recognizance such justices are hereby authorized to take,) with condition to appear in the Court of King's Bench on the first day of the then next term, and to answer to any information in the nature of a quo warranto which his majesty's attorney or solicitor general may exhibit against such owner or occupier, touching the right and title to such fair, and to abide the judgment of the court thereon, and to pay such costs as may be awarded by the court, which costs the said court is hereby authorized to award, then, notwithstanding the justices shall declare such fair to be unlawful, they shall forbear from giving notice of such their declaration, and from taking any further measures thereon, until judgment shall be given by the said court against the right and title to such fair; and the justices taking such recognizance shall forthwith transmit the same to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, to the end that the same may be filed in the said court, and such further directions may be given thereon as to such secretary of state may seem fit and necessary."

3 Wil. 4, c. 19.

If declared unlawful, booths, &c. to be removed.

Penalty not exceeding 10*l*.

On entering into recognizance, question as to right of title to fair may be tried in K. B.

Sect. 23. "And whereas there are many shops, rooms, and places of public resort, where thieves, prostitutes, and other disorderly persons assemble at night; be it further enacted, that no shop, room, or place of public resort where ready-made coffee, tea, or other liquors are sold or consumed within the city of London or the liberties thereof, or within the limits of the weekly bills of mortality, or within any of the parishes herein-before mentioned, shall be kept open after the hour of eleven at night during any part of the year, nor open before the hour of four in the morning between Lady Day and Michaelmas, or before five in the morning between Michaelmas and Lady Day; and that no shop, room, or place of public resort where any refreshments or any liquors not subject to any duties of customs or excise are consumed within the city of London and the liberties thereof or within the said limits and parishes, shall be kept open after the hour of one in the morning, or before the hour of five in the morning; and if any such shop, room, or place shall be open within the hours herein-before respectively prohibited, or being shut up, if any person shall during those hours respectively be found therein, except the person actually dwelling Penalty not exceeding 10 l .

Application of penalty.
Proviso.
Prohibiting the blowing of horns.	Sect. 24. "If any person shall, within the city of London and liberties thereof, or within the limits and parishes aforesaid, blow any horn or use any other noisy instrument, for the purpose of hawking, selling or distributing any article whatsoever, it shall be lawful for any constable, headborough, patrol, watchman, or other person to apprehend every person so offending, and convey him before any justice of the peace, who shall proceed to examine upon oath any witnesses appearing to give evidence touching such offence; and if the party accused shall be convicted of such offence, then and in every such case he shall for every such offence forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding forty shillings; and in case the offender shall not upon conviction forthwith pay the penalty, such justice is hereby required to commit such offender to the House of Correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding ten days, unless the penalty shall be sooner paid."
Penalty not exceeding 40 s .
Negligence or wilful misbehaviour of drivers of carriages, &c. in streets or highways.	Sect. 25. "And whereas accidents often happen and damage is frequently done in streets and highways by the negligence or wilful misbehaviour of persons driving carriages or vehicles thereon, and the laws now in force have been found insufficient for the due protection of his majesty's subjects; be it therefore enacted, that if the driver of any carriage or vehicle of any kind whatsoever shall ride upon any such carriage or vehicle, or on any of the horses drawing the same, not having some person on foot or on horseback to guide the same (such carriages or vehicles as are commonly driven or conducted by some person holding the reins of the horse or horses excepted), or if the driver of any carriage or any vehicle whatsoever, or any person riding, shall, by negligence, wilful misbehaviour, or any other misconduct, cause any hurt or damage to any person or property being upon any street or highway, or if the driver of any carriage or vehicle whatsoever shall wilfully be at such distance from such carriage or vehicle that he cannot have the direction and government of any horse or horses or cattle drawing the same, not having employed some proper person to take care of the same, or shall, by negligence, wilful misbehaviour, or any other misconduct, interrupt the free passage of any other carriage or vehicle, or of his majesty's subjects, or shall obstruct any street or highway, and, being required by any constable or peace officer to pass on or move, shall continue to obstruct the same, every person so offending in any of the cases aforesaid within five miles of Temple Bar, and being convicted by any justice of the peace of any such offence, either upon confession, or by the oath of a credible witness, shall for every such offence forfeit any sum not exceeding forty shillings, and in every case where any such hurt or damage shall have been caused as aforesaid shall further pay such a sum, not exceeding five pounds, as shall appear to the said justice to be a reasonable compensation to the person so aggrieved or injured; and the evidence of such person shall be admitted in proof of the offence: provided always, that if the person so aggrieved or injured shall have been the only witness examined in proof of the offence, such sum so ordered as compensation shall be paid and applied in the same manner as a penalty; and in default of payment of such penalty and of such compensation, if ordered, together with the costs attending such conviction, immediately or within such time as such justice shall appoint, such justice shall and may commit such offender to the common gaol or House of Correction, to be there imprisoned for any term not exceeding two months, unless such penalty, together with the costs and compensation, if ordered, be sooner paid; and every such offender shall and may, by the authority of this act, with or without any warrant, be apprehended by any person who shall see such offence committed, and shall be immediately conveyed or delivered to a constable or other peace officer, in order to be conveyed before some justice of the peace." [See further, title "Highways in General," Vol. III. "Highways," "Turnpike," Vol. III.]

Sect. 26. "And whereas great inconvenience has arisen from the driving of stage carriages, and from the driving of cattle, sheep, pigs, and other animals in the streets and highways of the metropolis during the hours of divine service, and it is expedient that regulations should be made for preventing such interruption and annoyance; be it therefore enacted, that on the application of the minister or churchwardens of any church, chapel, or other place of public worship to the court of aldermen of the city of London, if the same shall be situated within the city of London or the liberties thereof, or to any two of the justices of the said public office in Bow-street, or to any two of the justices appointed to attend at any of the said police offices which shall be in the vicinity of such church or chapel or place of public worship, if the same shall be situated within the limits and parishes aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the court of aldermen, or for such two justices, as the case may be, to make rules or orders for regulating the route and conduct of persons who shall drive any stage carriage, or who shall drive any cattle, sheep, pigs, or other animals, within such parish or place during the hours of divine service on Sunday, Christmas-day, Good Friday, or any day appointed for a public fast or thanksgiving, and to annex reasonable penalties for the breach of such rules or orders, not exceeding forty shillings with costs, if ordered, for any such offence, provided the same be not repugnant to the laws of the realm, and from time to time to alter and amend the same if necessary; and every breach of any such rule or order shall be deemed a separate offence; and any person who shall offend against any such rule or order shall, on conviction thereof before any justice of the peace, forfeit and pay such penalty as shall be adjudged, and in default of payment within such time as such justice at the time of conviction shall appoint shall be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding one month; and any person committing any offence against any such rule or order may be immediately apprehended, without any warrant, by any constable who shall see such offence committed, and be conveyed before a justice of the peace, to be dealt with as herein-before is mentioned; and any justice of the peace, on complaint made to him that any such offence hath been committed within his jurisdiction, may issue his warrant for the apprehension of any such offender: provided always, that when any such rules or orders shall have been made by the court of aldermen of the city of London, or by any two justices as herein-before is mentioned, the same shall be printed, and affixed on the church, chapel, or place of public worship to which the same shall refer, and in the most conspicuous places leading to and contiguous thereto, and elsewhere, as the said court of aldermen or the said justices shall direct."

Empowering court of aldermen or two justices to regulate the route and conduct of persons driving stage carriages, cattle, &c. during divine service.

Sect. 27. "No proprietor of any stage carriage duly licensed to carry passengers for hire shall be liable to any penalty for any deviation in the route or line of route specified in such licence, which the driver of such stage carriage shall be compelled to make during the hours of divine service by virtue of any order or rules made by the court of aldermen, or by two justices of the peace, as herein-before is mentioned."

Proprietor of stage carriages not liable to penalties for deviating from route prescribed in licence.

3 Wil 4, c. 19.

Penalty for bullock-hunting imposed by 21 G. 3, c. 67, increased.

Sect. 28. "And whereas an act passed in the twenty-first year of the reign of king George the Third, intituled, 'An Act to prevent the mischiefs that arise from driving Cattle within the cities of London and Westminster, and liberties thereof, and bills of mortality,' has been found ineffectual for the prevention of such mischiefs, and it is expedient to extend the powers and enlarge the limits of the said act; be it therefore enacted, that all the powers and provisions of the said act shall extend and be in force within the distance of five miles from Temple Bar, as fully and effectually as if such limits had been originally inserted in the said act; and that if any person not being employed to drive cattle shall within the said limits pelt with stones, brickbats, or by any other means hunt or drive away, or shall set any dog at any ox, heifer, cow, steer, or other cattle, contrary to the provisions of the said act, such person shall, upon being convicted thereof according to the said act, forfeit and pay, on the first conviction, any sum not exceeding forty shillings nor less than twenty shillings, and on the second and every future conviction any sum not exceeding five pounds nor less than fifty shillings, to the person or persons who shall prosecute such offender to conviction, and in default of payment shall be committed to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding two months on the first conviction, nor five months on the second and every future conviction, in the manner prescribed by the said act, unless the penalty be sooner paid."

Penalty for bear-baiting, cock-fighting, &c.

Sect. 29. "And whereas divers places in and about the metropolis are kept and used for the purpose of fighting or baiting of bears or other animals, at which places idle and disorderly persons commonly assemble, to the interruption of good order and the danger of the public peace; be it therefore enacted, that any person who shall, within five miles of Temple Bar, keep or use, or shall act in the management or conducting of any premises or place whatsoever for the purpose of fighting or baiting of bears, cock-fighting, baiting or fighting of badgers or other animals, shall, on conviction thereof before any one justice of the peace, forfeit any sum not exceeding five pounds, and in default of immediate payment shall be liable to be imprisoned and kept to hard labour for any time not exceeding two months, unless the said penalty shall be sooner paid."

Form of conviction.

Sect. 30. "Every conviction for any offence mentioned in this act, except in such cases where the form of such conviction is herein-after provided, may be in the following form of words, or some other form of words to the like effect:

"County, &c. } Be it remembered, that on the day of , in the to wit. } year of our lord , at , A. B. is brought before me, [or, having been duly summoned, has neglected to appear before me,] C. D. Esq., one of his majesty's justices of the peace for the county of [or, city, or liberty or place, as the case may be,] and is charged before me the said justice with having [here describe the offence]; and it appearing to me the said justice, upon the confession of him the said A. B. [or, upon the oath of a credible witness, as the case may be,] that the said A. B. is guilty of the said offence, I do therefore adjudge the said A. B. [insert the adjudication of the justice]. Given under my hand and seal the day and year first above written."

Constables, &c. may apprehend any suspected person or reputed thief and convey him before a justice, who, if he sees just ground, may deem him a rogue and vagabond under 5 Geo. 4, c. 83 (a).

Sect. 31. "And whereas suspected persons and reputed thieves frequent the parks, fields, streets, highways, and places adjacent, and divers places of public resort, and the avenues leading thereto, within the city of London and the liberties thereof, the limits of the weekly bills of mortality, and the parishes aforesaid, and also the said river Thames, and the docks and creeks, quays and warehouses, adjacent thereto, and the streets, highways, and avenues leading to the said river, docks, creeks, quays, and warehouses, with intent to commit felony or other offences; and such persons also frequently assemble together in alehouses and beer shops, and in shops, rooms, the further judgment of the justices at such sessions assembled; and it shall be lawful for the justice before whom such conviction has taken place to bind over the witnesses who shall have been examined in proof of such offence in sufficient recognizances, to attend and be examined at the hearing of such appeal, and that every such witness, on producing a certificate of his being so bound over under the hand of such justice, shall be allowed compensation for his time and trouble and expenses in attending such appeal, which compensation shall be paid by the treasurer of the county in like manner as in cases of misdemeanor according to and under the provisions of an act passed in the seventh year of the reign of his late majesty, intituled 'An Act for improving the Administration of Criminal Justice in England:' Provided always, that in case such appeal shall be dismissed and such conviction affirmed, the reasonable expenses of all such witnesses attending as aforesaid, to be ascertained by the court, shall be paid by the appellant or appellants, and the recognizance or recognizances so entered into as aforesaid shall be estreated, unless such expenses are so paid by such appellant or appellants."

Sect. 34. "If any person shall wilfully destroy or damage or endeavour to destroy or damage, or be wilfully concerned in destroying or damaging or endeavouring to destroy or damage, any boat or vessel belonging to or hired or employed by or by the authority of the justices appointed to attend at the Thames police office, or any part of the sails, oars, or other tackle, stores, goods, or furniture contained in or belonging to any such boat or vessel, every person so offending shall on conviction thereof before a justice of the peace forfeit and pay for every boat or vessel so destroyed or damaged or attempted to be destroyed or damaged, or of which any of the tackle or other contents shall have been so destroyed or damaged or attempted to be destroyed or damaged, any sum not exceeding thirty pounds, or shall suffer imprisonment for any time not exceeding three months, over and above any such damages as may be recoverable by action at law against any such offender."

Sect. 35. "It shall be lawful for every such Thames police surveyor (subject to the orders of any of the said justices appointed to attend the Thames police office), having just cause to suspect that any felony has been or is about to be committed in or on board of any ship, hoy, barge, lighter, boat, or other vessel lying or being in the said river, docks, or creeks, to enter at all times, as well by night as by day, into and upon every such ship, hoy, barge, lighter, boat, or other vessel, and therein to take all necessary measures for the effectual prevention or detection of all felonies which he has just cause to suspect to have been or to be about to be committed in and upon the said river, docks, or creeks, and to apprehend and detain all persons suspected of being concerned in such felonies, and also all property so suspected to be stolen, and the same to produce before some justice, to be dealt with according to law."

Sect. 36. "It shall be lawful for every such Thames police surveyor, at any time between sun-rising and sun-setting, to enter any ship or vessel (except his majesty's ships) in the said river, docks, and creeks, and to search the same for unlawful quantities of gunpowder, and also to exercise the same powers of seizing, removing to proper places, and detaining all such unlawful quantities of gunpowder found on board any such ship or vessel, and the barrels or other packages in which such gunpowder shall be, as are given to persons searching for unlawful quantities of gunpowder, under a warrant of a justice, by virtue of an act passed in the twelfth year of the reign of king George the Third, intituled 'An Act to regulate the making, keeping, and carriage of Gunpowder within Great Britain, and to repeal the Laws heretofore made for any of those Purposes.'" Boats or carriages having stolen property may be searched and detained, and persons suspected of having such goods may be taken before a justice.

Sect. 37. "It shall be lawful for any Thames police surveyor or constable, or any other police or peace officer, within his jurisdiction, to stop, search, and detain in some place of safety any boat, craft, or vessel which there shall be reason to suspect of having or conveying by water, and also any cart or carriage which there shall be reason to suspect of having or conveying on land, any goods, matter, or thing stolen or unlawfully obtained, and also to apprehend, search, and detain any person who may be reasonably suspected of having or conveying in any manner any goods, matter, or thing stolen or unlawfully obtained, and to convey every such person as soon as conveniently may be, together with such goods, matter, or thing, before some justice of the peace; and if such person shall not give an account to the satisfaction of such justice how he or she came by the same, such person shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall suffer as herein-after mentioned; and such boat, craft, or vessel, cart or carriage, shall upon such conviction be forfeited and disposed of as is herein-after directed."

Sect. 38. "If on an information given on oath it shall appear to any justice that there is reasonable cause for suspecting that any goods, matter, or thing stolen or unlawfully obtained are or is concealed or otherwise lodged in any dwelling house, warehouse, yard, garden, or any other place, it shall be lawful for such justice, by special warrant under his hand and seal, directed to any Thames police surveyor or constable as aforesaid, or other constable within his jurisdiction, to cause every such place to be entered and searched at any time of the day, or by night if power for that purpose be especially given in and by such warrant; and the said justice, if it shall appear to him necessary, may moreover empower such surveyor or constable, with any such assistance as to the said justice may appear, or by such surveyor or constable may be found necessary (such surveyor or constable having previously made known such his authority), to use force for the effecting of such entry, whether by breaking open doors or otherwise, and if upon search thereupon made any such goods, matter, or thing shall be found, then to convey the same forthwith to and before a justice, or to guard the same on the spot while the offenders are taken before a justice, or otherwise dispose thereof in some place of safety, subject to the orders of a justice in manner above-mentioned, and moreover to apprehend and convey before the said justice the person or persons in whose house, lodging, or other place the same shall so have been found, as also every other person found in such house, lodging, or place who shall appear to have been privy to the depositing of such goods, matter, or thing in such place, knowing, or having reasonable cause to suspect the same to have been stolen or otherwise unlawfully obtained; and if such person respectively shall not immediately, or within some reasonable time to be assigned by the justice, make it appear to the satisfaction of the justice by what lawful means such goods, matter, or thing came to be deposited or situated in such place as aforesaid without any default on the part of such persons respectively, then and in such case the person or persons in whose house, lodging, or other place any such suspected goods, matter, or thing shall have been found, and also every other person so appearing to have been privy to the depositing thereof, knowing or having cause to suspect the same to have been stolen, or otherwise unlawfully obtained, shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall suffer as hereinafter mentioned."

believe the same to have been stolen or unlawfully obtained, every such person shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall suffer as hereinafter mentioned; and every such person shall be deemed to have had possession of such goods, matter, or thing at the time and place when and where the same shall have been found or seized; and the possession of a carrier, agent, or servant, shall be deemed to be the possession of the person who shall have employed such other person to convey the same."

Sect. 40. "Every person who, for the purpose of protecting or preventing any goods, matter, or thing whatsoever from being seized on suspicion of their being stolen or otherwise unlawfully obtained, or of preventing the same from being produced or made to serve as evidence of or concerning any felony or misdemeanor, shall frame or cause to be framed, or be anywise concerned in framing or causing to be framed, any bill of parcels containing any false statement in regard to the name or abode of any alleged vendor, the quantity or quality of any such goods, matter, or thing, the place from whence or the conveyance by which the same were furnished, the price agreed upon or charged for the same, or any other particular, knowing such statement to be false, or who shall fraudulently produce such bill of parcels knowing the same to have been fraudulently framed, shall be adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall suffer as hereinafter mentioned."

Sect. 41. "Any person who shall be found in or upon any canal, dock, warehouse, wharf, quay, or bank, or on board any ship, vessel, boat or craft, having in his or her possession any tube or other instrument for the purpose of unlawfully procuring or obtaining any wine, spirits, or other liquors, or having in his or her possession any skin, bladder, or other material or utensil, for the purpose of unlawfully secreting or carrying away any such wine, spirits, or other liquors, and any person who shall attempt unlawfully to procure or obtain any such wine, spirits, or other liquors, shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall suffer as hereinafter mentioned."

Sect. 42. "And whereas for the purpose of increasing the facility of depredation, it hath been a common practice among persons concerned in the landing and warehousing of merchandize from on board ships and vessels in the said river wilfully to injure and promote the opening and breaking of casks, bags, and other packages, and the spilling of their contents; for remedy thereof be it further enacted, that if any person employed in the loading, landing, or warehousing of any goods, or any other person, shall wilfully or through culpable negligence or carelessness cause or suffer, or be concerned in causing or suffering, to be broken, bruised, pierced, started, cut, torn, or otherwise injured, any cask, box, chest, bag, or other package containing or being designed and prepared for containing any goods while on board of any barge, lighter, or other craft, lying or being in the said river, or any dock, creek, quay, wharf, or landing place adjacent to the same, or in the way to or from any warehouse to or from which such package shall have been removed, shall be removing, or about to be removed, with intent that the contents of such package or any part thereof may be spilled or dropped from such package, every person so offending shall for every such offence be deemed and adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and shall suffer as hereinafter mentioned."

Sect. 43. "If for the purpose of preventing the seizure or discovery of any materials, furniture, stores, or merchandize belonging to or having been part of the cargo of any ship or vessel lying in the said river, or the docks or creeks adjacent thereto, or of any other articles unlawfully obtained from any such ship or vessel, any such or any other article shall be wilfully let fall or thrown into the river, or in any other manner directly or purposely conveyed away or endeavoured to be conveyed away from any ship, boat, barge, lighter, craft, wharf, quay, or other landing place, every person being party, privy, or accessory to such letting fall, throwing, or conveyance, or to any previous instructions or premeditated design so to let fall, throw, or convey away any such article with any such purpose as aforesaid, shall be deemed and adjudged guilty of a misdemeanor, and suffer as herein-after mentioned; and every Thames police surveyor, or constable or other peace officer within his jurisdiction, shall apprehend and detain and forthwith convey such person before some justice, and shall also seize and detain any boat in which such person shall be found, or out of which any such article shall be so let fall, thrown, or conveyed away; and upon the conviction of such person, such boat, with her tackle, apparel, furniture, and loading, shall be forfeited and disposed of as is herein-after directed."

3 Wil. 4, c. 19.

Sect. 44. "For every offence herein-before declared to be a misdemeanor, or for which no special penalty is herein-before appointed, the offender shall, at the discretion of the justice before whom the conviction shall take place, either forfeit and pay any sum not exceeding five pounds, or suffer imprisonment for any time not exceeding two months, with or without hard labour, in any gaol or house of correction within the jurisdiction of such justice; and in case of the adjudication of a pecuniary penalty, and non-payment thereof, it shall be lawful for such justice to commit the offender to any gaol or house of correction for the like term, unless such penalty shall be sooner paid; and one moiety of every such pecuniary penalty, if recovered or adjudged before any justice or justices at the said public office in Bow-street, or at any of the said police offices, shall be paid to the said receiver as aforesaid for the purposes of this act, and if recovered or adjudged in the city of London, or the liberties thereof, shall be paid to the chamberlain of the city of London for the time being, and the other moiety thereof, under the direction of the justice by whom the same shall have been adjudged, shall either be paid and applied to the use of the informer alone, or be distributed between such persons as shall have contributed to the conviction of the offender, in such shares and proportions as such justice shall think fit; and that when any articles shall be seized by virtue of this act, and the person in whose possession the same shall have been found shall be convicted of a misdemeanor as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for the justice before whom the conviction shall take place to cause such articles to be advertised in some public newspaper, to the end that persons having a right thereto may claim and receive the same within thirty days from the date of such advertisement, in the manner and upon the conditions directed in and by an act of the second year of the reign of king George the Third, intituled 'An Act to prevent the committing of Thefts and Frauds by Persons navigating Bum-boats and other Boats upon the river Thames;' and if no person shall prove his property and right to the said articles within the said thirty days, the same shall be sold for the best price that can reasonably be gotten for the same; and after deducting the charges, according to the said recited act, the residue of the produce thereof shall be paid to the said receiver for the purposes of this act."

For offences declared misdemeanors, and for which no penalty is appointed, offenders shall forfeit not exceeding 5*l.*, or be imprisoned (with or without hard labour).

Articles seized to be advertised if person convicted.

2 Geo. 3, c. 28.

Sect. 45. "In every case in which complaint shall be made of any offence by this act declared to be a misdemeanor, or of any offence touching any boat or vessel belonging to or hired or employed by the justices appointed to attend at the Thames police office, the matter of such complaint, if the offence shall have been committed or the offender apprehended within the jurisdiction of the city of London, may be heard and determined by the lord mayor, recorder, or one of the aldermen of the said city, and not elsewhere; but if the offence shall have been committed or the offender apprehended out of the said jurisdiction, such complaint may be heard and determined, either by one of the justices appointed to the Thames police office as aforesaid, or by any other justice within whose jurisdiction the offence shall have been committed or the offender apprehended; and every conviction for any such offence shall be certified, filed, and entered in such manner as is directed in and by the said last recited act with respect to convictions under that act, and may also be drawn up in such form and manner, mutatis mutandis, as is appointed in and by the same act; and neither such conviction nor any proceeding previous thereto shall be removed by certiorari or otherwise into any court of record, but such conviction shall be final and conclusive to all intents and purposes whatsoever.

Sect. 46. "And whereas the punishments for misdemeanors provided in and by the said last-recited act have been found insufficient for the preventing of such offences; be it enacted, that every person who shall be guilty of any of the offences respectively made and declared to be misdemeanors in and by the said act may be punished, at the discretion of the justice or justices by or before whom the offender shall be convicted, either with the punishment appointed in and by the said act, or by such other punishment as is hereby appointed in cases of offences declared to be misdemeanors by this present act; and that all the powers and provisions of the said last-recited act respecting the obstruction of its execution, and the commencement and prosecution of actions against justices and their officers acting thereunder, shall extend to all things done and to all persons acting under this act, as fully as if the same powers and provisions were herein repeated and re-enacted."

Sect. 47. "And be it further enacted, that in all cases in which it is directed by the said last-recited act that any boat, with her tackle and appurtenances, which shall be forfeited, shall be burnt and destroyed, it shall be lawful for any justice before whom any person shall have been convicted of any offence whereby any boat is or should be adjudged to be forfeited under that act, and also for any justice by whom any boat shall be adjudged to be forfeited under this act, to direct such boat, with her tackle and appurtenances, either to be burnt and destroyed, or to be restored to the owners thereof, or to be publicly sold, and the produce of such sale to be applied in like manner as other forfeitures under this act."

Sect. 48. "And for the more effectual prevention of accidents by fire and other mischiefs upon the said river, be it further enacted, that if any master or commander or other officer of any ship or vessel (except his majesty's ships) shall, while such ship or vessel shall lie or be in the said river between Westminster bridge and Blackwall, keep any gun on board such ship or vessel shotted or loaded with ball, or cause or permit to be fired or discharged any gun on board such ship or vessel before sun-rising or after sun-setting, such master, commander, or other officer shall for every such gun so kept shotted or loaded forfeit the sum of five shillings, and for every gun so fired or discharged the sum of ten shillings; and if any master, commander, or other officer of any such ship or vessel, or any other person on board of the same, or any person on board of any barge, lighter, boat, or other craft or vessel, shall, while such ship, barge, lighter, boat, craft, or vessel shall lie or be in the said river between Westminster bridge and Blackwall, heat or melt, or cause or permit to be heated or melted, by fire, loggerheat shot, or any other means, on board any ship, barge, lighter, boat, craft, or vessel whatever, any pitch, tar, resin, grease, tallow, oil, or other combustibile matter, every person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit any sum not exceeding five pounds; and any one of the justices appointed to attend at the Thames police office, or any other justice within his jurisdiction, is hereby authorized and required, upon any complaint made in that behalf within ten days next after any such offence shall have been committed, to summon the party accused, and also the witnesses on either side, or, after oath made of the commission of any of the facts above mentioned by one or more credible witness or witnesses, to issue a warrant to apprehend the party accused, and upon the party's appearance, or contempt in not appearing (upon the proof of notice given), such justice shall proceed to the examination of the witness or witnesses on oath, and upon due proof thereof, either by the voluntary confession of the party, or by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, to give judgment or sentence; and in case the party accused shall be convicted of such offence, it shall and may be lawful for such justice to commit such offender to prison, there to remain for any time not exceeding the space of two months, unless the penalty shall be sooner paid."

Sect. 49. "And whereas disputes frequently arise between bargemen, lightermen, watermen, ballastmen, coal-whippers, coal-porters, sailors, lumpers, riggers, shipwrights, caulkers, and other labourers who work for hire in or upon the said river, and the docks, creeks, wharfs, quays, and places adjacent, respecting wages or money due to them for work, and the owners, masters, or commanders of vessels and their agents, and the owners, wharfingers, or occupiers of such wharfs or quays, and their agents, and other persons employing such labourers; be it further enacted, that all differences, complaints, and disputes which shall happen and arise between any bargemen, lightermen, watermen, ballastmen (except Trinity ballastmen), coal-whippers, coal-porters, sailors, lumpers, riggers, shipwrights, caulkers, or other labourers who work for hire in or upon the said river, or the docks, creeks, wharfs, quays, or places adjacent, and the owners, masters, or commanders of vessels, or their agents, on the said river, or the docks or creeks thereunto adjoining, or the owners, wharfingers, or occupiers of such wharfs or quays, or their agents or other employers, respecting wages or money due to such labourers for work, whether the same persons be employed for any certain time, or in any other manner, shall be heard and determined by the justices appointed to the Thames police office, or any one of them, or any other justice within his jurisdiction; and every such justice is hereby empowered to summon before him any such master or commander of any vessel, or any such owner thereof, or his agent, or the owner, wharfinger, or occupier of any wharf or quay, or their respective agents, or any other employer; and if any such person being so summoned shall refuse or neglect to attend such summons, then every such justice is hereby empowered to issue his warrant to bring such person summoned before him to answer such complaint, and to examine upon oath any such labourer as aforesaid, or any other witness or witnesses, touching any such complaint or dispute, and to make such order for payment of so much wages to such labourer as to such justice shall seem just and reasonable, provided that the sum ordered do not exceed five pounds, besides all reasonable costs attending the prosecution of the complaint, which costs the justice is empowered to order; and in case of refusal to pay, or nonpayment of any sum so ordered, by the space of twenty-four hours next after such determination, such justice may issue forth his warrant to levy the same by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the person ordered to pay the same, together with the charges of such distress and sale; and if no sufficient distress shall be found, such justice shall commit the person ordered to make such payment to prison for any time not exceeding one month, unless the sum so ordered shall be sooner paid; and every such order shall be final and conclusive to all intents and purposes, and shall not be removable by certiorari or otherwise into any court whatsoever."

by justices, provided the sum in question does not exceed 5*l*.

Sect. 50. Provided always, "that nothing herein contained shall extend to authorize or empower any justice, except the Lord Mayor, aldermen, and recorder of the city of London for the time being, or some or one of them, to hear and determine any such differences, complaints, or disputes as shall or may arise for or in respect of any employment or work done within the said city of London, or the suburbs and liberties thereof, or on board of any ship, hoy, barge, lighter, boat, or other vessel lying or being on the north side of the river, between the Tower of London and the western extremity of the Temple, adjoining Essex-street, in the county of Middlesex."

Jurisdiction for determining disputes about wages for labour done on Thames, &c.

Sect. 51. Provided always, "that nothing in this act shall extend to deprive the Lord Mayor and commonalty and citizens of the city of London of any right, privilege, or jurisdiction heretofore lawfully claimed, exercised, or enjoyed within the town and borough of Southwark or the liberties thereof, or to prevent the said Lord Mayor for the time being, or such of the aldermen of the said city as have borne the office of mayoralty, or the recorder of the said city for the time being, from acting as justices of the peace within the said town and borough of Southwark and the liberties thereof in such and the like manner as they could or might have done in case this act had not been made, nor to deprive the Lord Mayor and commonalty and citizens of the said city of any right, privilege, immunity, or jurisdiction which they have heretofore lawfully claimed, exercised, or enjoyed upon the said river, or the Lord Mayor of the said city for the time being as conservator of the said river, nor to prevent the said Lord Mayor and the said aldermen and recorder of the said city from acting as justices of the peace upon the said river, or taking cognizance of offences committed upon or within the limits of the same, in such manner as they might or would have done in case this act had not been made."

Sect. 52. Provided also, "that nothing in this act shall extend to deprive the dean and chapter of the collegiate church of Saint Peter Westminster, or the high steward or high bailiff of the city and liberty of Westminster, for the time being, or their respective lawful deputies, of any rights, privileges, or jurisdictions which they have heretofore lawfully claimed, exercised, or enjoyed within the said city and liberty, in such and the like manner as they could or might have done in case this act had not been made."

Sect. 53. Provided also, "that nothing in this act contained shall extend to prejudice or derogate from any of the rights, privileges, or authorities of the master, warden, and assistants of the guild, fraternity, or brotherhood of the most glorious and undivided Trinity, and of St. Clement, in the parish of Deptford Strond in the county of Kent.

Sect. 54. "This act shall commence and take effect upon the day next after the day of the passing thereof, and shall continue until the fifth day of July in the year one thousand eight hundred and thirty-six, and from thence until the end of the then next session of Parliament; and that as soon as this act shall commence and take effect, an act passed in the third year of the reign of his late majesty George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for the more effectual administration of the office of a Justice of the Peace in and near the Metropolis, and for the more effectual prevention of Depredations on the river Thames and its vicinity, for seven years;' and an act passed in the sixth year of the reign of his said late majesty George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act to amend an Act for the more effectual Administration of the Office of a Justice of the Peace in and near the Metropolis;' and also an act passed in the tenth year of the reign of his said late majesty George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act to continue until the fifth day of July, one thousand eight hundred and thirty-two, an Act for the more effectual Administration of the Office of a Justice of the Peace in and near the Metropolis,' shall cease and determine; except as to any offences which may have been committed against any of the acts before the commencement of this act, and as to any penalties which may have been incurred under any of the said acts before the commencement of this act, which offences shall be dealt with and punished, and the penalties recovered, as if this act had not been passed; and except also as to any matters done by any persons under the authority of any of the said acts before the commencement of this act, with respect to which every privilege and protection given to such persons by any of the said acts shall continue in force as if this act had not been passed."

Sect. 55. "It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, on complaint made to him of any offence committed against this act, either to summon or to issue his warrant for the apprehension of the offender, as he shall think fit."

Sect. 56. "Wherever the word month or months shall occur in this act, the same shall be deemed and taken to mean a calendar month or calendar months."

Sect. 57. "This act may be amended, altered, or repealed by any act to be passed in this present session of parliament."

Sect. 58. "This act shall be deemed, adjudged, and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such by all judges, justices, and other persons whomsoever, without the same being specially pleaded."

By the 3 & 4 Wil. IV. c. 89, intituled "An Act to authorize the issue of a sum of Money out of the Consolidated Fund towards the support of the Metropolitan Police," [28 August, 1833,] reciting, "Whereas an act was passed in the tenth year of the reign of his late majesty King George the Fourth, intituled, 'An Act for improving the Police in and near the Metropolis:' and whereas it was among other things therein enacted, that as soon as the police to be appointed under that act should take charge of any parish, township, precinct, or place, whether parochial or extra-parochial, within the metropolitan police district, it should be lawful for the justices appointed under that act forthwith, and so from time to time, subject to the approbation of one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, to issue a warrant under their hands to the overseers of the poor of every such parish, township, precinct, or place, by which warrant they should command the said overseers, out of the money collected for the relief of the poor in such parish, township, precinct, or place, to pay the amount mentioned in the warrant for the purposes of the police under that act, or to levy such amount as a part of the rate for the relief of the poor in such parish, precinct, township or place; and that the overseers should pay over the amount mentioned in the warrant to the receiver to be appointed under that act within forty days from the delivery of such warrant to any one of the overseers; provided always, that the sum to be paid for the purposes of police under that act should not exceed in the whole in any one year the rate of eight-pence in the pound on the full and fair annual value of all property rateable to the relief of the poor within such parish, township, precinct, or place, such full and fair annual value to be computed according to the last valuation for the time being acted upon in assessing the county rate; and that the warrant should specify the rate in the pound upon which the sum mentioned therein should be computed: and whereas it is just and expedient that the said parishes, townships, precincts, or places should be relieved of part of such charge, and that part thereof should be paid out of the consolidated fund, upon certain conditions, in the manner hereinafter mentioned:"

it is enacted, "that upon the certificate of one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, that the overseers of the poor of any parish, township, precinct, or place have paid all arrears due under the said recited act, or have made arrangements for the payment of the same satisfactory to the said secretary of state, and have also raised and paid, within the period prescribed by the said recited act, a sum equal to three-pence in the pound on the full annual value of all property, rated according to the provisions of the said recited act, towards the discharge of any warrant issued after, or which shall not have become due before, the passing of this act, for maintaining the police of the metropolis for the six months next ensuing, the lord high treasurer or the commissioners of his majesty's treasury for the time being, or any three or more of them, shall direct, by warrant under their hands and seals, such a sum for and in addition to every three-pence so raised and paid as aforesaid, to be issued and paid from the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland to the receiver appointed under the said act, as may be required in addition to the sum raised by such three-pence in the pound, to defray the charge of maintaining the police of the metropolis; and no such parish, township, precinct, or place, having paid all arrears and such three-pence in the pound as aforesaid, shall be subject to any further higher charge towards defraying the charge of the police during the period of six months from the date of any such warrant, any thing in the said recited act to the contrary notwithstanding."

[See enactment of 10 Geo. IV. c. 44, as to the police rates, ante, 218, &c.]

On certificate from secretary of state that arrears and rates required under the recited act have been paid in any parish, &c., the Treasury to direct such sum as shall be necessary in addition thereto to be advanced from consolidated fund.

Sect. 2. "No larger sum than sixty thousand pounds shall be issued out of the consolidated fund in any one year for the purpose aforesaid, and for the general maintenance of the police of the metropolis; which said sum shall be issued and paid free and clear of all rates, fees, and impositions whatsoever."

Sum advanced not to exceed 60,000*l.* in any one year.

Sect. 3. "Nothing in this act contained shall alter or repeal any of the powers given by the said recited act for enforcing the payment of any warrants which may be issued from time to time according to the provisions of said act."

Powers of recited act, as to enforcing payment not to be altered.

Sect. 4. "The receiver appointed under the said recited act shall, with respect to the application of and accounting for such sum or sums as shall be issued and paid to him out of the consolidated fund under this act, be subject to the same regulations and provisions to which he is subject under the said act with respect to the monies receivable by him under the said act."

Application of and accounting for the money.

By 6 & 7 Wil. IV. c. 50, intituled, "An Act to authorize the placing of 6 & 7 Wil. 4, c. 50.

3 & 4 Wil. 4, c. 89. the Horse Patrol now acting under the Authority of the Chief Magistrate of the Public Office in Bow Street under the Authority of the Justices appointed for the Metropolitan Police District, [13th August, 1836,] reciting, "whereas it is expedient that the horse patrol now acting under the authority of the chief magistrate of the public-office in Bow-street should be placed under the authority of the justices appointed by virtue of an act passed in the tenth year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, intituled, 'An Act for improving the Police in and near the Metropolis;' it is therefore enacted, "that it shall be lawful for one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state to direct that such horse-patrol shall be under the authority of the said justices for the time being; and it shall be lawful for one of the said justices to administer to such horse-patrol an oath to act as constables for the preservation of the peace, and preventing robberies and other felonies, and apprehending offenders against the peace; and the men so sworn shall, within the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Hertford, Essex, and Kent, and within all liberties therein, and within the royal palaces of his majesty, his heirs and successors, and ten miles thereof, have all such powers, authorities, privileges, and advantages, and be liable to all such duties and responsibilities, as any constable duly appointed now has or hereafter may have within his constablewick by virtue of the common law of this realm, or of any statutes made or to be made, and shall obey all such lawful commands as they may from time to time receive from any of the said justices for conducting themselves in the execution of their office."

10 Geo. 4, c. 44.
Horse-patrol to be under the authority of the justices appointed under the recited act.

Such justices to act also in the counties of Berks and Bucks.

The said justices to appoint the persons to act as horse-patrol.

Penalty for assaulting horse-patrol.

Punishing horse-patrol for disobedience of orders.

Sect. 2. "It shall be lawful for his majesty to appoint the said justices to be justices of the peace of the counties of Berks and Bucks and of all liberties therein, and for the said justices so appointed to execute the duties of a justice of the peace for the said counties of Berks and Bucks and for all liberties therein, although they may not have any such qualification by estate as is required by law in the case of any other person being justices of the peace for any county: provided always, that no such person shall act as a justice of the peace at any court of general or quarter sessions, nor in any matter out of sessions, except for the preservation of the peace, the prevention of crimes, the detection and committal of offenders, and in carrying into execution the purposes of this act."

Sect. 3. "The said justices may from time to time, subject to the approbation of one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, appoint fit and proper persons to act as such horse-patrol, and may frame such orders and regulations as they shall deem expedient relative to the general government of the said horse-patrol, the places of their residence, the classification, rank, and particular service of the several members, their distribution and inspection, the description of arms, accoutrements, and other necessities to be furnished them, and all such other orders and regulations relative to the said horse-patrol as the said justices shall from time to time deem expedient; and the said justices may at any time suspend or dismiss from his employment any man belonging to the said horse-patrol whom they shall think remiss or negligent in the discharge of his duty, or otherwise unfit for the same; and when any man shall be so dismissed or cease to belong to the said horse-patrol all powers vested in him as a constable by virtue of this act shall immediately cease and determine."

Sect. 4. "If any person shall assault or resist any person belonging to the said horse-patrol in the execution of his duty, or shall aid or incite any person so to assault or resist, every such offender, being convicted thereof before two justices of the peace, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay such sum, not exceeding 5*l.*, as the said justices shall think meet, and in default of immediate payment shall suffer imprisonment with or without hard labour for any time not exceeding two months."

Sect. 5. "If any of the said horse-patrol shall be guilty of any disobedience of orders, neglect of duty, or of any misconduct as such constable, and shall be convicted thereof before two justices of the peace, he shall forfeit any sum not exceeding 10*l.*, and in default of immediate payment shall suffer imprisonment, with or without hard labour, for any time not exceeding three months: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall prevent any such person from being proceeded against by way of indictment for any offence committed by him as a constable, so as that no person shall be proceeded against both by indictment and also under this act for the same offence." 6 & 7 Wil. 4, c. 50.

Sect. 6. "If any victualler, or keeper of any house, shop, room, or other place for the sale of any liquors, whether spirituous or otherwise, shall knowingly harbour or entertain any man belonging to the said horse-patrol, or permit such man to abide or remain in his house, shop, or room, or other place during any part of the time appointed for his being on duty, every such victualler or keeper as aforesaid, being convicted thereof before any two justices of the peace, shall for every such offence forfeit and pay such sum, not exceeding 5*l.*, as they shall think meet." Penalty on victuallers harbouring horse-patrol.

Sect. 7. "It shall be lawful for one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state to direct that the receiver for the time being of the police-offices established in the parishes of St. Margaret Westminster, St. James Westminster, St. Marylebone, St. Andrew Holborn, St. Leonard Shoreditch, St. Mary Whitechapel, and St. John of Wapping, in the county of Middlesex, and St. Saviour, in the county of Surrey, to pay over, out of the monies issued to him out of the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, to the receiver of the metropolitan-police district for the time being, an annual sum, not exceeding 10,000*l.*, for the support and maintenance of the said horse-patrol." Receiver of police-offices to pay over a certain sum to the receiver of the metropolitan-police district for the support of the horse-patrol.

Sect. 8. "The said receiver of the metropolitan-police district shall pay over all monies so received by him on account of the said horse-patrol into the hands of the governor and company of the Bank of England, and shall keep a separate and distinct account of such monies, and of all sums expended by him in respect of the said horse-patrol." Receiver of metropolitan-police district to pay such monies into the Bank of England.

Sect. 9. "All the provisions and enactments contained in the aforesaid act relative to the drawing and accounting for monies which may come into the hands of the said receiver of the metropolitan-police district for the purposes of that act, and for the auditing the accounts of the said receiver, and the powers and liabilities of the said receiver, shall be deemed and taken to extend to the said receiver in respect to the said horse-patrol, so far as the same may be applicable, as fully and entirely as if the same were herein expressed and enacted." Extending certain powers of act 10 Geo. 4, to this act.

Sect. 10. "The said receiver of the metropolitan-police district shall stand possessed of all the horses, arms, accoutrements, and other necessities which have been furnished, and are in the use or possession of the said horse-patrol, and make all such contracts or disbursements as shall be necessary for renting any land or buildings, or for erecting, fitting up, furnishing, or repairing any buildings for the purposes of this act, in such manner as one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state shall direct; and of all lands and buildings so to be rented, and of the fixtures and furniture thereof, and of all goods and chattels whatsoever to be from time to time held or purchased for the purposes of this act, the property acquired therein shall be vested in the said receiver for the time being; and the said receiver may, by the directions of such principal secretary of state, sell, assign, or dispose of the whole or any part of such property as aforesaid, and shall execute all such lawful matters for carrying this act into execution as such principal secretary of state shall from time to time direct." Horses, arms, &c. of horse-patrol vested in receiver of metropolitan police.

Sect. 11. "The said receiver of the metropolitan-police district, out of the monies so received by him on account of the said horse-patrol, shall from time to time pay to the horse-patrol such salaries, wages, and allowances, and at such periods, as one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state shall direct, and also any extraordinary expenses which they shall appear to have necessarily incurred in apprehending offenders, and executing the orders of either of the justices, such expenses being first examined and approved by one of the said justices; and the receiver shall likewise pay any further sums which such principal secretary of state shall direct to be paid to any of the persons belonging to the said horse-patrol, as a reward for extraordinary diligence or exertion, or as a compensation for wounds or severe injuries received in the performance of their duty, or as an allowance to such of them as shall be disabled by bodily injury received, or shall be worn out by length of service, and he shall also pay all other charges and expenses which such principal secretary of state shall direct to be paid for carrying this act into execution." The said receiver to pay wages of horse-patrol, and expenses connected therewith.

6 & 7 Wil. 4, c. 50.

Provisions of recited act relative to punishment of offenders extended to this act.

Horse-patrol not to be allowed to vote, or otherwise interfere in elections, except in discharge of their official duties.

Sect. 12. "All the provisions contained in the hereinbefore mentioned act for the punishment of offences and recovery and application of penalties shall be deemed and taken to extend to any offence committed against this act, so far as the same may be applicable, as fully and entirely as if the same were herein expressed and enacted."

Sect. 13. "No person who after the passing of this act may be appointed to the said horse-patrol shall, during the time that he shall continue a member thereof, or within six calendar months after he shall have quitted the same, be capable of giving his vote for the election of a member to serve in parliament for the counties of Middlesex, Surrey, Hertford, Essex, or Kent, or for any city or borough within the metropolitan-police district, nor shall, by word, message, writing, or in any other manner, endeavour to persuade any elector to give or dissuade any elector from giving his vote for the choice of any person to be a member to serve in parliament for any such county, city, or borough; and if any such person belonging to the said horse-patrol shall offend therein he shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.*, to be recovered by any person who will sue for the same by action of debt, to be commenced within six calendar months after the commission of the offence; and one moiety of the sum so recovered shall be paid to the informer, and the other moiety thereof to the receiver for the metropolitan-police district, to be by him added to and applied as part of the funds for the purposes of the said horse-patrol: provided always, that nothing in this enactment contained shall subject any such person belonging to the said horse-patrol to any penalty for any act done by him at or concerning any of the said elections in the discharge of his official duty."

Bigamy and poly-

9 Geo. 4, c. 31.

Punishment for.

Place of trial.

Exceptions.

Repeal.

General clauses.

Alterations of previous laws.

BIGAMY is where a man has two wives successively; Polygamy, where he hath several wives at the same time; but they are commonly confounded one with the other.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 22, "if any person, being married, shall marry any other person, during the life of the former husband or wife, (whether the second marriage shall have taken place in England or elsewhere,) every such offender, and every person counselling, aiding, or abetting such offender, shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be transported beyond the seas, for the term of seven years, or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol, or house of correction, for any term not exceeding two years; and any such offence may be dealt with, inquired of, tried, determined, and punished, in the county where the offender shall be apprehended, or be in custody, as if the offence had been actually committed in that county: provided always, that nothing herein contained shall extend to any second marriage contracted out of England, by any other than a subject of his majesty, or to any person marrying a second time, whose husband or wife shall have been continually absent from such person for the space of seven years then last past, and shall not have been known by such person to be living within that time, or shall extend to any person who, at the time of such second marriage, shall have been divorced from the bond of the first marriage, or to any person whose former marriage shall have been declared void by the sentence of any court of competent jurisdiction."

By this act, all the prior statutes relative to this offence are repealed.

See the general clauses of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, affecting all its provisions, title "Malicious Injuries to Persons," Vol. III.

Before this act, if the second marriage took place out of the jurisdiction of the law of England, it was not punishable under that law. Moreover, as the law then stood, a person whose consort had been abroad for seven years, though known to be living, might marry again with impunity; and it was also held, under one of the former statutes, that a person divorced a mensâ et thoro only, was exempt from the penalties of bigamy. (1 East, P. C. 466.) It will be seen the present act has made many improvements in these respects. (See Collyer's Statutes, 28; Carr. C. L. 251, 2.)

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 28, s. 10, if the convict be already under sentence of transportation or imprisonment, the sentence for bigamy may commence after the expiration of the former sentence.

Being Married.]—This extends to a marriage de facto, or voidable by reason of consanguinity, affinity, or such like; for it is a marriage in judgment of law until it be avoided; and, therefore, though neither marriage be de jure, yet they are within this statute. (3 Inst. 88. See R. v. Jacobs, R. & M. 140, post, 248.)

Voidable marriage.

But it is otherwise if the marriage be not voidable merely, but void: as, for instance, if a woman marry A., and in the lifetime of A. marry B.; and after the death of A., and whilst B. is alive, she marry C.; she cannot be indicted for bigamy in her marriage with C., because her marriage with B. was a mere nullity. (1 Hale, 693; post, 250.)

Void marriage.

So, the marriage of an idiot, or of a lunatic not in a lucid interval, is void, because he is deemed in law incapable of entering into such a contract. (1 Bl. Com. 438, 439.) So, if a boy, under fourteen, or a girl under twelve, contract matrimony, it is void, unless both husband and wife consent to and confirm the marriage, after the minor arrives at the age of consent. (Co. Lit. 79; see R. v. Gordon, R. & R. 48.)

A valid marriage must exist and be proved; (per Bayley, J., in Smith v. Huson, 1 Phillimore, 287); the law will not presume it in cases of bigamy, as it will in civil cases. (Ib.)

With respect to the place where banns may be published and a marriage solemnized, (see the Marriage Act, 4 Geo. IV. c. 76, and 6 Geo. IV. c. 92.) The non-residence of the parties where the banns were published, or, if by licence, where the marriage was solemnized, is immaterial. (4 Geo. IV. c. 76, s. 26; R. v. Hind, R. & R. 253.)

If the marriage were by licence, and celebrated under the stat. 26 Geo. II. c. 33, it was necessary, by s. 11, if either of the parties were a minor at the time, to constitute the offence of bigamy, to prove that the marriage was solemnized with the consent of the father, guardian, or mother of the minor, as required by that act; (R. v. Butler, R. & R. 61; R. v. Morton, R. & R. 19, n.; R. v. James, R. & R. 17.—Per Bayley, J., in Smith v. Huson, 1 Phillimore, 287;) but it seems, that subsequent countenance from parents or guardians, or other circumstances of a similar kind, might afford ground for presuming the necessary consent. (R. & R. 61, n.) Provisions were made to remedy this by stat. 3 Geo. IV. c. 75, and 4 Geo. IV. c. 17, s. 2; and the late act, 4 Geo. IV. c. 76, s. 14, merely requires consent in such cases; but does not proceed to make void marriages solemnized without such consent, (R. v. Birmingham, 8 B. & C. 29; 2 Man. & Ry. 230, S. C.); and therefore such consent need not now be proved. Where a minor was married without consent, in the interval between the 22nd July, 1822, (when 3 Geo. IV. c. 75, received the royal assent, by which s. 11 of stat. 26 Geo. II. c. 33, was repealed,) and the 1st September, 1822, (when the stat. 3 Geo. IV. c. 75,) came into operation, it was holden, that the marriage was valid, because, during that interval, there was no enactment in force relating to marriages by licence. (R. v. Waully, R. & M. 163.) It was the intention of the Marriage Act, that the banns should be published in the true names of the parties. The rule upon this subject is, that if the banns were published in a name or names totally different from those which the parties, or one of them, ever used, or by which they were ever known, the marriage in pursuance of that publication is invalid; and it is immaterial, in that case, whether the misdescription has arisen from accident or design, or whether it be fraudulent or not; but if there be a partial variation of name only, as the alteration of a letter or letters, or the addition or suppression of one Christian name, or the names have been such as the parties have used and been known by at one time, and not at another—in such cases, the publication may or may not be void, the supposed misdescription may be explained, and it becomes a most important inquiry, whether it was consistent with honesty of purpose, or was done from a fraudulent intention. (R. v. Inhabitants of Tebshelf, 1 B. & Ad. 190.) In order to invalidate a marriage, the misdescription in the banns must be with the knowledge of both parties, for the words of the statute are knowingly and wilfully. (R. v. Wroxton, 4 B. & Adol. 640, 1 Nev. & M. 612, S. C.; Jervis, Arch. C. L., 6th ed. 540.)

The offence will, it seems, be complete, though the defendant assume a fictitious name after the second marriage. (R. v. Allison, R. & R. 109.) And where, upon an indictment for marrying Anna T., the defendant's first wife being alive, it appeared that her name was not Anna but Susannah; but the defendant wrote her name Anna, in the note for the publication of banns, and signed the register in which she was so called: it was held, that although her name might not be Anna, he could not defend himself on the ground that he did not marry Anna T. (R. v. Edwards, R. & R. 283.) And where the second wife was married by the name of Eliza Thick, which name she had assumed when the banns were published, purposely that she might not be known to be the person intended (her name being Eliza Brown), Gurney, B., held it to be no answer to the charge. (R. v. Penson, 5 C. & P. 412.)

Jews' or Quakers' marriages.

The marriage act does not extend to Jews (Lorrido v. Belesario, 1 Hagg. 216; Goldsmid v. Bromer, id. 324), or Quakers, (see Dean v. Thomas, M. & M. 361) (a), but they include all other dissenters; the marriages of the latter must, therefore, be proved in the ordinary manner. It seems that, to prove a Jewish marriage, it is not enough to produce witnesses who were present at the ceremony in the synagogue, but that the written contract between the parties should be produced, and the execution of it proved. (Horn v. Noel, 1 Camp. 61.) On the trial of a plea of coverture, Lord Kenyon permitted a Jewess, who had been the former wife of the supposed husband of the defendant, to give parol evidence of her own divorce in a foreign country, according to the custom of the Jews there. (Ganer v. Lanesborough, Peake, C. N. P. 17; but see R. v. Lolley, infra.)

Foreign marriages.

A marriage celebrated out of England, according to the lex loci, is recognized in this country as a valid marriage, and not affected by the marriage acts. If the first marriage were in England, it is not a valid defence to prove a divorce a vinculo matrimonii out of England before the second marriage, founded on grounds (in that case, adultery) on which a marriage cannot be dissolved a vinculo matrimonii in England. R. v. Lolley, Russ. & Ry., C. C. R. 237; and see Ganer v. Lanesborough, supra.

Scotch marriage.

A marriage in Scotland, between English subjects, according to the Scotch law, is good in our courts, and not affected by the marriage acts. (Dalrymple v. Dalrymple, 2 Hagg. 64; Harford v. Morris, ib. 430.) A marriage in Scotland, by an infant, who was an English subject, without consent of parents or guardians, was held good by the Court of Delegates. (Compton v. Bearcroft, B. N. P. 113; see the 58 Geo. III. c. 84.)

Irish marriage.

A marriage in Ireland, by a clergyman of the established church, is good, though it takes place in a private room, without any special licence. (Smith v. Maxwell, 1 C. & P. 271.)

As to the marriage of minors, in Ireland, it is, by the Irish stat. 9 Geo. II. c. 11, enacted, "that any marriage of a person under twenty-one, without the consent of the father or guardians, shall be void; but if no such suit be commenced within one year after the marriage, it shall be good. Therefore, in the case of a prisoner indicted for bigamy, where it appeared that the first marriage, which was by licence, was celebrated in Ireland when he was under twenty-one, and that his father did not consent, this was held to be no defence, as more than a year had elapsed from the time of the marriage." (R. v. Jacobs, cor. Twelve Js. 1826; R. v. Riordan, cor. Twelve Js. 1828; Carr, C. L. 225; R. & M. C. C. 140, S. C.)

At the Ennis assizes, 1815, a person was tried, before the lord chief baron, for bigamy. In 1806, he was married by a catholic priest to his first wife, who was an Irish catholic, the prisoner stating that he was a Catholic. In

(a) The marriage of Quakers is solemnized by a public declaration of the parties, at a monthly meeting of the society, of their becoming man and wife and by a certificate to that effect, entered in a register signed by the parties, and by several subscribing witnesses. (Dean v. Thomas, 1 M. & M. 361.)

1815, he married his second wife, he then passing for a Protestant. This marriage was celebrated by a clergyman of the established church. The prisoner's counsel contended, that as the prisoner was in fact a Protestant at the time of the first marriage, it was void, as every marriage of a Catholic and a Protestant, by a Catholic priest, would be; and witnesses were called to show that, up to the time of the first marriage, the prisoner always went to church, and was considered a Protestant. The lord chief baron said, that the law was correctly stated by the prisoner's counsel, and left it to the jury to say whether they did not consider the prisoner to be a Catholic at the time of the first marriage. The jury found that he was so, and convicted him. (R. v. Hanley, 1815, Car. C. L. 254); see the 21 & 22 Geo. III. c. 25; 19 Geo. II. c. 13.)

Les Cinq Codes contain the following provisions respecting marriage. French marriage. (Code Civil, Art. 63):—"Before celebration of marriage, the officer of the civil state shall make two publications at eight days' interval, on Sunday, before the door of the town-hall. Such publications, and the act of them to be drawn up, shall set forth the prenomen, names, professions, and domiciles of the future couple, their state, either of full age or minority, and the prenomen, names, professions, and domiciles of their fathers and mothers. The act shall set forth moreover the days, places, and hours, where the publications shall have been made; it shall be inscribed upon a register by itself, which shall be marked and certified in manner prescribed by article 41 (a), and deposited, at the end of each year, in the registry of the tribunal of the district." "Art. 64.—An extract of the act of publication shall be affixed at the door of the town-hall, and shall remain so during the eight days' interval between the one and the other publication. The marriage cannot be celebrated before the third day after, and exclusive of that of the second publication." "Art. 61.—In case of opposition, the officer of the civil state may not celebrate the marriage before his receipt of the dismissal, under pain of a fine of three hundred francs and all damages." "Art. 74.—The marriage shall be celebrated in the township where one of the couple shall be domiciled. Such domicile, as to marriage, shall be established by six months' continued habitation in the same township." In the case of Lacon v. Higgins, D. & R. N. P. C. 40, Stark. 78, M. Nettement, the French vice-consul, resident in London, deposed as follows:—"Marriages celebrated in France contrary to the articles 63, 64, and 74, of the Code Civil, are absolutely null and void, and a marriage in violation of these articles is, in fact, no marriage at all; and the issue of such marriages are bastardized. A marriage between British subjects, if solemnized according to the law of England, at the British ambassador's, is recognized as valid in France; but then it must be registered by the ambassador, to render it operative; but if the parties are not married at the British ambassador's they must comply with the law of France in like manner as French subjects. And British subjects, after a residence in France of six months, may be married in the same manner as French subjects; but at the ambassador's they may be married without having resided six months in France. And even if persons lived together, and were acknowledged as man and wife, that circumstance would not avail, if the legality of the marriage came afterwards into question." In that case, two British subjects, who had been previously resident in Paris, went to Versailles to be married. The ceremony was performed at a hotel, by a clergyman of the church of England, in the presence of two witnesses. The clergyman gave a written certificate of the marriage, but that was not produced. After this marriage, the parties lived together, and were received every where as man and wife. It was also stated, that British subjects resident in Paris were usually married at the British ambassador's, where a register of marriages solemnized there is regularly kept. Upon these facts, and the evidence of M. Nettement (above stated), and a reference to the articles of the Code Civil, Abbott, C. J., said, "I am clearly of opinion that, according to the law of France, this marriage is invalid, and consequently must be so considered in an English court of justice." (Car. C. L. 257.)

(a) "Art. 41. The registers shall be numbered from first to last, and each leaf shall be signed by the president of the tribunal of First Instance, or by the judge supplying his place."

Newfoundland.
Indian or colonial marriages.

As to marriages in Newfoundland, see 5 Geo. IV. c. 68.

In the case of Lautour v. Teesdale, 8 Taun. 830, 2 Marsh 243, S. C., a marriage between two British subjects, solemnized by a Catholic priest, at Madras, followed by cohabitation, was held valid, though there had been no licence from the governor, which it had been, before then, the uniform custom to obtain. And Gibbs, C. J., said, "British subjects, settled at Madras, are governed by the laws of this country, which they carry with them, and are unaffected by the law of the natives. What is called the Marriage Act does not follow subjects to foreign settlements; and the question, therefore, is, whether it would have been a valid marriage here before that act passed." And his lordship lays down, that "a marriage between British subjects, celebrated in a British settlement, according to the laws of this country, as they existed before the Marriage Act," (a) is valid.

Marriages in ambassadors' houses,
British factories, or in places of which the British government has military possession.

By 4 Geo. IV. c. 91, "all marriages, solemnized by a minister of the church of England, in the chapel or house of any British ambassador or minister, residing within the country to the court of which he is accredited, or in the chapel belonging to any British factory abroad, or in the house of any British subject residing at such factory; and all marriages solemnized within the British lines, by any chaplain or officer, or other person officiating under the orders of the commanding officer of a British army serving abroad, shall be deemed valid." A marriage abroad, of a British subject, attached to a British army, which then had military possession of the place, is valid, if it would have been a valid marriage in England before the Marriage Act. (R. v. Brampton, 10 East, 282.)

alive.

Shall marry any other person during the life of the former husband or wife shall be felony.]—A. married B. in Holland, and afterwards in the same country married C., in B.'s lifetime; B. died, and then living C., A. married D. in England. This was holden not to be within the act; because the marriage with C. was simply void. But if B. had been living, it would have been felony to have married D. in England. (R. v. Lady Madison, 1 Hale, 693; 1 East's P. C. 466.)

But though the first marriage be voidable, as by reason of consanguinity or the like, yet, being a marriage in judgment of law, and subsisting in fact at the time, till it be avoided, a second marriage would be within the act; such second marriage, however, is merely void. (1 East's P. C. 466; 3 Inst. 88.)

In R. v. William Allison, alias William Wilkinson, Russ. & R. C. C. 109; 1 Russ. C. & M. 207; the prisoner was tried before Chambre, J., at the York Lent assizes, 1806, upon an indictment for bigamy, in marrying Ann Epton, on the 23rd May, 1804, Jane, his former wife, being then living. It was proved by Thomas Pape, with whom the prisoner formerly lived as servant, that he was present at the celebration of the marriage between the prisoner and Jane Chaplin, at the parish church of Ulroome, on the 27th of February, 1798. They were married by the curate of the parish. The prisoner quitted the service of the witness at the following May Day, and he had not known much of the parties since that time; but Jane was living on the 8th of October, 1805, on which day he saw her. Another witness proved that he was present at the prisoner's second marriage with Ann Epton; they were married at the parish church of Ottringham, by the curate of the parish, on Whit Wednesday, 1804, the prisoner then going by the name of Wilkinson; the witness was there merely from curiosity. They lived together afterwards as man and wife. Jane, the first wife, died on the 1st of December, 1805. The jury convicted the prisoner; but Chambre, J., respited the judgment, upon a doubt whether this evidence, without any proof of the registration of either marriage or of any licence or publication of banns, was sufficient to support a conviction. All the judges, except Lord Ellenborough, who was not present, in Easter Term, 1806, held the conviction right. And see Mary Norwood's case, East's P. C. 470; Morris v. Miller, 4 Burr. 2057.

Exceptions in statute 9 Geo. IV.]—As to the presumption of death in consequence of not having been heard of for seven years, see “Evidence,” statute. Vol. II.

The statute excepts the case of a second marriage where the party indicted was divorced from the bond of the first marriage. A divorce à vinculo, for adultery, in a court in Scotland, of persons married in England, is not within the statute; because no sentence or act of any foreign country or state can dissolve an English marriage à vinculo, for grounds for which it cannot be dissolved in England. (R. v. Lolley, R. & R. 237.)

The statute excepts the case of a second marriage where the former marriage was declared to be void by the sentence of a court of competent jurisdiction. The corresponding clause of the statute 1 Jac. 1, c. 11, s. 3, was held not to extend to the sentence of an ecclesiastical court in a cause of jactitation, (Duchess of Kingston's case, 11 St. Tr. 260); and even sentences within this clause of the act may be impeached upon the part of the crown, upon the ground of fraud or collusion. (Id. 1 Ph. Ev. 338.)

II. Indictment for.

The indictment must state the two marriages, and aver that the former consort was alive at the time of the second marriage. In the Duchess of Kingston's case, the first count stated generally that the defendant, on such a day, &c., being then married, and then the wife of A. J. H., with force and arms, at &c., did feloniously marry E. P., &c., the said A. J. H. being then alive, &c. The second count stated the time and place of the first as well as the second marriage. When the trial is in the country where the party was apprehended, there is an additional averment of that fact. (1 East's P. C. 469.)

We have already noticed the provision of the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 22, as to allowing the venue to be in the county where the offender was apprehended, or is in custody, ante, p. 246.

As to the County where the Offender was apprehended.]—This, according to the resolution in Lord Digby's case, may be in the place where the party is taken, which is the place where he is imprisoned. And it is only cumulative; for he may be indicted where the second marriage was, though he be never apprehended; and so may be outlawed. (1 Hale, 694; 1 Russ. 289, 290; Hutt. 131.)

Where the prisoner, having been apprehended for another offence, is detained in the same county for bigamy, the detainer is such an apprehension as will warrant the indicting him in that county. (R. v. James Jordan, otherwise James Weaver, Russ. & R. C. C. 48; 1 Russ. C. & M. 192.) The prisoner was tried before Lawrence, J., at the summer assizes for the county of Worcester, 1802, on an indictment charging him with felony, in marrying, on the 7th of June, 1802, one Elizabeth Lane, in the parish of St. Clement's in the county of the city of Worcester, Mary Taylor, his former wife, being then living, and that he was apprehended for the felony aforesaid at the parish of Astley, in the county of Worcester. The facts of both marriages were proved; and that the prisoner was apprehended in the county of Worcester on a charge of stealing two hammers of one William Collins, and that being in the house of correction on that charge, a bill of indictment was found against him for this bigamy at the quarter sessions, and, on the bill being found, he was detained by an order of that court. It appeared further in evidence that he was a bastard, and married Mary Taylor before he was of the age of 21 years, and when he was about 20 years old. The counsel for the prisoner made two objections to his conviction—Firstly. That an indictment could be preferred against him for this offence only in the county where the second marriage was, or in some other county where he was apprehended for that offence, whereas the defendant was apprehended in the county of the city of Worcester, not for this bigamy, but for a larceny. And, if that were otherwise, the prisoner could not be convicted on this indictment, as it charged he was apprehended in the county for this felony, which was not proved, as his apprehension was for a larceny. Secondly. That this was not a case within the 1 Jac. I. c. 11, there being a provision in the third section of that statute that it shall not extend to any person for or by reason of any former marriage had within age of consent, which age was insisted, since the 26 Geo. II. c. 33, to be twenty-one, and not, as at the time of passing the statute, fourteen in males and twelve in females. The jury found the prisoner guilty, but the learned judge reserved these points for the consideration of the judges. In Hilary Term, 1803, the judges determined the conviction to be right, being of opinion upon the first point, that as the prisoner was in custody on a criminal charge, he was liable to be tried where he was imprisoned, (See Lord Digby's case, Hutt. 131, upon stat. 3 Jac. I. c. 4, and also Forsyth's case, 2 Leach, 826.)

3. Evidence.

Names of wives.

As to the mode of describing the wives' names, see in general "Indictment," Vol. III. In Rex v. Deeley, where the prisoner was convicted at the Old Bailey April sessions, 1831, of bigamy, on an indictment for marrying "Elizabeth Chant, widow," his former wife being alive; and it appeared in evidence that Elizabeth Chant was a spinster; on a case reserved, the twelve judges held the variance fatal, and that the prisoner was entitled to his discharge.

III. Evidence.

Proof of the marriages.

In respect to the manner of proving the two marriages, the first must be duly established to be valid, according to the rites and customs of the country in which it was celebrated. (1 East's P. C. 469; per Bailey, J., Smith v. Huson, Deleg. T. 1811, citing a case reserved for the opinion of the judges, K. B., M. 1803; 1 Phil. Evid. 287.)

Where the first marriage, which was with a Roman-Catholic woman, was by a Romish priest in England, not according to the ritual of the church of England, and the ceremony was performed in Latin, but the witnesses, not understanding that language, could not swear that the ceremony of marriage according to the church of Rome was read, the defendant was acquitted (a). But Lord Chief Justice Willis, who tried him, seemed to be of opinion that a marriage by a priest of the church of Rome was a good marriage if the ceremony according to that church could be proved,—namely, the words of the contracting part of it. But this was before the Marriage Act. (Lycn's case, Old Bailey, Dec. 1738; 1 East's P. C. 469; see Fielding's case, 14 How. St. Tr. 1328.)

If the marriage was celebrated in this country, it may be proved by the production of the register of the marriage, or an examined copy of it, together with some proof, either direct or presumptive, of the identity of the parties (Jervis, Arch. C. L. 6 ed. 540, Vol. II. p. 59). And if the marriage were by licence, and it appear that either of the parties were a minor at the time, the prosecutor must further prove that the marriage was solemnized with the consent of the father, guardian, or mother of the minor,

(a) The second marriage was by a clergyman of the established church.

as required by the Marriage Act. (R. v. Bridgewater, and R. v. Butler, 3. Evidence. 1 Russ. 294; R. & R. 61, S. C.; per Bayley, J., in Smith v. Huson, 1 Phil. 287; Jervis, Arch. C. L. 6 ed. 541.) The marriage may be proved by some person who was present at it; and in that case it is not necessary to prove the registration, or licence, or banns. (R. v. Allison, Russ. & Ry. C. C. R. 109; ante, 250, S. C.)

The law will not presume marriage in cases of bigamy, as it will in civil cases. (Smith v. Huson, 1 Phil. 287.)

If the marriage was celebrated abroad, it may be proved by any person who was present at it; and such circumstances should also be proved, from which the jury may presume that it was a valid marriage according to the laws of the country in which it was celebrated. Proof that the ceremony was performed by a person appearing and officiating as a priest, and that it was understood by the parties to be the marriage ceremony according to the rites and custom of the foreign country, would be sufficient presumptive evidence of it (see R. v. Brampton, 10 East, 282), so as to throw upon the defendant the onus impugning its validity. (See Arch. C. L. 294; and as to proof of foreign laws, see Vol. II. p. 49.) The law of France as to marriage, was proved by production of a book purporting to contain the code of France, and proved by oral testimony to contain the law of France; the book purporting to have been published at the royal printing-office, which was (according to the statement of the witness) authorized to print the laws of France by the government. (Lacon v. Higgins, 3 Stark. R. 178. As to foreign registers, see Vol. II. p. 45.)

How far the acknowledgment of the defendant upon the subject of his marriage is sufficient evidence of the fact, may admit of some doubt. In Trueman's case it was held, that proof of the prisoner's cohabiting with and acknowledging himself married to a former wife, then living, such assertion being backed by his producing to the witness a copy of the proceeding in a Scotch court against him and his wife for having contracted the marriage improperly (the marriage, however, being still good according to that law), was sufficient evidence of the first marriage; and upon such evidence, together with due proof of the second marriage, the prisoner was convicted. The point being reserved for the opinion of the judges, all of them (with the exception of Perryn, B. and Buller, J. who were absent), held the conviction proper. Two of them observed that this did not rest upon cohabitation and bare acknowledgment; for the defendant had backed his assertion by the production of the copy of the proceedings: but some of the judges thought that the acknowledgment alone would have been sufficient, and that the paper produced in evidence was only a confirmation of such acknowledgment. (Trueman's case, Nottingham Spring Ass. 1795; 1 East's P. C. 470.)

How far the acknowledgment of the defendant is evidence.

With respect to the admission of a bare acknowledgment in cases of this nature, Mr. East says (1 P. C. 471), it may be difficult to say that it is not evidence to go to the jury, like the acknowledgment of any other matter in pais, where it is made by a party to his own prejudice at the time. But it must be admitted that it may, under circumstances, be entitled to little or no weight; for such acknowledgments, made without consideration of the consequences, and palpably for other purposes at the time, are scarcely deserving of that name, in the sense in which acknowledgments are received as evidence; more especially if made before the second marriage, or upon occasions when, in truth, they cannot be said to be to the party's own prejudice, nor so conceived by him at the time.

As to proving the averment of the party being apprehended in the county where the venue is laid, see ante, 251.

Apprehension of defendant.

The first and true wife is not to be allowed as a witness against the husband, nor vice versa; but it seemeth clear that the second wife may be admitted to prove the second marriage, being not so much as his wife de facto. (1 Hale, 693; 4 Blac. C. 164; 1 Phil. E. 78; 2 Chit. C. L. 719; ante, Vol. II. 81.)

First wife cannot be a witness.

Popery.

- I. General Observations, 255.
- II. Toleration of Catholics 256.
- III. Miscellaneous Statutory Provisions against Papists and Popery, 265.

I. General Observations.

PERSONS professing the Roman Catholic religion are no longer subject to the innumerable disabilities and inconveniences to which they were so long liable. General observations.

By the 10 Geo. IV. c. 7, commonly called "The Catholic Relief Bill," generally speaking, this body of dissenters are now on an equal footing with their other fellow subjects. As far as they are concerned, all offensive tests and declarations are abolished; and the laity, upon taking the oaths prescribed by the new act, are eligible "to hold, exercise, and enjoy, all civil and military offices or places of trust and profit under his majesty, his heirs and successors, and to exercise any other franchise or civil right, except guardians and justices of the United Kingdom, regent of the United Kingdom, or lord high chancellor, or lord keeper, or lord commissioner of the great seal of Great Britain or Ireland, or lord lieutenant, or lord deputy, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, or his majesty's high commissioner to the church in Scotland."

However, neither scholarships nor fellowships, except of medicine in Ireland, even on lay foundations, are open to Roman Catholics in any of the universities; and though admitted to "degrees" in Ireland, in England they are not. Nor can they present to livings, or advise the crown on presentations thereto; and they are still labouring under a serious annoyance concerning their marriage ceremony; but a bill has been introduced with the sanction of government to remedy this grievance.

There are many clauses of a scrutinising character, relative to the Roman Catholic clergy and religious orders, embodied in the 10 Geo. IV., but none of them have ever been acted on; and sect. 24, forbidding (under the penalty of 100*l.*) the assumption of titles to "sees," is scarcely applicable to Great Britain: the diocesan superiors of this persuasion being entitled, throughout England, Scotland, and Wales, "apostolic vicars," not bishops, of the particular districts in which they happen to be located.

A recusant is any person who refuses to go to church and worship God after the manner of the church of England; a popish recusant was, before the recent acts for the relief of Roman Catholics, a papist who so refused; and a popish recusant convict was a papist legally convicted thereof. Recusant.
Popish recusant.

There were several statutes made against recusants in Queen Elizabeth's reign, and the former part of the reign of King James the First, the force of which, as to protestant dissenters, is taken away by the Act of Toleration; but no papist or popish recusant was to have any benefit by that act.

II. Toleration of Catholics.

31 Geo. 3, c. 32.

By the 31 Geo. III. c. 32, s. 1, it shall be lawful for persons professing the Roman Catholic religion to appear in any of the courts at Westminster, or at the general quarter sessions for the county, city, or place where he shall reside, and there in open court, between the hours of nine in the morning and two in the afternoon, take, make, and subscribe the following declaration and oath; viz.:—

Declaration.

"I, A. B., do hereby declare, that I do profess the Roman Catholic religion."

Oath.

"I, A. B., do sincerely promise and swear that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to his majesty king _____, and him will defend to the utmost of my power against all conspiracies and attempts whatever that shall be made against his person, crown, or dignity; and I will do my utmost endeavour to disclose and make known to his majesty, his heirs and successors, all treasons and traitorous conspiracies which may be formed against him or them: And I do faithfully promise to maintain, support, and defend to the utmost of my power the succession of the crown; which succession, by an act, intituled 'An Act for the further Limitation of the Crown and better security of the Rights and Liberties of the Subject,' is and stands limited to the Princess Sophia, Electress and Duchess Dowager of Hanover, and the heirs of her body, being protestants, hereby utterly renouncing and abjuring any obedience or allegiance unto any other person claiming or pretending a right to the crown of these realms. And I do swear, that I do reject and detest, as an unchristian and impious position, that it is lawful to murder or destroy any person or persons whatsoever, for or under pretence of their being heretics or infidels; and also that unchristian and impious principle, that faith is not to be kept with heretics or infidels. And I do further declare that it is not an article of my faith, and that I do renounce, reject, and abjure the opinion, that princes excommunicated by the pope in council, or any authority of the see of Rome, or by any authority whatsoever, may be deposed or murdered by their subjects, or any person whatsoever. And I do promise that I will not hold, maintain, or abet any such opinion, or any other opinion contrary to what is expressed in this declaration. And I do declare that I do not believe that the Pope of Rome, or any other foreign prince, prelate, state or potentate, hath or ought to have any temporal or civil jurisdiction, power, superiority, or pre-eminence, directly or indirectly, within this realm. And I do solemnly, in the presence of God, profess, testify, and declare, that I do make this declaration and every part thereof in the plain and ordinary sense of the words of this oath, without any evasion, equivocation, or mental reservation whatever; and without any dispensation already granted by the pope, or any authority of the see of Rome, or any person whatever; and without thinking that I am or can be acquitted before God or man, or absolved of this declaration or any part thereof, although the pope or any other person or authority whatsoever shall dispense with or annul the same, or declare that it was null or void. So help me God."

Certificate thereof to be given.

Which said declaration and oath shall be subscribed by such person. And the proper officer shall make, subscribe, and deliver a certificate of such declaration and oath having been duly made and taken, if demanded, for which he shall have 2s.; which certificate shall be competent evidence, unless falsified.

Not required to resort to church.

Sect. 3. And no Roman Catholic, who shall have taken and subscribed the said oath, as aforesaid, shall be convicted upon any of the acts following: viz. 1 Eliz. c. 2; 23 Eliz. c. 1; 29 Eliz. c. 6; 35 Eliz. c. 2; 1 Jac. I. c. 4; 3 Jac. I. c. 4; 3 Jac. I. c. 5; and 7 Jac. I. c. 6; or any other statute or law of this realm, or in any ecclesiastical court, for not resorting to church, or having servants who shall not resort to church, or other place of common prayer.

Not prosecutable
for being a papist

Sect. 4. And whereas, by stats. 23 Eliz. c. 2; 27 Eliz. c. 2; 35 Eliz. c. 2; 1 Jac. I. c. 4; 3 Jac. I. c. 5; 3 Car. I. c. 2; and 25 Car. II. c. 2; papists are made subject to several punishments, penalties, and disabilities, it is enacted, that no person who shall take and subscribe the said oath in manner aforesaid shall be prosecuted or convicted for being a papist, or reputed papist; or for professing or being educated in the popish religion; or for hearing or saying mass; or for being a priest or deacon; or entering or belonging to any ecclesiastical order or community of the church of Rome; or for being present at, or performing or observing, any rite, ceremony, practice, or observance of the popish religion, or maintaining or assisting others therein.

53 Geo. 3, c. 128.

Sect. 5. Provided always, that no place of congregation or assembly for religious worship shall be allowed, until the place of such meeting shall be certified to the sessions of the county or place in which the same shall be held, and be there recorded; and the clerk of the peace shall give a certificate thereof, if demanded, for which he shall have 6*d.* And no minister or other person shall officiate in any such place of meeting until his name and description as a priest or minister shall have been recorded at the sessions; for which shall be paid 6*d.*, and a certificate thereof shall be granted, if demanded, for which shall be paid 2*s.* And no priest or minister who shall officiate in any such meeting not so recorded, as aforesaid, shall be deemed to be within the benefit of this act, for any purpose whatsoever.

Places of meeting to be certified to sessions; and minister's name to be recorded there.

Sect. 6. Provided that if any such place of assembly shall have the doors locked, barred, or bolted, during the time of meeting, all persons who shall come to or be at such meeting shall receive no benefit from this act, notwithstanding his having taken such oath, as aforesaid, but shall be liable to the same pains and penalties as if this act had not been made.

Places of assembly not to be locked.

Sect. 10. And if any person shall wilfully and on purpose maliciously and contemptuously come into any congregation or assembly of religious worship permitted by this act, and disturb the same, or misuse any priest, minister, preacher, or teacher therein, he shall, on proof by two witnesses, before one justice, find two sureties of the peace to be bound by recognizance in 50*l.*, and in default thereof shall be committed to prison till the next sessions, and on conviction of such offence at the sessions, shall forfeit 20*l.* to the king.

Disturbing congregations, or misusing priests.

Sect. 18, 19. No person shall be summoned to take the oath required by the 1 Wil. & Mary, sess. 1, c. 8, or the declaration required by the 25 Car. II. c. 2. Nor shall the 1 Wil. & Mary, sess. 1, c. 9, for removing papists from London and Westminster extend to Roman Catholics who shall have taken and subscribed the oath, &c., herein appointed.

Not required to take certain oaths.

Sect. 20. No peer who shall have taken and subscribed the said oath, &c., in manner aforesaid, shall be liable to be prosecuted under 30 Car. II. st. 2, s. 5.

Peers.

By the 53 Geo. III. c. 128, s. 1, all such of his majesty's popish or Roman Catholic subjects as hold, exercise, and enjoy any civil or military office or offices, or place or places of trust or profit, or other office or situation whatsoever, granted to them or any of them in Ireland, under the authority of the 33 Geo. III. of the Parliament of Ireland, and who shall have duly taken the oaths and declaration required by the said act, shall not, in respect of any such office, place, or situation, be liable, in England, Wales, Berwick-upon-Tweed, or in his majesty's navy, or in the Islands of Jersey or Guernsey, to any of the pains, &c. enacted by the 25 Car. II. c. 2, and shall also be wholly exempt from any pains, &c. whatsoever in the said several places last mentioned, for not making, taking, and subscribing the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, or abjuration, or not making, taking, and subscribing the declaration required to be taken to enable any person to hold and enjoy any office or place of trust or profit, or for not receiving the sacrament of the Lord's supper according to the rights and ceremonies of the church of England; any thing contained in any act of parliament to the contrary notwithstanding.

Regulations as to taking of commissions in army.

Sect. 2. And if any of his said majesty's popish or Roman Catholic subjects, having duly taken the oaths and declaration required by this act, shall take or have taken in Ireland a commission in his majesty's army, and shall afterwards take a higher commission or higher commissions in Great Britain,

Acts relating to declarations against transubstantiation repealed.

Roman Catholics may sit and vote in Parliament, on taking the following oath.

Name of sovereign to be used in the oath.

No Roman Catholic capable of sitting or voting within the intent and meaning of the said act; or if any person having enlisted as a private in any regiment in Ireland, or being a non-commissioned officer in such regiment, shall afterwards take or have taken a commission in the said or any other regiment in Great Britain, and shall have duly taken the oaths and declaration required by the said act, he shall not, in respect of such commission, be liable, in England, Wales, Berwick-upon-Tweed, or in his majesty's navy, or in the islands of Jersey or Guernsey, to any of the pains, &c. in said 25 Car. II. c. 2, and shall also be wholly freed, &c., as in s. 1.

By the 10 Geo. IV. c. 7, intituled "An Act for the Relief of his Majesty's Roman Catholic subjects," it is enacted, "all such parts of the said acts as require the said declarations, or either of them, to be made or subscribed by any of his majesty's subjects, as a qualification for sitting and voting in parliament, or for the exercise or enjoyment of any office, franchise, or civil right, be and the same are (save as hereinafter provided and excepted) hereby repealed."

Sect. 2. "It shall be lawful for any person professing the Roman Catholic religion, being a peer, or who shall after the commencement of this act be returned as a member of the House of Commons, to sit and vote in either house of Parliament respectively, being in all other respects duly qualified to sit and vote therein, upon taking and subscribing the following oath, instead of the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration:

"I, A. B., do sincerely promise and swear, that I will be faithful and bear true allegiance to his majesty king [George the Fourth], and will defend him to the utmost of my power against all conspiracies and attempts whatever, which shall be made against his person, crown, or dignity; and I will do my utmost endeavour to disclose and make known to his majesty, his heirs and successors, all treasons and traitorous conspiracies which may be formed against him or them: and I do faithfully promise to maintain, support, and defend, to the utmost of my power, the succession of the crown, which succession, by an act, intituled 'An Act for the further Limitation of the Crown, and better securing the Rights and Liberties of the Subject,' is and stands limited to the Princess Sophia, Electress of Hanover, and the heirs of her body, being protestants; hereby utterly renouncing and abjuring any obedience or allegiance unto any other person claiming or pretending a right to the crown of this realm: and I do further declare, that it is not an article of my faith, and that I do renounce, reject, and abjure the opinion, that princes excommunicated or deprived by the pope, or any other authority of the see of Rome, may be deposed or murdered by their subjects, or by any person whatsoever: and I do declare, that I do not believe that the Pope of Rome, or any other foreign prince, prelate, person, state, or potentate, hath or ought to have any temporal or civil jurisdiction, power, superiority, or pre-eminence, directly or indirectly, within this realm. I do swear, that I will defend to the utmost of my power the settlement of property within this realm, as established by the laws: and I do hereby disclaim, disavow, and solemnly abjure any intention to subvert the present church establishment, as settled by law within this realm: and I do solemnly swear that I never will exercise any privilege to which I am or may become entitled, to disturb or weaken the protestant religion or protestant government in the United Kingdom: and I do solemnly, in the presence of God, profess, testify, and declare, that I do make this declaration, and every part thereof, in the plain and ordinary sense of the words of this oath, without any evasion, equivocation, or mental reservation whatsoever. So help me God."

Sect. 3. "Wherever, in the oath hereby appointed and set forth, the name of his present majesty is expressed or referred to, the name of the sovereign of this kingdom for the time being, by virtue of the act for the further limitation of the crown and better securing the rights and liberties of the subject, shall be substituted from time to time, with proper words of reference thereto."

Sect. 4. "No peer professing the Roman Catholic religion, and no person professing the Roman Catholic religion, who shall be returned a member of the House of Commons after the commencement of this act, shall be capable of sitting or voting in either house of parliament respectively, unless he shall first take and subscribe the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, before the same persons, at the same times and places, and in the same manner as the oaths and the declaration now required by law are respectively directed to be taken, made, and subscribed; and that any such person professing the Roman Catholic religion, who shall sit or vote in either house of parliament, without having first taken and subscribed, in the manner aforesaid, the oath in this act appointed and set forth, shall be subject to the same penalties, forfeitures, and disabilities, and the offence of so sitting or voting shall be followed and attended by and with the same consequences, as are by law enacted and provided in the case of persons sitting or voting in either house of parliament respectively, without the taking, making, and subscribing the oaths and the declaration now required by law."

Sect. 5. "It shall be lawful for persons professing the Roman Catholic religion to vote at elections of members to serve in parliament for England and for Ireland, and also to vote at the elections of representative peers of Scotland and of Ireland, and to be elected such representative peers, being in all other respects duly qualified, upon taking and subscribing the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, instead of the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration, and instead of the declaration now by law required, and instead also of such other oath or oaths as are now by law required to be taken by any of his majesty's subjects professing the Roman Catholic religion, and upon taking also such other oath or oaths as may now be lawfully tendered to any persons offering to vote at such elections."

Sect. 6. "The oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth shall be administered to his majesty's subjects professing the Roman Catholic religion, for the purpose of enabling them to vote in any of the cases aforesaid, in the same manner, at the same time, and by the same officers or other persons as the oaths for which it is hereby substituted are or may be now by law administered; and that in all cases in which a certificate of the taking, making, or subscribing of any of the oaths or of the declaration now required by law is directed to be given, a like certificate of the taking or subscribing of the oath hereby appointed and set forth shall be given by the same officer or other person, and in the same manner as the certificate now required by law is directed to be given, and shall be of the like force and effect."

Sect. 7. "In all cases where the persons now authorized by law to administer the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration to persons voting at elections, are themselves required to take an oath previous to their administering such oaths, they shall, in addition to the oath now by them taken, take an oath for the duly administering the oath hereby appointed and set forth, and for the duly granting certificates of the same."

Sect. 8. "Whereas in an act of the parliament of Scotland made in the eighth and ninth session of the first parliament of King William the Third, intituled 'An Act for the preventing the Growth of Popery,' a certain declaration or formula is therein contained, which it is expedient should no longer be required to be taken and subscribed: it is enacted, "That such parts of any acts as authorize the said declaration or formula to be tendered, or require the same to be taken, sworn, and subscribed, shall be and the same are hereby repealed, except as to such offices, places, and rights as are hereinafter excepted; and that from and after the commencement of this act it shall be lawful for persons professing the Roman Catholic religion to elect and be elected members to serve in parliament for Scotland, and to be enrolled as freeholders in any shire or stewartry of Scotland, and to be chosen commissioners or delegates for choosing burgesses to serve in parliament for any districts or burghs in Scotland, being in all other respects duly qualified, such persons always taking and subscribing the oath hereinbefore appointed and set forth, instead of the oaths of allegiance and abjuration as now required by law, at such time as the said last-mentioned oaths, or either of them, are now required by law to be taken."

10 Geo. 4, c. 7.

No Roman Catholic priest to sit in House of Commons.

Roman Catholics may hold civil and military offices under his majesty, with certain exceptions.

Not to exempt Roman Catholics from taking any other oaths required.

Offices withheld from Roman Catholics.

Nothing herein to repeal 7 Geo. 4, c. 72.

Roman Catholics may be members of lay corporations.

Such members of corporations not to vote in ecclesiastical appointments.

Sect. 9. "No person in holy orders in the church of Rome shall be capable of being elected to serve in parliament as a member of the House of Commons; and if any such person shall be elected to serve in parliament as aforesaid, such election shall be void; and if any person being elected to serve in parliament as a member of the House of Commons, shall, after his election, take or receive holy orders in the church of Rome, the seat of such person shall immediately become void; and if any such person shall, in any of the cases aforesaid, presume to sit or vote as a member of the House of Commons, he shall be subject to the same penalties, forfeitures, and disabilities as are enacted by an act passed in the forty-first year of the reign of king George the Third, intituled 'An Act to remove Doubts respecting the Eligibility of Persons in Holy Orders to sit in the House of Commons;' and proof of the celebration of any religious service by such person, according to the rites of the church of Rome, shall be deemed and taken to be prima facie evidence of the fact of such person being in holy orders, within the intent and meaning of this act."

Sect. 11. "Nothing herein contained shall be construed to exempt any person professing the Roman Catholic religion from the necessity of taking any oath or oaths, or making any declaration, not hereinbefore mentioned, which are or may be by law required to be taken or subscribed by any person on his admission into any such office or place of trust or profit as aforesaid."

Sect. 12. "That nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to enable any person or persons professing the Roman Catholic religion to hold or exercise the office of guardians and justices of the United Kingdom, or of regent of the United Kingdom, under whatever name, style, or title such office may be constituted; nor to enable any person, otherwise than he is now by law enabled, to hold or enjoy the office of lord high chancellor, lord keeper or lord commissioner of the great seal of Great Britain or Ireland; or the office of lord lieutenant, or lord deputy, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland; or his majesty's high commissioner to the general assembly of the Church of Scotland."

Sect. 13. "Nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect or alter any of the provisions of an act passed in the seventh year of his present majesty's reign, intituled 'An Act to consolidate and amend the Laws which regulate the Levy and Application of Church Rates and Parish Cesses, and the Election of Churchwardens, and the Maintenance of Parish Clerks, in Ireland.'"

Sect. 14. "It shall be lawful for any of his majesty's subjects professing the Roman Catholic religion to be a member of any lay body corporate, and to hold any civil office or place of trust or profit therein, and to do any corporate act, or vote in any corporate election or other proceeding, upon taking and subscribing the oath hereby appointed and set forth, instead of the oaths of allegiance, supremacy, and abjuration; and upon taking also such other oath or oaths as may now by law be required to be taken by any persons becoming members of such lay body corporate, or being admitted to hold any office or place of trust or profit within the same."

Sect. 15. "Nothing herein contained shall extend to authorize or empower any of his majesty's subjects professing the Roman Catholic religion, and being a member of any lay body corporate, to give any vote at, or in any manner to join in the election, presentation, or appointment of any person to any ecclesiastical benefice whatsoever, or any office or place belonging to or connected with the United Church of England and Ireland, or the Church of Scotland, being in the gift, patronage, or disposal of such lay corporate body." 2. Toleration of Catholics.

10 Geo. 4, c. 7.

Sect. 16. "Nothing in this act contained shall be construed to enable any persons, otherwise than as they are now by law enabled, to hold, enjoy, or exercise any office, place, or dignity of, in, or belonging to the United Church of England and Ireland, or the Church of Scotland, or any place or office whatever of, in, or belonging to any of the ecclesiastical courts of judicature of England and Ireland respectively, or any court of appeal from or review of the sentences of such courts, or of, in, or belonging to the Commissary Court of Edinburgh, or of, in, or belonging to any cathedral or collegiate or ecclesiastical establishment or foundation; or any office or place whatever of, in, or belonging to any of the universities of this realm; or any office or place whatever, and by whatever name the same may be called, of, in, or belonging to any of the colleges or halls of the said universities, or the colleges of Eton, Westminster, or Winchester, or any college or school within this realm; or to repeal, abrogate, or in any manner to interfere with any local statute, ordinance, or rule, which is or shall be established by competent authority within any university, college, hall, or school, by which Roman Catholics shall be prevented from being admitted thereto, or from residing or taking degrees therein: provided also, that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to enable any person, otherwise than as he is now by law enabled, to exercise any right of presentation to any ecclesiastical benefice whatsoever; or to repeal, vary, or alter in any manner the laws now in force in respect to the right of presentation to any ecclesiastical benefice."

Not to extend to offices, &c. in the established church, ecclesiastical courts, universities, colleges, or schools;

nor to presentations to benefices.

"Sect. 17. "Provided, that where any right of presentation to any ecclesiastical benefice shall belong to any office in the gift or appointment of his majesty, his heirs or successors, and such office shall be held by a person professing the Roman Catholic religion, the right of presentation shall devolve upon and be exercised by the Archbishop of Canterbury for the time being."

Proviso for presentations to benefices connected with offices.

Sect. 18. "It shall not be lawful for any person professing the Roman Catholic religion, directly or indirectly, to advise his majesty, his heirs or successors, or any person or persons holding or exercising the office of guardians of the United Kingdom, or of regent of the United Kingdom, under whatever name, style, or title such office may be constituted, or the lord lieutenant, or lord deputy, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, touching or concerning the appointment to or disposal of any office or preferment in the United Church of England and Ireland, or in the Church of Scotland; and if any such person shall offend in the premises, he shall, being thereof convicted by due course of law, be deemed guilty of a high misdemeanor, and disabled for ever from holding any office, civil or military, under the crown."

No Roman Catholic to advise the crown in the appointment to offices in the established church.

Sect. 19. "Every person professing the Roman Catholic religion, who shall, after the commencement of this act, be placed, elected, or chosen in or to the office of mayor, provost, alderman, recorder, bailiff, town-clerk, magistrate, councillor, or common councilman, or in or to any office of magistracy, or place of trust or employment relating to the government of any city, corporation, borough, burgh, or district, within the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland, shall, within one calendar month next before or upon his admission into any of the same respectively, take and subscribe the oath herein-before appointed and set forth, in the presence of such person or persons respectively as by the charters or usages of the said respective cities, corporations, burghs, boroughs, or districts, ought to administer the oath for the due execution of the said offices or places respectively; and, in default of such, in the presence of two justices of the peace, councillors, or magistrates, of the said cities, corporations, burghs, boroughs, or districts, if such there be; or, otherwise, in the presence of two justices of the peace of the respective counties, ridings, divisions, or franchises, wherein the said cities, corporations, burghs, boroughs, or districts are; which said oath shall either be entered in a book, roll, or other record, to be kept for that purpose, or shall be filed amongst the records of the city, corporation, burgh, borough, or district."

Sect. 20. "Every person professing the Roman Catholic religion who shall, after the commencement of this act, be appointed to any office or place of trust or profit under his majesty, his heirs or successors, shall within three calendar months next before such appointment, or, otherwise, shall, before he presumes to exercise or enjoy, or in any manner to act in, such office or place, take and subscribe the oath herein-before appointed and set forth, either in his majesty's high Court of Chancery, or in any of his majesty's Courts of King's Bench, Common Pleas, or Exchequer, at Westminster or Dublin; or before any judge of assize, or in any court of general or quarter sessions of the peace in Great Britain or Ireland, for the county or place where the person so taking and subscribing the oath shall reside; or in any of his majesty's courts of session, justiciary, exchequer, or jury court, or in any sheriff or steward court, or in any burgh court, or before the magistrates and councillors of any royal burgh in Scotland, between the hours of nine in the morning and four in the afternoon; and the proper officer of the court in which such oath shall be so taken and subscribed shall cause the same to be preserved amongst the records of the court; and such officer shall make, sign, and deliver a certificate of such oath having been duly taken and subscribed, as often as the same shall be demanded of him, upon payment of two shillings and sixpence for the same; and such certificate shall be sufficient evidence of the person therein named having duly taken and subscribed such oath."

Penalty on acting in offices without taking the oath.

Sect. 21. "If any person professing the Roman Catholic religion shall enter upon the exercise or enjoyment of any office, or place of trust or profit, under his majesty, or of any other office or franchise, not having in the manner and at the times aforesaid taken and subscribed the oath herein-before appointed and set forth, then, and in every such case, such person shall forfeit to his majesty the sum of 200*l.*; and the appointment of such person to the office, place, or franchise so by him held shall become altogether void, and the office, place, or franchise shall be deemed and taken to be vacant, to all intents and purposes whatsoever."

Oaths by military and naval officers.

Sect. 22. "Provided that, for and notwithstanding anything in this act contained, the oath herein-before appointed and set forth shall be taken by the officers in his majesty's land and sea service, professing the Roman Catholic religion, at the same times and in the same manner as the oaths and declarations now required by law are directed to be taken, and not otherwise."

No other oaths necessary to be taken by Roman Catholics.

Sect. 23. "From and after the passing of this act, no oath or oaths shall be tendered to or required to be taken by his majesty's subjects professing the Roman Catholic religion, for enabling them to hold or enjoy any real or personal property, other than such as may by law be tendered to and required to be taken by his majesty's other subjects; and that the oath herein appointed and set forth, being taken and subscribed in any of the courts, or before any of the persons above-mentioned, shall be of the same force and effect, to all intents and purposes, as, and shall stand in the place of, all oaths and declarations required or prescribed by any law now in force for the relief of his majesty's Roman Catholic subjects from any disabilities, incapacities, or penalties; and the proper officer of any of the courts above-mentioned, in which any person professing the Roman Catholic religion shall demand to take and subscribe the oath herein appointed and set forth, is hereby authorized and required to administer the said oath to such person; and such officer shall make, sign, and deliver a certificate of such oath having been duly taken and subscribed, as often as the same shall be demanded of him, upon payment of 1*s.*; and such certificate shall be sufficient evidence of the person therein named having duly taken and subscribed such oath."

Titles to sees, &c., not to be assumed by Roman Catholics.

Sect. 24. "And whereas the Protestant Episcopal Church of England and Ireland, and the doctrine, discipline, and government thereof, and likewise the Protestant Presbyterian Church of Scotland, and the doctrine, discipline, and government thereof, are, by the respective acts of union of England and Scotland, and of Great Britain and Ireland, established permanently and inviolably; and whereas the right and title of archbishops to their respective provinces, of bishops to their sees, and of deans to their deaneries, as well in England as in Ireland, have been settled and established by law; be it therefore enacted, if any person, after the commencement of this act, other than the person thereunto authorized by law, shall assume or use the name, style, or title of archbishop of any province, bishop of any bishopric, or dean of any deanery, in England or Ireland, he shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 25. "If any person holding any judicial or civil office, or any mayor, provost, jurat, bailiff, or other corporate officer, shall, after the commencement of this act, resort to or be present at any place or public meeting for religious worship in England or in Ireland, other than that of the United Church of England and Ireland, or in Scotland, other than that of the Church of Scotland, as by law established, in the robe, gown, or other peculiar habit of his office, or attend with the ensign or insignia, or any part thereof, of or belonging to such his office, such person shall, being thereof convicted by due course of law, forfeit such office, and pay for every such offence the sum of 100*l*."

Sect. 26. "If any Roman Catholic ecclesiastic, or any member of any of the orders, communities, or societies hereinafter mentioned, shall, after the commencement of this act, exercise any of the rites or ceremonies of the Roman Catholic religion, or wear the habits of his order, save within the usual places of worship of the Roman Catholic religion, or in private houses, such ecclesiastic or other person shall, being thereof convicted by due course of law, forfeit for every such offence the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 27. "Provided that nothing in this act contained shall in any manner repeal, alter, or affect any provision of an act made in the fifth year of his present majesty's reign, intituled 'An Act to repeal so much of an Act passed in the ninth year of the reign of king William the Third, as relates to Burials in suppressed Monasteries, Abbeys, or Convents in Ireland, and to make further provision with respect to the Burial in Ireland of persons dissenting from the Established Church.'"

Sect. 28. "And whereas jesuits, and members of other religious orders, communities, or societies of the church of Rome, bound by monastic or religious vows, are resident within the United Kingdom, and it is expedient to make provision for the gradual suppression and final prohibition of the same therein; it is enacted, that every jesuit, and every member of any other religious order, community, or society, of the Church of Rome, bound by monastic or religious vows, who, at the time of the commencement of this act, shall be within the United Kingdom, shall, within six calendar months after the commencement of this act, deliver to the clerk of the peace of the county or place where such person shall reside, or to his deputy, a notice or statement, in the form and containing the particulars required to be set forth in the schedule to this act annexed; which notice or statement such clerk of the peace, or his deputy, shall preserve and register amongst the records of such county or place, without any fee, and shall forthwith transmit a copy of such notice or statement to the chief secretary of the lord lieutenant, or other chief governor or governors of Ireland, if such person shall reside in Ireland, or, if in Great Britain, to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state; and, in case any person shall offend in the premises, he shall forfeit and pay to his majesty, for every calendar month during which he shall remain in the United Kingdom, without having delivered such notice or statement as is hereinbefore required, the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 29. "If any jesuit, or member of any such religious order, community, or society, as aforesaid, shall, after the commencement of this act, come into this realm, he shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of a misdemeanor; and, being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be sentenced and ordered to be banished from the United Kingdom for the term of his natural life."

Sect. 30. "Provided that, in case any natural-born subject of this realm, being at the time of the commencement of this act a jesuit, or other member of any such religious order, community, or society, as aforesaid, shall, at the time of the commencement of this act, be out of the realm, it shall be lawful for such person to return or to come into this realm ; and, upon such his return or coming into the realm, he is hereby required, within the space of six calendar months after his first returning or coming into the United Kingdom, to deliver such notice or statement to the clerk of the peace of the county or place where he shall reside, or his deputy, for the purpose of being so registered and transmitted, as hereinbefore directed ; and, in case any such person shall neglect or refuse so to do, he shall for such offence forfeit and pay to his majesty, for every calendar month during which he shall remain in the United Kingdom without having delivered such notice or statement, the sum of 50*l*."

Sect. 31. " Provided also, that, notwithstanding anything hereinbefore contained, it shall be lawful for any one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state, being a protestant, by a licence in writing, signed by him, to grant permission to any jesuit, or member of any such religious order, community, or society, as aforesaid, to come into the United Kingdom, and to remain therein for such period as the said secretary of state shall think proper, not exceeding in any case the space of six calendar months ; and it shall also be lawful for any of his majesty's principal secretaries of state to revoke any licence so granted before the expiration of time mentioned therein, if he shall so think fit ; and if any such person to whom such licence shall have been granted shall not depart from the United Kingdom within twenty days after the expiration of the time mentioned in such licence, or if such licence shall have been revoked, then within twenty days after notice of such revocation shall have been given to him, every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be sentenced and ordered to be banished from the United Kingdom for the term of his natural life."

Sect. 32. " There shall annually be laid before both houses of Parliament an account of all such licences as shall have been granted for the purpose hereinbefore mentioned, within the twelve months then next preceding."

Sect. 33. " In case any jesuit, or member of any such religious order, community, or society, as aforesaid, shall, after the commencement of this act, within any part of the United Kingdom, admit any person to become a regular ecclesiastic, or brother or member of any such religious order, community, or society, or be aiding or consenting thereto, or shall administer or cause to be administered, or be aiding or assisting in the administering or taking, any oath, vow, or engagement, purporting or intended to bind the person taking the same to the rules, ordinances, or ceremonies of such religious order, community, or society, every person offending in the premises in England or Ireland shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and in Scotland shall be punished by fine and imprisonment."

Sect. 34. " In case any person shall, after the commencement of this act, within any part of this United Kingdom, be admitted or become a jesuit, or brother or member of any other such religious order, community, or society, as aforesaid, such person shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be sentenced and ordered to be banished from the United Kingdom for the term of his natural life."

Sect. 35. " In case any person sentenced and ordered to be banished under the provisions of this act shall not depart from the United Kingdom within thirty days after the pronouncing of such sentence and order, it shall be lawful for his majesty to cause such person to be conveyed to such place out of the United Kingdom as his majesty, by the advice of his privy council, shall direct."

Sect. 36. " If any offender, who shall be so sentenced and ordered to be banished in manner aforesaid, shall, after the end of three calendar months from the time such sentence and order hath been pronounced, be at large within any part of the United Kingdom, without some lawful cause, every such offender being so at large, as aforesaid, on being thereof lawfully convicted, shall be transported to such place as shall be appointed by his majesty, for the term of his natural life."

Sect. 37. "Provided that nothing herein contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, in any manner to affect any religious order, community, or establishment, consisting of females bound by religious or monastic vows."

2. Toleration of Catholics.

Sect. 38. "All penalties imposed by this act shall and may be recovered as a debt due to his majesty, by information to be filed in the name of his majesty's attorney-general for England or for Ireland, as the case may be, in the Courts of Exchequer in England or Ireland respectively, or in the name of his majesty's advocate-general in the Court of Exchequer in Scotland."

III. Miscellaneous Enactments as to Papists and Popery (a).

By the 5 Eliz. c. 1, if any person shall maintain the authority of the see of Rome in this realm, he shall incur a præmunire (b) for the first offence, and for the second shall be guilty of high treason. Prosecution to be within a year. And the justices in sessions may inquire thereof, and shall certify the same into the King's Bench. Sects. 2, 3, 4, 10, 11.

Maintaining authority of see of Rome.

And by the 3 Jac. I. c. 4, s. 22, 23, 25, if any person shall put in practice to absolve or withdraw any subjects from their allegiance, or if any person shall be willingly so absolved or withdrawn, he, his aiders and maintainers, shall be guilty of high treason. The trial to be at the assizes, or in the King's Bench.

Absolving or withdrawing subjects.

None shall take any benefice of an alien, or convey money to him for the farm thereof, on pain of incurring a præmunire. 13 Rich. II. c. 3.

Taking a benefice from an alien.

No alien shall purchase or occupy a benefice in England; on pain of a præmunire. 7 Rich. II. c. 12.

He that shall go out of the realm, to procure a benefice, shall be out of the king's protection ; and the same shall be void. 12 Rich. II. c. 15.

Going out of realm to procure a benefice.

If any person shall accept a benefice from the Pope, he shall be banished for ever, and his lands and goods forfeited. 13 Rich. II. st. 2, c. 2.

Charitable bequests of Roman Catholics.

By the 7 Hen. IV. c. 8; 3 Hen. V. st. 2, c. 4, no provision of a benefice not vacant, made by the Pope, and licensed by the king, shall be available: but persons endeavouring to exclude the incumbent thereby shall incur a præmunire.

If any person shall get or publish any bull or instrument from Rome, he shall be guilty of high treason. And his aiders and comforters shall incur a præmunire. And concealing the same shall be misprision of high treason. 13 Eliz. c. 2. And the justices of the peace may inquire thereof, within a year and a day. 23 Eliz. c. 1, s. 8.

By the 3 Jac. I. c. 4, s. 22, 23, 25, if any person shall put in practice to reconcile any subjects to popery, or if any person shall be willingly so reconciled, he, his aiders and maintainers, shall be guilty of high treason. The trial to be at the assizes, or in the King's Bench. And see the 27 Eliz. c. 2, s. 6.

The person who shall first discover to any justice of the peace any person who shall entertain or relieve any jesuits, seminary or popish priest, within three days after the offence, so that by reason of such discovery any offender shall be taken and convicted; such person shall not only be freed from any penalty for such offence, if himself be an offender therein, but shall also have the third part of the forfeitures if they do not exceed 150*l.*, and if they do exceed 150*l.*, then he shall have 50*l.* 3 Jac. I. c. 5, s. 1.

By the yearly land-tax acts papists and reputed papists, being of 18 years of age, who shall not have taken the oaths of allegiance and supremacy, shall pay double land-tax, subject to redemption. (See Co. Lit. 391, a. note 346 by Butler.)

By the 10 Geo. III. c. 6, s. 113, estates doubly taxed, coming to Protestants, are to be discharged.

A recusant conforming shall be discharged of the penalties which he might otherwise sustain in respect of his recusancy. 1 Jac. I. c. 4, s. 2.

I. General Regulations and Laws as to.

By the 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 12, and 5 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 9, 10, persons appointed from time to time to measure the post roads shall be sworn to perform the same according to the best of their skill and judgment, before a justice of the peace, who shall make a certificate thereof in writing, to be entered in the general post-office, without fee.

9 Anne, c. 10.

Measurer's oath.

By 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 41, no person shall be capable of exercising any employment relating to the post-office, or any branch thereof, or be any way concerned in receiving, sorting, or delivering of letters, before he shall have taken the following oath, before a justice of the peace where he resides:

Oath of person employed by post-office.

"I, A. B., do swear, that I will not wittingly, willingly, or knowingly open, detain, or delay, or cause, procure, permit, or suffer to be opened, detained, or delayed, any letter or letters, packet or packets, which shall come into my hands, power, or custody, by reason of my employment in or relating to the post-office; except by the consent of the person or persons to whom the same is or shall be directed, or by an express warrant in writing under the hand of one of the principal secretaries of state for that purpose; or except in such cases where the party or parties to whom such letter or letters, packet or packets, shall be directed, or who is or are chargeable with the payment of the port or ports * thereof, * Sic. shall refuse or neglect to pay the same, and except such letters or packets as shall be returned for want of true directions, or when the party or parties to whom the same is or shall be directed cannot be found: and that I will not in any way embezzle any such letter or letters, packet or packets as aforesaid."

But stat. 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 62, ante, "Oaths," Vol. III., substitutes a declaration in lieu of this oath.

Declarations substituted for this oath.

By 9 Anne c. 10, s. 40, no person shall wittingly, willingly, or knowingly open, detain, or delay, or cause, procure, or suffer any letter or packet, after delivery into the post-office, or into the hands of any person employed for the receiving or carrying post letters, and before delivery to the persons to whom directed, or for their use; except by express warrant in writing under the hand of one of the principal secretaries of state; or except where the party to whom directed, or who is chargeable with the payment of the port *, shall refuse to pay the same: and every person so offending, or who shall embezzle any such letter or packet, shall forfeit 20*l.*, to be recovered by action, &c., at Westminster, together with costs; and, besides such penalty, such offender shall be incapable of having, using, exercising, or enjoying any office, trust, or employment, in or relating to the post-office, or any branch thereof.

No letter to be opened or delayed.

Exception.

* Sic.

In the case of Martin v. Ford, 5 T. R. 101, it was determined that the penalty of 20*l.* inflicted by the 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 40, on persons who willingly or knowingly open, detain, or delay any letter after the same hath been delivered into the post-office, or into the hands of any person employed for the receiving or carrying post letters, extends only to persons in the employment of the post-office, and not to a person nominated jointly by the inhabitants of a village near a post town, and the postmaster of that town to receive and deliver the letters to those inhabitants.

Letters having arrived at a post-office addressed to a party who had become bankrupt, the assignee (in that character) demanded them of the postmaster, and he believing, bonâ fide, that the assignee was entitled to have them for

Letters to and from places not being post towns.

41 Geo. 3, c. 7.

By the 41 Geo. III. (U. K.) c. 7, s. 5, the postmaster-general may undertake at the expense of the post-office the conveyance and delivery of letters directed to persons abiding in towns and places (not being post towns) from the respective post towns to which such letters shall be carried by the post in the usual manner, and also the collection of letters in and from such towns, villages, and places to be sent by the post, and may take such sums of money for such extra service as may be agreed upon between him and the inhabitants of such place.

Sect. 6. Nothing herein shall prevent the inhabitants of any such towns and places from carrying or re-carrying, or employing servants or other persons to carry, letters to or from the post town in like manner as they have been heretofore accustomed and are by law authorized to do.

46 Geo. 3, c. 92.

And by the 46 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 2, the postmaster-general is authorized to do the same where the towns from whence the letters are to be conveyed are not post towns; and sect. 3 contains the same proviso as sect. 5 of 41 Geo. III. c. 7.

9 Anne, c. 10.

Conveying letters
post.

By the 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 17, no person shall receive, take up, order, despatch, convey, carry, re-carry, or deliver any letter or packet of letters, or make any collection of letters, or set up or employ any conveyance whatsoever for such receiving, &c. &c., or by means whereof any letter or packet of letters shall be received &c. &c., on pain of 5*l.* for every several offence, and also 100*l.* per week. [This enactment is still in force, see the 2 Wil. IV. c. 15, s. 18, post, 269.]

Sect. 32 saves the privileges of the two universities.

42 Geo. 3, c. 81.

Sending letters
post.

And by the 42 Geo. III. c. 81, s. 5, no person shall send or tender, or deliver to be sent otherwise than by the post, or by the authority of the postmaster-general, or his deputy or deputies, or to the nearest and most convenient post town, to be from thence forwarded by the post, any letter, or packet of letters, on pain of 5*l.* for every offence, with full costs to the informer, in any court of record at Westminster; one moiety thereof to the king, the other moiety to the informer. [This enactment is still in force, see the 2 Wil. IV. c. 15, s. 18, post, 269; see the 5 Geo. IV. c. 20, s. 7, infra.]

Exceptions.

Sect. 6. "Nothing herein shall extend to any letter concerning goods sent by any common carrier, and to be delivered with such goods without profit or advantage for receiving or delivering the same; nor any letter of merchants, owners of ships, or merchant vessels, nor any the cargo therein sent on board such vessels to be delivered by the masters thereof, or by any other employed by them for the carriage thereof without hire or reward for the same; nor any commission or return thereof; affidavits, writs, process, or proceedings, or return thereof, out of any court; nor any letter sent by any private friend in their way of journey, or by any messenger sent on purpose, concerning the private affairs of any person." [See the 5 Geo. IV. c. 20, s. 8, post, 269.]

A letter sent in a parcel from one stamp distributor to another, containing amongst other things stamps, is to be presumed to relate to them so as to bring it within the exception respecting letters accompanying goods in the 42 Geo. III. c. 81, s. 6; at least a carrier seeking to evade his liability to answer for the loss of it under the pretence of its having been an illegal act, must give some prima facie evidence to the contrary to lay the foundation of his objection. (Bennett v. Clough, 1 B. & Ald. 461.)

5 Geo. 4, c. 20.

Letters not to be conveyed in any other way than by post.

By statute 5 Geo. IV. c. 20, s. 7, reciting, that notwithstanding the provisions in that behalf made by the 9 Anne, c. 10, and 42 Geo. III. c. 81, "the practice of sending and conveying by stage coaches, carts, waggons, ships, vessels, boats, barges, and other conveyances, letters and packets which, by virtue of the laws relating to the post-office, ought to be sent by the post, prevails to a considerable extent, to the great prejudice and diminution of his majesty's revenue ;" it is enacted, " That from and after the passing of this act, [12th April, 1824,] no person or persons whatsoever, or body politic or corporate, in any part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain or Ireland, or other his majesty's dominions, where any post is or shall be established under the management of his majesty's postmaster-general, shall receive, take up, order, despatch, convey, carry, re-carry, or deliver, or shall send, or cause to be sent or conveyed, or tender or deliver in order to be sent or conveyed, otherwise than by the post, or by and with the authority and consent of his majesty's postmaster-general for the time being, or the deputy or deputies of such postmaster-general, or to the nearest or most convenient post town, to be from thence forwarded by the post, any letter or letters, on pain of forfeiting for each and every letter or letters, whether such letter shall be received, taken up, ordered, despatched, conveyed, carried, re-carried, or delivered, or sent, or caused to be sent or conveyed, or tendered, or delivered, in order to be sent or conveyed, separately or by itself, or together with any other letter or letters, or other matter or thing whatsoever, the sum of 5*l.*, one moiety whereof to the use of his majesty, his heirs and successors, and the other moiety to the use of the person who shall inform or sue for the same, to be sued for and recovered, with full costs of suit, by any person who shall and will inform and sue for the same, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, for offences committed within that part of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland called England, and in any of his majesty's courts of record in Dublin for offences committed in Ireland, and before the sheriff or steward court of the shire or stewartry within which the party offending shall reside, or the offence shall be committed, for offences committed in Scotland."

1. General Laws as to.

5 Geo. 4, c. 20.

Penalty on each letter.

Sect. 8. " This act shall not extend to subject any person or body corporate to any such penalty or forfeiture as aforesaid, for receiving, taking up, ordering, despatching, conveying, carrying, re-carrying, or delivering or sending, or causing to be sent or conveyed, or for tendering or delivering, or sending or causing to be sent or conveyed, or for tendering or delivering in order to be sent or conveyed, any letter or letters which shall respectively concern goods sent by any common known carrier of goods, and shall be sent with and for the purpose of being delivered with the goods that such letter or letters do concern, without hire or reward, profit or advantage, for the receiving or delivering the same; nor any letter or letters of merchants, owners of any ships, barques, or vessels of merchandize, or any the cargo or lading therein, sent on board the same ships, barques, or vessels of merchandize, to be delivered by the masters of the same ships, barques, or vessels of merchandize, or by any other person employed by them for the carriage of such letters, according to their respective direction, without paying or receiving any hire or reward, advantage or profit for the same in anywise; nor any commission or return thereof, affidavits, writs, process, or proceedings, or return thereof, issuing out of any court; nor any letter sent by any private friend in his or her way of journey or travel, so as such letter shall be delivered by such friend to the party to whom such letter shall be directed; nor any letter or letters to be sent by any messenger on purpose for or concerning the private affairs of any person."

Exemptions.

By the 2 Wil. IV. c. 15, s. 18, in actions, &c., brought for illegally sending or conveying letters otherwise than by the post, contrary to these acts of 9 Anne, 42 Geo. III., 5 Geo. IV., and others, the proof is to lie on the defendant.

Sect. 10, enables the postmaster-general to contract for the conveyance of mails by British ships, and forward the same at the packet rates of postage.

Sect. 12. imposes a penalty of 5*l.* on persons carrying or forwarding letters by any such ships otherwise than through the post-office.

1. General Laws as to.

Sect. 13, the enactments are not to extend to letters sent relating to goods on board such ship.

Sect. 14, empowers the custom-house officers to search for letters.

Sect. 15. The penalties are to be received from the person writing, sending, or conveying such letters.

Sect. 16. One moiety of the penalties is to be payable to the use of his majesty, and the other moiety to the informer who shall sue for the same.

Postmaster not to meddle in elections.

By the 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 44, no postmaster shall, by word, message, or writing, or in any other manner, endeavour to persuade any elector to give, or dissuade any elector from giving his vote for the choice of any person to serve in parliament, on pain of 100*l.*; half to the informer, and half to the poor; and likewise of being incapacitated.

Inspection of letters by government.

It should be observed, that notwithstanding the above enactments against detaining or opening letters, the correspondence of the kingdom is still liable to the inspection of government; for, by a warrant from one of the principal secretaries of state, letters may be detained and opened. One of the reasons assigned in the ordinance made in 1657, for the establishment of the general post-office, is, "that it will be the best means to discover and prevent many dangerous and wicked designs against the commonwealth." (1 Bla. Com. 322, note.) (a)

Liability of postmaster for loss, &c., of letters.

It was determined so long ago as 13 Wil. III. in the case of Lane v. Cotton, by three judges of the Court of King's Bench, though contrary to Lord C. J. Holt's opinion, that no action could be maintained against the postmaster-general for the loss of bills or articles sent in letters by the post. (Lane v. Cotton, 1 Ld. Raym. 646; 1 Cowp. Rep. 100.) A similar action was brought against Lord Le Despenser and Mr. Carteret, postmaster-general in 1778, to recover a bank note of 100*l.*, which had been sent by the post and was lost. Lord Mansfield delivered the opinion of the court, that there was no resemblance or analogy between the postmasters and a common carrier, and that no action for any loss in the post-office could be brought against any person except him by whose actual negligence the loss accrued. (Whitfield v. Lord Le Despenser, Cowp. 754, 765.)

For this reason it is recommended by the secretary of the post-office to cut bank notes and to send one half at a time. This is the only safe method of sending bank notes, as the Bank would never pay the holder of that half which had been fraudulently obtained.

II. Offences relative to the Post-Office. Inspection of Letters by Government. Liability of Postmaster for Loss of Letters, &c.

Postboy loitering upon the road.

By the 5 Geo. III. c. 25, s. 20, if any postboy shall quit the mail before his arrival at the next stage; or shall suffer any other person (except the person employed to guard the mail) to ride on the horse or carriage; or shall loiter on the road so as to retard the arrival of the mail; or shall not in all possible cases convey the mail after the rate of six miles an hour at the least: he shall, on conviction by confession, or oath of one witness before one justice, be sent to the house of correction, to be there kept to hard labour, not exceeding one month, nor less than fourteen days.

Unlawfully collecting letters.

And, by sect. 21, if any postboy shall by himself or in combination with others unlawfully collect any letters, or convey or cause them to be unlawfully conveyed, he shall, on conviction by confession on oath of one witness before one justice, forfeit for every letter or packet so collected, conveyed or delivered,

(a) And see stat. 24 Geo. III., stat. 2, c. 37, s. 4, 5, as to opening foreign letters suspected to contain prohibited goods, post, 279, and statutes 35 Geo. III. c. 62, and 17 Geo. III. st. 2, c. 53, enabling the postmaster-general to open and return letters to foreign parts in consequence of certain political emergencies.

10s. to the informer: if not forthwith paid on conviction, to be committed to the house of correction to hard labour, not exceeding two months nor less than one.

Sect. 19. If any person appointed, authorized, and intrusted to take in letters or packets and receive the postage thereof, shall embezzle or apply to his own use any money received by him with such letters, &c. for the postage thereof; or shall burn or otherwise destroy any letter or packet by him so taken in or received; or who, by virtue of his office, shall advance the rates upon letters or packets sent by the post, and not duly account for the money received by him for such advanced postage; he shall be deemed guilty of felony.

Embezzling money for letters post paid, or destroying the letters.

Advancing rate of postage.

And by the 7 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 3, if any person employed in any business of the post-office, who shall take any letter or packet to be forwarded by the post, and receive any money therewith for the postage, shall burn or destroy any such letter or packet; or shall advance the rate of postage upon any letter or packet sent by the post, and not duly account for the money by him received for such advanced postage; he shall be deemed guilty of felony.

7 Geo. 3, c. 50.

By s. 2. "If any person or persons shall rob any mail or mails, in which letters are sent or conveyed by the post, of any letter or letters, packet or packets, bag or mail of letters, or shall steal and take from or out of any such mail or mails, or from or out of any bag or bags of letters sent or conveyed by the post, or from or out of any post-office, or house or place for the receipt or delivery of letters or packets sent or to be sent by the post, any letter or letters, packet or packets, although such robbery, stealing, or taking shall not appear to be proved to be a taking from the person, or upon the king's highway, or to be a robbery committed in any dwelling-house, or any coach-office, stable, barn, or any outhouse belonging to a dwelling-house, and although it should not appear that any person or persons were put in fear by such robbery, stealing, or taking, yet such offender or offenders, being thereof convicted, as aforesaid, shall be deemed guilty of felony, without benefit of clergy." [See as to the punishment, 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 81, post, 272.]

Robbing the mail, or stealing letters.

By the 42 Geo. III. c. 81, s. 4, if any person shall wilfully secrete, keep, or detain, or being required to deliver up by any deputy, clerk, agent, letter-carrier, post-boy, rider, driver, or guard, of any mail coach, or any other officer or person whatsoever, employed in any business relating to the post-office, shall refuse or wilfully neglect to deliver up any mail or bag of letters sent or conveyed, or made up in order to be sent or conveyed by the post, or any letter or packet sent by the post, or put for that purpose into any post-office, or house or place for the receipt or delivery of letters, &c., and which letter or packet, bag or mail of letters, shall have been found or picked up by the same or any other person, or shall, by or through accident or mistake, have been left with or at the house of the same or any other person; each and every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, to be punished by fine and imprisonment.

42 Geo. 3, c. 81.

Persons secreting &c. letters, which shall be found or picked up, &c., guilty of a misdemeanor.

By the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 2, if any deputy, clerk, agent, letter-carrier, post-boy, or rider, or any other officer or person whatsoever employed by or under the post-office of Great Britain in receiving, stamping, sorting, charging, carrying, conveying, or delivering letters or packets, or in any other business relating to the said office, shall, after the passing of this act, secrete, embezzle, or destroy any letter or packet, or bag or mail of letters, with which he or she shall have been entrusted in consequence of such employment, or which shall in any other manner have come to his or her hands or possession, whilst so employed, containing the whole or any part or parts of any bank note, bank post bill, bill of exchange, exchequer bill, South Sea or East India bond, dividend warrant, either of the Bank, South Sea, East India, or any other company, society, or corporation, navy or victualling or transport bill, ordnance debenture, seaman's ticket, state-lottery ticket or certificate, bank receipt for payment on any loan, note of assignment of stock in the funds, letter of attorney for receiving annuities or dividends, or for selling stock in the funds, or belonging to any company, society, or corporation, American provincial bill of credit, goldsmith's or banker's letter of credit, or note for or relating to the payment of money, or other bond or warrant, draught, bill, or promissory note whatsoever, for the payment of money; or shall steal and take out of any letter or packet with which he or she shall have been so entrusted, or which shall have so come to his or her hands or possession, the whole or any part or parts of any such bank note, bank post bill, bill of exchange, exchequer bill, South Sea or East India bond, dividend warrant, either of the Bank, South Sea, East India, or any other company, society, or corporation, navy, or victualling, or transport bill, ordnance debenture, seaman's ticket, state-lottery ticket or certificate, bank receipt for payment of any loan, note of assignment of stock in the funds, letter of attorney for receiving annuities or dividends, or for selling stock in the funds, or belonging to any company, society, or corporation, American provincial bill of credit, goldsmith's or banker's letter of credit, or note for or relating to the payment of money, or other bond or warrant, draught, bill, or promissory note whatsoever, for the payment of money; every person so offending, being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as a felon, without benefit of clergy.

By sect. 3, if any person shall, after the passing of this act, steal and take from any carriage, or from the possession of any person employed to convey letters sent by the post of Great Britain, or from or out of any post-office, or house or place for the receipt or delivery of letters or packets, or bags or mails of letters sent or to be sent by such post, any letter or packet, or bag or mail of letters sent or to be sent by such post, or shall steal and take any letter or packet out of any such bag or mail, every person so offending, and being thereby convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as a felon, without benefit of clergy; and such offences shall and may be inquired of, tried, and determined, either in the county where the offence shall be committed, or where the party shall or may be apprehended. [And see the 2 Wil. IV. c. 15, s. 11, as to Irish letters, &c.]

Sect. 4. "If any person shall, after the passing of this act, counsel, command, hire, persuade, procure, aid, or abet, any such deputy, clerk, agent, letter-carrier, post-boy, or rider, or any officer or person whatsoever employed by or under the said office, in receiving, stamping, sorting, charging, carrying, conveying, or delivering letters or packets, or in any other business relating to the said office, to commit any of the offences hereinbefore mentioned, or shall, with a fraudulent intention, buy or receive the whole or any part or parts of any such security or instrument, as hereinbefore described, which shall have been contained in, and which, at the time of buying or receiving thereof, he or she shall know to have been contained in any such letter or packet so secreted, embezzled, stolen or taken by any deputy, clerk, agent, letter-carrier, post-boy, or rider, or any other officer or person so employed, as aforesaid, or which such person so buying or receiving, as aforesaid, shall, at the time of buying or receiving thereof, know to have been contained in and stolen and taken out of any letter or packet, stolen and taken from or out of any mail or bag of letters sent and conveyed by such post, or from or out of any post-office, or house or place for the receipt or delivery of letters or packets, or bags or mails of letters, sent or to be sent by such post, every person so offending, and being thereof convicted, shall be adjudged guilty of felony, and shall suffer death as a felon, without benefit of clergy, and shall and may be tried, convicted, and attainted of such felony, as well before as after the trial or conviction of the principal felon, and whether the said principal felon shall have been apprehended or shall be amenable to justice or not."

By the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 81, so much of the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, as inflicts the punishment of death, is abolished, and the offender is now by the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 81, explained by the 6 Wil. IV. c. 4, liable to be transported beyond the seas for life, or for not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned with or without hard labour in the common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding three years, and for any period of solitary confinement during such imprisonment, at the discretion of the court or judge. See these enactments, post, "Sacrilege," p. 382.

The 5 Geo. IV. c. 20, s. 10, reciting, "that serious loss, inconvenience, and injury, may be sustained by the wilful embezzling or purloining of printed votes or proceedings in parliament, and printed newspapers, sent or to be sent by the post, within the United Kingdom," enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act [12th April, 1824], if any deputy, clerk, agent, letter-carrier, letter-sorter, post-boy, or rider, or any other officer or person whatsoever, employed, or hereafter to be employed, in receiving, stamping, sorting, charging, conveying, or delivering letters or packets, or in any other business relating to the post-office in the said United Kingdom, shall wilfully purloin, embezzle, secrete, or destroy, or shall wilfully permit or suffer any other person or persons to purloin, embezzle, secrete, or destroy, any printed votes or proceedings in parliament, or printed newspapers, or any other printed paper whatsoever, sent or to be sent by the post without covers, or in covers open at the sides, each and every such person or persons so offending shall be deemed and taken to be guilty of a misdemeanor, and be punished by fine and imprisonment; and such offences shall and may be inquired of, tried, and determined, either in the county where the offence shall be committed, or where the party shall or may be apprehended."

proceedings, or newspapers, &c. misdemeanor.

By the 2 Wil. IV. c. 15, s. 10, his majesty's postmaster-general for the time being, and his deputy and deputies by him thereunto sufficiently authorized, may contract and agree for the conveyance of mails of letters by any British ships or vessels to or from any port or place whatsoever, and to forward the same accordingly, and to demand and take, for the use of his majesty, his heirs and successors, for such conveyance, the like rates of postage, and to exercise and enforce the like powers for compelling payment of the same, as if such letters and packets had been conveyed by regular packet boats.

Postmaster general may contract for conveyance of mails by British ships, and forward the same at packet rates of postage.

Sect. 11. "Every person who shall steal or unlawfully take away any bag or mail of letters sent or to be sent by any ship or vessel so to be employed for the conveyance of mails of letters and packets as last aforesaid, or shall steal or unlawfully take any letter or packet out of any such bag or mail, or shall unlawfully open any such bag or mail, shall, upon being convicted thereof, be adjudged guilty of felony, and shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years nor less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years; and when any such felony shall be committed within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty of England, the same shall be dealt with, inquired of, tried, and determined in the same manner as any other felony committed within that jurisdiction."

Stealing bags or mails of letters, or stealing letters out of such bags or mails, felony.

Shaw was indicted on the 7 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 1, being a clause nearly similar to the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 1. There were four counts in the indictment: 1st. That, being a clerk employed in sorting and charging letters in the post-office, the prisoner feloniously secreted, embezzled, and destroyed a letter containing a bank note for 20*l*. 2dly. That, being a person employed in the business relating to the general post-office, he secreted, &c. 3dly. That, being a clerk employed in sorting and charging letters in the post-office, he feloniously stole and took out of a letter a bank note for 20*l*. 4thly. That, being a person employed in the business relating to the general post-office, he feloniously stole, &c. It appeared in evidence that the prisoner was only a sorter, and not a charger of letters; whereupon the recorder, who tried him, directed the jury (the proof of the fact being very plain) to convict him, which they did, on the second and fourth counts only. It was then moved in arrest of judgment that, as he had been acquitted on the counts which charged him as a sorter and charger, and did not appear to be a person employed by the post-office in any other business but that of sorting, which is one of the employments particularly specified in the 7 Geo. III., which says, that "if any person employed in receiving, sorting, charging, &c., or in any other business relating to the post-office, shall, &c.," he could not be convicted on the third and fourth counts. This, being adjourned to Serjeants' Inn, was argued before eleven of the judges (abs. Blackstone, J.) who unanimously agreed that judgment should be arrested, but inclined to think, that the jury might have convicted the prisoner on the first and third counts, by a special finding that he was a sorter only. (Shaw's case, O. B. May, 1771; Blac. Rep. 789; 2 East's P. C. 580.)

In Browne's case, the prisoner was employed in the post-office to deliver letters, but not to sort them; but he did sort them, when regularly he ought not to have done so, and whilst sorting, stole a letter. The indictment charged him, as a sorter, with secreting, and, as a common person (under sect. 3 of the 52 Geo. III.), with stealing: but as it appeared that he ought not to have been allowed to sort, he was acquitted of secreting; and it was then urged he could not have been convicted under the third section, because he was a person employed in the post-office, and the case of R. v. Pooley, infra, was cited. A case being reserved, the judges stated, that the report of R. v. Pooley was to the point in question mistaken: that R. v. Simpson, cor. Lord Ellenborough, Thompson, B., and Lawrence, J., O. B. 1810, was in point the other way; that a man who stole was not less a person stealing, because he had some employment in the office; and that, upon a contrary construction, if a person in the office stole, but not in the course of his employment, he would be unpunishable. (R. v. Brown, 2 Russ. C. & M. 238; and R. & M., C. C. 32, n. a.)

Previously to the last case it had been holden, that a letter-carrier taking letters out of the post-office, intending to deliver them to the owners, but to embezzle the postage, is not indictable for stealing such letters, under the second section of the 7 Geo. III. c. 50. (Howatt's case, post, 275.)

The 7 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 2. ante, 271, relative to robbing the mail and stealing a letter, was held not to extend to the servants of the post-office; and, therefore, a conviction of one of them for stealing out of the post-office a letter sent to be delivered by the post, was holden to be wrong. The opinion of the judges in this case was founded on a comparison of the second section of the act with the first and third sections, which were expressly intended to guard against the misconduct of the servants of the post-office. (Pooley's case, O. B. 1801; 1 East's P. C. Add. xvii.; R. & R. 12, S. C.) But the report of such decision has been mentioned as incorrect. And it is clear that a person may be indicted and convicted under the third section of the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, ante, 273, for stealing a letter, though such person has an employment in the post-office, especially if such letter did not come to him in the course of his employment. (2 Russ. C. & M. 239.)

bank note, &c.

Benjamin Willoughby was indicted on the 7 Geo. III. c. 50, for that he, being a clerk employed in the post-office at Birmingham, in stamping and charging letters, stole and took out of a letter there, a certain warrant for the payment of money, (setting it forth, by which it appeared to be a Birmingham post-bill, or bill of exchange payable in London). The fact of stealing having been proved, it was objected that this was not "a warrant for the payment of money" within the meaning of the act, but a post-bill, or bill of exchange. The prisoner was found guilty, but judgment was respited to take the opinion of the judges. Though at first there was a difference of opinion among the judges, at length they all agreed that it was properly stated in the indictment; for, though it was a bill of exchange, it was also a warrant for the payment of money; it was a voucher to the bankers or drawers, if genuine, for the payment, and it might also have been laid to be a draft. And they said it could not be distinguished from the case of R. v. Shepherd, Mich. 1781, where in forgery the indictment was in the same form, and holden good. (Willoughby's case, Warwick Lent Ass. 1783; 2 East's P. C. 581.)

Money in a letter.

Stealing money out of letters is not within these acts. Timothy Skutt, who was a sorter of letters, &c., stole two letters, each containing 5s. 3d. in gold coin; and, being indicted on these statutes, and the fact being proved, it was objected that, as the letters contained money, and not any security relating to the payment of money mentioned in the acts, the case did not fall within them; and the court being of that opinion, he was acquitted on that indictment, but was again indicted and convicted of grand larceny for stealing the money, and was transported. (Skutt's case, O. B. 1774; 2 East's P. C. 581.)

In Moore's case, 2 East's P. C. 581, it was holden, upon a conference by all the judges (except Buller, J., who was absent, and doubted), that a letter-carrier secreting half a bank note in one letter on one day, and the other half in another letter on another day, is a secreting within the 7 Geo. III. c. 50; and see now the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 2, ante, 271; also the 42 Geo. III. c. 81; R. v. Ellins, R. & R., C. C. 188.

A bill of exchange may be laid as a warrant for the payment of money, within the statute. (Willoughby's case, 2 E. P. C. 581.)

Where a person employed in the post-office secreted a letter, containing a draft not duly stamped, it was held not to be an offence within the act, the draft not being available. (R. v. Pooley, R. & R. 12; 3 B. & P. 311, S. C.) But secreting a letter containing country bank notes, paid in London, and not re-issued, is an offence within the statute; for they are available against the makers of them, into whomsoever's hands they come. (R. v. Ranson, R. & R. 232.)

The note or other security stolen in the letter may be described generally in the indictment. (2 E. P. C. 583.)

A stamper of the post-office, who purloins a letter for the purpose of delivering it as a missorted letter, with a view of obtaining the postage of it, cannot be capitally convicted of secreting a letter containing bills, under the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 2, although the letter may, in fact, contain bills. (R. v. Sharpe, cor. 12 Judges, 1825; Car. C. L. 147; R. & M., C. C. R. 125, S. C. See also the case of R. v. Ellins, R. & R., C. C. 188.)

The horse mail-bags being left by the mail-rider, after he had taken possession of them, for a temporary purpose, for two minutes, were stolen during his absence: the case is within the 52 Geo. III. c. 143, s. 3. (R. v. Robinson, 2 Stark. N. P. 485.)

Noah Pearce, intending to steal the mail-bags, went one night about the usual time to the post-office at High Wycombe, and pretending to be the mail-guard, obtained from the person at the office the bags of letters, which were let down to him from out of the window of the post-office by a string, from whence he took them, and immediately went away. Being indicted on the 7 Geo. III. c. 50, s. 2, and found guilty, all the judges were of opinion, in Hilary Term following, that the conviction was proper, on a count in the indictment for stealing the letters out of the post-office. His artifice in obtaining the delivery of them in the bag out of the house was the same as if he had actually taken them out himself. (Noah Pearce's case, Buckingham Sum. Ass. 1794, 2 East's P. C. 603.) In this case the property did not pass; as the postmaster had no property in the mail-bags to part with.

A letter-carrier, taking letters out of the office, intending to deliver them to the owners, but to embezzle the postage, cannot be indicted for stealing such letters, under the 7 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 2. James Howatt was indicted on the second section of this act: 1st, for stealing out of the London bags, sent by the general post-office from London to Manchester, divers letters specified; 2ndly, 3rdly, and 4thly, for stealing the like letters out of the post-office in Manchester, and out of a certain house for the receipt and delivery of letters sent by the post, and out of a certain place for the same. It appeared to be the duty of the clerks in the office to count the letters and deliver them out to the letter-carriers, of whom the prisoner was one. He contrived to obtain possession of some of the letters before they were so counted out to him, and was detected with them in his pocket in the letter-carrier's room, which is under the same roof as the office, separated from it only by some steps. For some time previous there had been a great deficiency in the receipt of the postage, though there was no complaint of the miscarriage of any letters; and from circumstances it appeared, and so the jury found when they convicted the prisoner, that he intended to have delivered the letters, and only to have embezzled the postage. But in the Michaelmas Term following, all the judges (abs. Hotham, B.) agreed that

2. Offences, &c. relative to. this was not a stealing within the act. (Howatt's case, Lancaster Sum. Ass. 1795, cor. Rooke, J., 2 East's P. C. 604; and see ante, 274)

Trial, where.

On an indictment for robbing the mail, the robbery must have formerly been proved to have been committed in the county laid in the indictment. (R. v. Thomas, 2 East's P. C. 605.) But now this difficulty is removed by the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 12; and see "Indictment," Vol. III.

To prevent obstructions opposite general post-offices in London and Dublin.

By the 2 Wil. IV. c. 15, s. 37, reciting "and whereas it is expedient to prevent obstructions opposite the general post-offices in London and Dublin;" it is enacted, "that no hackney carriage of any description whatever shall at any time hereafter stand or ply for hire in front or opposite the general post-office in St. Martin's-le-Grand, or the general post-office in Sackville-street, Dublin, or either of them, or any part thereof, respectively; and also that no hawker, newsvender, or other person or persons whatsoever, shall at any time hereafter unnecessarily stop or loiter on the flagway or pavement in front of the said post-offices or either of them, or any part thereof respectively, any law to the contrary in anywise notwithstanding; and in case the driver or any person or persons having the management of any hackney carriage shall permit the same to stand or ply for hire in front of or opposite the general post-office in St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, or the general post-office in Sackville-street, Dublin, or either of them, or any part thereof, or in case any hawker, newsvender, or other idle or disorderly person shall unnecessarily or purposely stop or loiter on the flagway or pavement in front of the said general post-offices or either of them, or any part thereof, the person or persons so offending shall for every such offence, on conviction thereof in a summary way before a justice of the peace, forfeit and pay to the informer any sum not exceeding five pounds, with costs, and if not paid, either immediately after the conviction or within such period as the justice shall at the time of the conviction appoint, it shall be lawful for the convicting justice to commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction, there to be imprisoned for any time not exceeding two calendar months, the commitment to be determinable on payment of the amount and costs."

Manner of proceeding against persons for such obstructions.

Sect. 38. "And for the more effectual prosecution of the said last-mentioned offence, be it enacted, that where any person shall be charged, on the oath of a credible witness, before any justice of the peace, with any such offence, the justice may summon the person charged to appear at a time and place to be named in such summons, and if he or she shall not appear accordingly, then (upon proof of the due service of the summons upon such person, by delivering the same to him or her personally, or by leaving the same at his or her usual place of abode,) the justice may either proceed to hear and determine the case ex parte, or issue his warrant for apprehending such person, and bringing him or her before himself or some other justice of the peace, or the justice before whom the charge shall be made may, (if he shall so think fit,) without any previous summons, issue such warrant, and the justice before whom the person charged shall appear or be brought shall proceed to hear and determine the case."

What shall be deemed hackney carriages for the purposes hereof.

Sect. 39. "Every carriage with two or more wheels, which shall stand or ply for hire in front of or opposite the general post-office in St. Martin's-le-Grand, London, or the general post-office in Sackville-street, Dublin, or either of them, or any part thereof, of whatever may be the form or construction of such carriage, or the number of persons which the same shall be calculated to convey, or the number of horses by which the same shall be drawn, shall be deemed and taken to be a hackney carriage within the meaning of this act; and in all proceedings at law or otherwise, and upon all occasions whatsoever, it shall be sufficient to describe any such carriage as aforesaid by the term hackney carriage, without further or otherwise describing the same."

III. Postage of Letters and Packets.

By 9 Anne, c. 10, s. 30, all sums not exceeding 5*l*. due from any person for letters delivered, shall be recovered before justices of the peace as small tithes are. Such debt to be preferable to any debt to a private person. Postage, how recoverable.

And by the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 25, s. 28, "so often as any sum or sums of money, not exceeding twenty pounds, shall be due from any person or persons in Great Britain or Ireland (whether under this act, or under any other act or acts relating to the post-office), for the postage of any letter or packet, letters or packets, to him, her, or them delivered by any deputy, agent, or letter carrier under his majesty's postmaster-general, or which shall be due from any deputy, agent, or letter carrier in Great Britain or Ireland for the port of any letters or packets to him, her, or them entrusted for delivery under the authority of the said postmaster-general, or from any other person or persons employed or to be employed in receiving or collecting the postage of letters or packets, or any of the post-office revenue, it shall be lawful for any constable, tithingman, or other peace officer of the county, riding, division, city, town, or place where such person or persons shall reside, first obtaining a warrant for that purpose under the hand and seal or hands and seals of any one or more of his majesty's justices acting in and for such county, riding, division, city, town, or place (which justice or justices on complaint made to him or them shall summon the party complained of, and the witnesses on either side, and examine into the matter of fact, and shall grant such warrant, on due proof being made of the sum or sums due and owing from such person or persons as aforesaid by the voluntary confession of the party or by the oath of one or more witness or witnesses), to distrain such person or persons by his, her, or their goods and chattels for the amount of such debt, and the distress so to be taken to detain and keep for the space of five days at the costs and charges of such person or persons; and if he, she, or they shall not within the time pay the amount of such debt, with the costs and charges of taking and keeping such distress, then the goods and chattels so distrained shall be sold by such constable, tithingman, or other peace officer, who shall render the overplus (if any) of the money arising by the sale thereof, after deducting and retaining the amount of such debt and the costs and charges of taking, keeping, and selling such distress, to the person or persons so to be distrained as aforesaid; and for the purpose of taking such distress it shall be lawful for such constable, tithingman, or other peace officer, when any refusal or resistance shall be made, to break open in the day-time any house or place where any goods or chattels of such person or persons shall be, and if no sufficient distress can be had or taken whereon to levy the said debt and charges, then such justice or justices shall commit such person or persons to the prison of such county, riding, division, city, town, or place, there to remain until such debt and charges shall be fully paid and satisfied."

Sect. 29. "Every complaint, information, summons, conviction, warrant of distress or commitment, or other such proceeding, which shall be had or taken under the provisions of this act for the recovery of any postage or postage debt, may be drawn or made out according to the several forms contained in the schedule hereunto annexed, or to the effect thereof, mutatis mutandis, as the case shall require, and every such complaint, information, summons, conviction, warrant, or other such proceeding which shall be so drawn or made out shall be good and effectual to all intents and purposes whatsoever, without stating the case or the facts or evidence in any more particular manner than is required in and by such forms respectively; and that wherever the term "officer of the post-office" occurs in this act or the schedule thereto, the same shall be construed to mean and include any deputy, agent, officer, clerk, letter carrier, or other person employed by or under the post-office, whatever may be his particular office or employment; and that whenever the term "East Indies" occurs in this act, the same shall be construed to mean and include every port and place within the limits of the Forms of proceedings.

charter of the United Company of Merchants commonly called the East India Company, not being in China; and that whenever in this act, or the schedule thereto, with reference to any person, matter, or thing, any word or words is or are used importing the singular number or the masculine gender only, yet such word or words shall be understood to include several persons as well as one person, females as well as males, bodies politic or corporate as well as individuals, and several matters or things as well as one matter or thing, unless it be otherwise specially provided, or there be something in the subject or context repugnant to such construction."

Postmasters in country towns are frequently in the habit of charging a half-penny and a penny a letter on delivery at the houses in the town above the parliamentary rates, under the pretence that they are not obliged to carry the letters out of the office gratis. But it has been repeatedly decided that such demand is illegal, and that they are bound to deliver the letters to the inhabitants within the usual and established limits of the town, without any addition to the rate of postage. (Rowning v. Goodchild, 3 Wils. 443; 2 Black. Rep. 906; 5 Burr. 2716, S. C.; Stock v. Harris, 5 Burr. 2709; 2 Rol. Rep. 906; Smith v. Powditch, Cowp. 182.) And an action lies against a deputy-postmaster for non-delivery of letters gratis in a country post town. (Id.)

But by the 41 Geo. III. (United Kingdom) c. 7, s. 5 & 6, and 46 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 2 & 3, ante, 268, letters may be conveyed to and from places not being post towns, and charged with extra prices.

The penny post was set up in London by one Murray, in 1681; it was claimed by government in 1711, and raised to 2*d.* in 1724.

And by the 45 Geo. III. c. 11, s. 1, for the conveyance of every letter, originally sent by the twopenny post, and not first passing, and afterwards to pass by the general post, directed to or sent from places beyond the delivery of the general post letter-carriers, 1*d.*; for every letter originally passing by the general post, directed to places beyond the delivery of the general post, and afterwards delivered by the twopenny post, 2*d.*

By the 41 Geo. III. (U. K.) c. 7, so much of the 9 Anne, c. 10, 5 Geo. III. c. 25, 24 Geo. III. c. 37, and 37 Geo. III. c. 18, as establishes certain rates of postage for carriage of letters, is repealed; and in lieu thereof the following imposed:—

Miles.			Miles.		Single.	Double.		Treble.	Ounce.
					d.	s.	d.	s.	d.	s.
Above	—	not exceeding	15	3	0	6	0	6	1	0

—	230	—	300	10	1	8	2	5	3	4

But where the distance above 300 miles is more than 100 miles, a further sum of, for every single letter, 1*d.*; double, 2*d.*; treble, 3*d.*; an ounce, 4*d.*; and so on progressively for every further distance of 100 miles a like further sum, for a single letter, 1*d.*; double, 2*d.*; treble, 3*d.*; an ounce, 4*d.*; and so in proportion.

By the 52 Geo. III. c. 88, s. 1, the following additional rates, being rated by the letter or by the ounce, are established for the carriage of letters by the post in Great Britain, above the distance of twenty miles, from the office where such letters may be put in to the office where the same may be directed: viz.

For every Single Letter	0	0	1
For every Double Letter	0	0	2

	£	s.	d.	3. Postage of Letters and Packets.
For every Treble Letter, or other Letter under an Ounce in Weight	0	0	3
And for every Ounce in Weight, and for every Packet not exceeding an Ounce in Weight	0	0	4
And so in proportion for every other letter or packet of greater weight than an ounce.

By the third section of the act, these rates of postage are not to extend to letters sent by or to seamen and soldiers, under the 35 Geo. III. c. 53.

By the fourth section, the powers of former acts are extended to that act.

By the 26 Geo. II. c. 13, s. 8, for every single letter or cover containing one or more papers with patterns, or one or more patterns of cloth, silk, or stuff, or one or more samples of any other sort of goods, or one or more piece or pieces of any other sort or thing inclosed therein or affixed thereto, though not paper, if the same do not weigh an ounce, the rates payable by 9 Anne, c. 10, for a double letter. Letters inclosing patterns.

But by the 35 Geo. III. c. 53, s. 9, every such packet or cover shall be sent open at the sides, and without any letter or writing in, upon, or with such packet or cover, other than the name of the person sending the same and the place of his abode, and the prices of the articles contained therein or affixed thereto.

By the 45 Geo. III. c. 11, s. 1, for every such letter or packet with such inclosures, sent according to the 26 Geo. II. c. 13, and 35 Geo. III. c. 54, there shall be paid the sum of 1*d.*

And by the 52 Geo. III. c. 88, s. 2, for the conveyance by the post of every letter, packet, or cover, containing patterns of cloth, silk, stuff, or samples of other goods or other sort of thing, not exceeding one ounce in weight, if the same letter or packet or cover shall be closed or not open at the sides, an additional rate of 2*d.* for every such letter, packet, or cover: and for the conveyance by the post of every letter or cover containing one or more paper or papers with patterns, or containing one or more pattern or patterns of cloth, silk, or stuff, or one or more sample or samples of any other sort of goods, or one or more piece or pieces of any other sort of thing inclosed therein or affixed thereto, though not on paper, if the same do not weigh an ounce, an additional rate of one penny for every such letter, so as every such letter, packet, or cover shall be sent open at the sides and without any letter or writing in, upon, or with such packet or cover, other than the name of the person sending the same, and the place of his abode, and the prices of the articles contained therein, or affixed thereto.

By the 24 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 37, s. 4, for preventing prohibited goods being imported in letters or packets, the officer employed at the post-office where any foreign letter or packet containing any inclosure shall be received may carry the same before a justice for the county, or magistrate for the town, in which such office is situate, and upon oath made that he suspects the same to contain goods which are prohibited to be imported, or upon which a duty is payable upon importation, shall, in the presence of such magistrate, cut open (a) a slit in such letter or packet not exceeding two inches in length; and if it shall appear to such magistrate that any such goods are contained therein, he shall open the same, and in the presence of such officer destroy such goods, and inclose such letter or packet in a cover, in which shall be written an attestation signed by him of the name of the officer who brought the same, and the time when, and the quantity and description of goods found therein, and that the same were destroyed; which cover shall be sealed and forwarded to the commissioners of the customs, who, on receipt Prohibited goods, suspected to be in foreign letters.

Sect. 5. And if on making such slit as aforesaid no such goods shall be found in such letter or packet, such magistrate shall inclose the same in a cover, and shall therein also send an attestation signed by him that the said opening was made in his presence, and shall deliver the same sealed up to the said officer, to be forwarded by the ordinary course. And no additional postage shall be charged in consequence of such proceeding.

Re-issuable cash notes issued by country bankers, and paid in London, may be conveyed by post to the banks whence first issued, at rates herein mentioned.

The 5 Geo. IV. c. 20, s. 1, enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act, it shall and may be lawful to and for his majesty's postmaster-general and his deputy and deputies, in his discretion, to receive at the General Post-office in London, packets containing re-issuable cash notes only, issued by country bankers under annual licence, and payable at the houses of their respective agents in London, which cash notes have been paid by such agents in London for conveyance by the post within Great Britain at his discretion, to the bank in the town or place from which such cash notes were first issued, and to no other bank, town, or place whatever; and to demand, have, receive, and take for the conveyance of such packets, to and for the use of his majesty, his heirs, and successors, rates of postage not exceeding one-fourth part of the rates and duties of postage by law established, or which may hereafter be established for the conveyance of letters and packets by the post; any law, statute, custom, or usage, to the contrary notwithstanding."

Packets conveyed to exceed six ounces, &c.

Sect. 2. "No such packet shall be conveyed under the provisions in this act unless the same shall exceed six ounces in weight, and shall be superscribed 're-issuable country bank notes only,' and certified by the signature of the agent or agents of such country bank, or one of them, in his or their own handwriting; and provided that the said packets shall contain no writing, communication, matter, or thing whatever."

Time of delivery at post-office regulated by postmaster-general.

Sect. 3. "Such packets shall be delivered to the postmaster general, or his deputy or deputies, at the General Post Office in London, at such hours in the day and under such regulations as the postmaster-general for the time being shall in his discretion from time to time appoint, and such packets shall also be delivered by the deputy or deputies of the postmaster-general in the country under such regulations and restrictions as the postmaster-general for the time being shall from time to time think fit to appoint."

Packets may be detained and examined.

Sect. 4. "It shall and may be lawful to and for his majesty's postmaster-general, and his deputy and deputies, in his or their discretion, to detain any such packet, and in the presence of the sender or senders thereof, or in his or their absence, in case of non-attendance after notice in writing left at his or their place of abode, requiring his or their attendance, to open, examine, and search the same, in order to discover whether any writing, communication, matter, or thing, other than re-issuable notes only, shall be contained therein; and in case upon examination thereof it shall be discovered that any such writing, communication, matter, or thing, other than re-issuable notes, shall be contained therein, then the sender or senders of such packets shall forfeit and pay the sum of 200*l.*, to be recovered, with full costs of suit, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of his majesty's courts of record in Great Britain, where no essoign, protection, privilege, or wager of law shall be admitted; and it shall and may be lawful to and for his majesty's postmaster-general, or his deputy or deputies, to retain such packet until such penalty shall be recovered and paid."

Finding anything other than re-issuable bank notes in packet, penalty, 200*l.*

Application of penalties.

Sect. 5. "One moiety of the pecuniary penalty hereby imposed shall be payable to his majesty, his heirs, and successors, and the other moiety to any person who shall inform and sue for the same, to be recovered, with full costs of suit, by action of debt, bill, plaint, or information in any of his majesty's courts of record in Great Britain, wherein no essoign, protection, or privilege, or wager of law, shall be admitted."

Money arising by rates to be carried to the consolidated fund.

Sect. 6. "The monies to arise by the several rates and duties as aforesaid, (except the monies which shall be necessary to defray such expense as shall be incurred in the management and collection of the same,) shall be paid into the receipt of the exchequer at Westminster, and carried to and made part of the consolidated fund of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland." 3. Postage of Letters and Packets.

Irish Letters.]—The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 21, and 2 Wil. IV. c. 15, are the principal acts regulating the duties of postage of letters between this kingdom and Ireland, and also the postage of letters in Ireland. Irish letters and postage.

Foreign Letters and Packets.]—The legislative enactments imposing the rates of postage of foreign letters, and for the conveyance of letters by packets, have become so numerous and complicated, that the insertion of them would to a great extent increase the bulk of this work, and they cannot be compressed into a small compass without rendering the detail of them but of little or no utility; and considering this, and that the subject involves scarcely any portion of magisterial duty, it is thought fit merely to refer to the principal legislative enactments, which are, as to foreign parts in general, the 37 Geo. III. c. 18; 39 Geo. III. c. 76; 41 Geo. III. c. 7; 52 Geo. III. c. 88; 54 Geo. III. c. 169; 2 Wil. IV. c. 15; 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 44; and 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 25. And as to particular foreign parts, the 46 Geo. III. c. 73 (Gibraltar and Malta); 48 Geo. III. c. 116 (Madeira and Brazil); 55 Geo. III. c. 153, 59 Geo. III. c. 111 (East Indies, the Mauritius, Ceylon, and Cape of Good Hope); 3 Geo. IV. c. 105 (Isle of Man); 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 6 (Buenos Ayres, and South America, St. Domingo, and Cuba); 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 44 (British Colonies). Foreign letters and packets.

IV. Postage relating to Soldiers or Seamen.

By the 35 Geo. III. c. 53, s. 7, no single letter sent by the post from any non-commissioned officer, seaman, or private, employed in the navy, army, artillery, or marines, shall, whilst so employed on his majesty's service, be chargeable with a higher rate of postage than 1*d.* for the conveyance of each letter; to be paid at the time of putting it into the post; provided that there be written upon the same, in the handwriting of and signed by the commanding officer for the time being, his name, and the ship, corps, regiment, or detachment to which such person belongs. Letters from private soldiers, seamen, &c.

Sect. 8. And no single letter sent to any such person, upon his own private concerns only, shall be charged with more than 1*d.* postage, to be paid upon delivery; but the same must be directed to such persons, and specify the ship, regiment, troop, corps, company, or detachment to which he belongs. And the deputy postmaster shall not deliver such letter to any person, except the person to whom the same shall be directed, or person appointed to receive the same by the commanding officer. Or to such persons.

By the 41 Geo. III. (U. K.) c. 7, s. 10, and 45 Geo. III. c. 11, s. 3, nothing in these acts shall alter the rates affixed by the 35 Geo. III. c. 53, s. 7, 8. 41 Geo. 3, (U. K.) c. 7.

The additional rates of the 52 Geo. III. c. 88, not to increase or alter the amount or manner of charging the rates of postage (as regulated by the 35 Geo. III. c. 53,) upon single letters to be sent by the post by or to seamen or privates employed in his majesty's navy, army, militia, fencible regiments, artillery, or marines, upon their own private concerns only, whilst such seamen and privates shall be employed in the public service. 45 Geo. 3, c. 11.

By the 46 Geo. III. c. 92 (a), s. 5, the 8th section of the 35 Geo. III.

(a) It having been found that the provisions of the statute for allowing soldiers to send and receive letters at a low rate of postage, were not yet perfectly understood, his late royal highness the Duke of York, the commander-in-chief, directed

4. *Postage of Soldiers and

c. 53, is repealed. And by s. 6 of that act, it is enacted, that seamen, whilst actually employed in his majesty's service, may send single letters on their own private concerns only, at the rate of 1*d.* each, to be paid upon putting them into the post-office: provided that the name of the writer and his class and description in the vessel to which he shall belong shall be superscribed; and also in the handwriting of, and signed by the officer at the time commanding the vessel, his name, and that of the vessel.

And by s. 7, such seamen may receive such letters free of postage, provided that 1*d.* for each shall be paid upon putting the same into the post-office; and the name of the vessel to which they belong shall be superscribed: provided also, that such letters shall be delivered only to the seaman to whom directed, or to persons appointed to receive them by writing under the hand of the commanding officer of the vessel; commissioned officers, or warrant officers, midshipmen, or masters' mates, not included in this section.

By s. 8 and 9, the same provisions are extended to every sergeant, corporal, drummer, trumpeter, fifer, and private soldier in his majesty's regular forces, militia, fencible regiments, artillery, or royal marines, within any part of his majesty's dominions.

And by the 55 Geo. III. c. 153, s. 25, the same privilege is extended on that the following instructions should be communicated to the army: as will appear in 3 Burn J., 24 ed. 769.

"Letters from Soldiers.—Upon all single letters sent from soldiers, the name of the soldier, his rank (whether sergeant, corporal, drummer, trumpeter, fifer, or private, and the regiment, corps, or detachment, to which he belongs), are to be superscribed; all such single letters to be indorsed by the officer in the actual command of the regiment, corps, or detachment; his name, rank, and the regiment, corps, or detachment commanded by him, are to be written in his own handwriting. It is to be understood, that this indulgence is limited to single letters only. One penny must be paid at the time the letter is put into the post-office, or such letter will be liable to the full rate of postage.

"The act of Parliament alluded to directs, that if any officer, having the command of a regiment, corps, or detachment, shall wilfully write his name on any letter which is not from a soldier, and upon private concerns only, such officer shall forfeit and pay the sum of 5*l.*; that a similar penalty shall attach to any person who shall obtain the signature of the officer commanding to letters not on private concerns of soldiers; and further, that if any officer, not having at the time the command of the regiment, corps, or detachment, shall write his name upon a soldier's letter, he shall forfeit the sum of 5*l.*

"Letters to Soldiers.—In all cases of single letters addressed to soldiers, the rank, whether sergeant, corporal, trumpeter, drummer, fifer, or private, and the regiment, corps, or detachment, to which they belong, must be specified. One penny is to be paid by the writer or other person, on putting the letter into a post-office; the letter will otherwise be liable to the full rate of postage. The letter cannot be delivered to any person except the soldier to whom such letter is directed, or to some one appointed to receive the same by an authority in writing under the hand of an officer having the command of the regiment, corps, or detachment, to which such soldier belongs.

"The commander-in-chief is desirous that soldiers shall have the full benefit intended by the legislature; but in order to guard against any abuse of privilege, his royal highness feels it necessary to repeat what was declared in the general orders of the 28th of February, 1814, and 14th of June, 1814, that the indulgence of the conveyance of letters to non-commissioned officers and soldiers, free of expense, is applicable exclusively to letters intended for the persons to whom they are addressed, and that no explanation which may be offered for an abuse of this privilege, which is attached exclusively to the said non-commissioned officers and soldiers, will be deemed satisfactory, or will in the least degree exculpate any officer who may directly or indirectly aid or connive at such deviation from the true intention and spirit in which this boon has been granted to soldiers, and that any non-commissioned officer or soldier who shall present to his officer a letter to be rendered free of postage, which is not his own, will be guilty of a fraud, for which it is his royal highness's express command that every offender shall be tried, and no alleviation of whatever punishment may be awarded must be expected.

"By command of his royal highness the commander-in-chief.

"HARRY CALVERT, Adjutant-General.

"Horse-Guards, 28th March, 1817."

the same conditions to the same class of men in the service of the East India Company.

By the 46 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 10, s. 8 & 9 of that act are not to extend to commissioned officers or warrant officers.

Sect. 11. Any such commander wilfully and knowingly writing his name upon any letter that is not from such seaman, &c. shall forfeit 5*l*.

Sect. 12. A like penalty is imposed upon persons, not being such commanders, writing their name upon any letter that it may be sent at a lower rate of postage than by law established.

Sect. 13. A like penalty is imposed upon those who knowingly address a letter to any such seaman, &c. which shall be intended for another person, or concerning the affairs of another person, for the purpose of evading legal postage.

Sect. 14. If any person shall procure any such seaman, &c. to obtain the signature of his commanding officer to any letter to be sent by post which shall not be on the private concerns of such seaman, &c.: or if any such seaman, &c. shall himself obtain such signature upon any letter not from such seaman, &c., and upon his own private concerns only, in order to avoid the payment of legal postage, he shall forfeit 5*l*.

Sect. 15. One moiety of the penalties imposed by this act to be to the use of his majesty, and the other to him who informs and sues, and may be recovered before one or more justices of the peace for the county, city, riding, town, or place, where the offence shall be committed, either upon the party's voluntary confession, or the oath of one witness (which oath the said justice of the peace may impose), and in default of payment the offender shall be committed to the house of correction for not exceeding one month, or until the penalty be sooner paid.

But the 4 Geo. IV. c. 81, s. 73, after reciting the 46 Geo. III. c. 92, s. 7, 9, and declaring it expedient to extend its provisions to seamen in the navy and to non-commissioned officers and soldiers whilst actually employed in his majesty's service in the East Indies and at the Island of St. Helena, and also to the non-commissioned officers and soldiers actually employed in the service of the East India Company, subject to such modifications as are hereinafter contained, increases the postage as therein mentioned.

V. Exemption from Postage, and Franking by Members of Parliament.

The 24 Geo. III. sess. 2, c. 37, s. 7, enacts that no letter or packet shall be exempted from postage except such as shall be sent to or from the king.

Letters sent to the king.

By the 42 Geo. III. c. 63, s. 1, members of parliament may send daily by post, within the United Kingdom, ten letters, and receive fifteen, not exceeding one ounce each, free from the duty of postage, on complying with certain regulations.

Sect. 2. Superscription of letters sent shall be of the handwriting of the member, with the name of the post town and date, &c.

Sect. 3. The surplus letters above the number permitted to pass free shall be charged with the postage in manner herein directed.

Sect. 4. The treasury and admiralty, secretaries of state, clerks of privy council, secretary at war, &c., may send and receive, within the United Kingdom, letters and packets free from postage.

Sect. 5. The clerk of parliaments, and certain clerks of the houses of peers and commons, may send and receive letters and packets in same manner.

And by sect. 6, so may also the treasurer and paymaster of the navy and inspector of seamen's wills.

By the 46 Geo. III. c. 142, s. 6, the surveyor-general of his majesty's woods enjoys an exemption.

By the 4 Geo. IV. c. 24, s. 6, clerks in the offices of the secretaries of state and post-office, being thereunto licensed by the secretaries or postmaster-general respectively, may continue to frank votes and newspapers as heretofore hath been used: provided the same be sent without covers, or in covers open at the sides.

By the 43 Geo. III. c. 119, s. 19, 20, the privilege of franking is extended to the accountant of Greenwich chest.

See as to Chelsea Hospital, 2 Wil. IV. c. 53, s. 34; as to the treasurer of the navy, 2 Wil. IV. c. 40, s. 33, and 2 & 3 Wil. IV. c. 106, s. 5.

By 42 Geo. III. c. 6, s. 9, persons entitled to send letters, &c. free, may, in case of bodily infirmity, authorize a person to write their name, &c. thereon, and on notice to the postmaster such letters shall go free.

By sect. 10, members and clerks of both houses may send votes and newspapers free, in covers open at the sides, &c.

Sect. 11. Persons heretofore authorized to send votes, &c., may continue to do so.

Sect. 12. Packets so sent may be inspected at the post-office, and if found to conceal any thing, &c., they shall be charged treble postage, &c. Unstamped newspapers shall be sent to stamp-office.

By the 54 Geo. III. c. 169, s. 17, it shall be lawful for every member of either house of parliament, to receive by the post any petition addressed to either house of parliament free from the duty of postage, so as the same be sent in a cover open at the sides, and that the same shall not exceed the weight of six ounces.

By the 44 Geo. III. c. 84, s. 1, the master-general of the ordnance, &c., may send and receive letters free from postage, as under 42 Geo. III. c. 63, s. 4.

Sect. 2. Ordnance, adjutant-general, quarter-master-general, and barrack-master-general, may appoint certain persons to indorse letters and packets to be sent free from their offices, &c.

Sect. 3, imposes a penalty for making indorsement on letters not concerning the business of the office.

By the 46 Geo. III. c. 61, s. 1, certain public officers are authorized to send and receive letters and packets free from postage.

Sect. 2. The treasury may authorize certain officers to send letters free from postage, without the name of the post-town, &c.

And by the 48 Geo. III. c. 90, letters and packets addressed to the commissioners of public accounts, or to the commissioners for barracks, or sent by the secretary to either board, shall be free of postage.

Sect. 2, imposes penalties on secretaries, &c., for sending any thing under cover not relating to the board.

Judge-advocate
general.

By the 50 Geo. III. c. 66, the judge-advocate general for the time being may send and receive letters and packets free from the duty of postage, in such manner and under such restrictions as are specified or imposed in relation to other public offices, in and by the 42 Geo. III. c. 63.

Assistant secretary of post-master-general.

By the 53 Geo. III. c. 13, the assistant secretary of the postmaster-general is permitted to frank.

By the 5 Geo. IV. c. 20, s. 11, from and after the passing of this act [April 12, 1824], the president, or first-named commissioner appointed by or in pursuance of the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 90, may send and receive letters and packets by the post free from the duty of postage, within the United Kingdom, under the restrictions specified in the 46 Geo. III. c. 61.

Irish letters.

The 2 Wil. IV. c. 15, contains many provisions for bettering the postage in Ireland, and extending the privilege of franking in that country to various officers.

Forging franks,
&c.

By the 42 Geo. III. c. 63, s. 14, "if any person whatsoever shall, from and after the 1st day of July, 1802, forge or counterfeit the handwriting of any person whatsoever in the superscription of any letter or packet to be sent by the post, in order to avoid the payment of the duty of postage, or shall forge, counterfeit, or alter, or shall procure to be forged, counterfeited, or altered, the date upon the superscription of any such letter or packet, or shall write and send by the post, or cause to be written and sent by the post, any letter or packet, the superscription or cover whereof shall be forged or counterfeited, or the date upon such superscription or cover altered, in order to avoid the payment of the duty of postage, knowing the same to be forged, counterfeited, or altered, every person so offending, and being thereof convicted in due form of law, shall be deemed guilty of felony, and shall be transported for seven years." PRÆMUNIRE is so called from a word in the writ, præmunire facias What it is.

præfatum A. B. quod tunc sit coram nobis, &c., where præmunire is used for præmonere, to warn the person to appear, as is directed in the 27 Edw. III.
 c. 1, hereafter following. (1 Inst. 129.)

Notwithstanding that præmunire is not within the letter of the commission Power of justices of the peace, yet inasmuch as it is against the peace of the king and of the of the peace.
 realm, any justice of the peace may, either on his own knowledge, or the complaint of others, cause any person to be apprehended for such offence, and may take the examination of the person so apprehended, and the information of all who can give material evidence against him, and put the same in writing, and bind over the witnesses to the King's Bench, or gaol delivery; and certify his proceedings to the same court to which he shall bind over such informers. (2 Haw. c. 8, s. 34; Hale's Sum. 168.)

By the 27 Edw. III. c. 1, called the Statute of Provisors, they who shall Impeaching judg-draw any out of the realm in plea whereof the cognizance pertaineth to the ments in the king's court, or which do sue in any other court, to defeat or impeach the king's court, a judgments given in the king's court, shall have a day, containing the space præmunire.
 of two months, by warning to be made to them, by the sheriffs or other officers, to appear to answer in their proper persons for the contempt; and if they come not at the said day, in their proper person, to be at law, they, their procurators, attorneys, executors, notaries, and maintainers, shall from that day forth be put out of the king's protection, and their lands, goods, and chattels forfeit to the king, and their bodies, wheresoever they may be found, shall be taken and imprisoned, and ransomed at the king's will. And upon the same a writ shall be made, to take their bodies, and to seize their lands, goods, and possessions, into the king's hands. And if it be returned that they be not found, they shall be put in exigent, and outlawed.

And by the 16 Rich. II. c. 5, commonly called the Statute of Præmunire, Suing out foreign and to which the several subsequent statutes do refer, both those who pursue, process, a præor cause to be pursued, in the court of Rome, or elsewhere, any processes or munire.
 instruments, or other things whatsoever, which touch the king, against him, his crown and regality, or his realm, and also those who shall bring, receive, notify, or execute them, and their faulters, and abettors, shall be out of the king's protection; and their lands and tenements, goods and chattels, forfeit to the king; and they shall be attached by their bodies, if they may be found, and brought before the king and his council, there to answer; or process shall be made against them by præmunire facias, in manner as is ordained in other statutes of provisors.

And in these two statutes, as above recited, are contained the pains and penalties of what is called the præmunire. They were intended chiefly to oppose the papal encroachments in this realm; but the penalties thereof, by several subsequent statutes, are extended to other cases, which have no relation to popery.

Out of the King's Protection.]—So odious was this offence formerly, that Persons guilty of a man who was attainted on the same might have been slain by any one a præmunire, without danger of law; because it was provided by law, that a man might might formerly do to him as to the king's enemy, and a man may lawfully kill an enemy; have been killed. and therefore by the 5 Eliz. c. 1, it is enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any one to slay any person attainted in or upon a præmunire. (1 Inst.
 130.)

But he is so far out of the king's protection, that he is disabled to bring Are disabled to an action for any injury whatsoever. And no one knowing him guilty, can bring an action. with safety give him aid, comfort, or relief. (Inst. 129, 130; 1 Hawk.
 c. 19, s. 47.)

- Præmunire.* And Mr. Hawkins says it has been questioned, whether he hath a right to demand surety of the peace. But Lambard and Dalton, which are the authorities he cites for it, incline to think that he hath such right. Lambard alleges for it the 5 Eliz. above mentioned; and Dalton asserts it without doubting. (Lamb. 80; Dalt. 272; 1 Haw. c. 60, s. 3.)
- Whether he may demand sureties.
- Lands and tenements.* Lands and Tenements forfeited.—Yet tenant in tail shall only forfeit lands during life; for albeit the statute enacteth that lands and tenements shall be forfeited, that must be understood of such an estate as he may lawfully forfeit, and that is during his own life. (1 Inst. 130.)
- Corruption of blood. Attainder in præmunire worketh no corruption of blood. (Inst. 391.)
- Prosecutions, however, for a præmunire are unheard of in our courts. The only instance of one is to be found in the State Trials; where the penalties of a præmunire were inflicted on some persons for refusing to take the oath of allegiance in the reign of Char. II. (See 6 Howell's St. Tr. 201, 210.)

Presentment.

- By grand jury. A PRESENTMENT may be that which the grand jury find and present to the court, without any indictment delivered to them; which is afterwards reduced into the form of an indictment, and in nothing else differs from an indictment.
- The presentment is drawn up in English by the jury, in a short note, for instructions to draw the indictment by; upon which the officer of the court must afterwards frame an indictment, before the party presented can be put to answer it; and it differs from an indictment, in that an indictment is drawn up at large, and brought engrossed to the grand jury to find. (2 Lill. Abr. 353; 2 Inst. 739.)
- The grand jury may present any offence within their own knowledge without a bill being sent before them at the instance of an individual prosecutor, if the offence be one of which they can legally take cognizance. (2 Hawk. c. 2, s. 51.)
- Form of presentment. When a presentment is regularly made, the form of it, in describing the subject matter of the offence, is the same as in an indictment, for which see "Indictment," Vol. III.
- By constables, &c. There are other presentments of churchwardens and constables, which may be seen under their proper titles.
- It seems from the cases of R. v. Bridgewater and Taunton Canal Company, 7 B. & Cres. 514, 1 M. & R. M. C. 81, S. C., that presentments of constables are of no validity, unless the constable goes before the grand jury, and makes oath to the truth of the facts he presents.
- Much annoyance and expense having arisen from presentments by constables, the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 38, was passed, whereby, after reciting that "in some parts of England the petty constables of the several parishes have, from a very remote period, been required to appear at a petty session held previously to every general gaol delivery and quarter session for the county in which such parishes are situate, and to make and sign before the justice or justices of the peace attending such petty session certain presentments of various indictable and other offences: and whereas the said presentments are attended with considerable expense and loss of time, and have, in consequence of modern legislative provisions, become useless and improper;" it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, no petty constable shall be required at any petty session or elsewhere to make, nor shall any high constable be required at any general gaol delivery, great session, or general or quarter session of the peace in England, to deliver any presentment respecting popish recusants, persons absenting themselves from their parish church or any other place of religious worship licensed by authority, rogues and vagabonds, inmates, retailers of brandy, ingrossers, forestallers, reggraters, profane swearers and cursers, servants out of service, felonies and robberies, unlicensed or disorderly alehouses, false weights and measures, highways and bridges, riots, routs, and unlawful assemblies, and whether the poor are well provided for, and the constables are legally chosen and sworn."

The 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 50, s. 99, abolishes presentments for the non-repair of highways or turnpike roads.

The following is a form of presentment by a grand jury:—

" —shire } Be it remembered, that at a general quarter session of the peace on the day of , in the said year of the reign of, &c., before grand jury.

nions, justices of our said lord the king, assigned, &c., it is presented by the oath men of the said county, then and there sworn and charged to inquire for our said lord the king, and the body of the said county, as followeth; that is to say, such responsibility hath of late been in a great degree eluded by the secret printing and publishing of such seditious, immoral, and irreligious papers or writings as aforesaid, and it is therefore highly important to the public peace that it should in future be known by whom any such papers shall be printed; it is enacted, "that, from and after the expiration of forty days from the day of passing this act, any person having any printing-press, or types for printing, shall cause a notice (a) thereof, signed in the presence of, and attested by one witness, to be delivered to the clerk of the peace acting for the county, stewartry, riding, division, city, borough, town, or place, where the same shall be intended to be used, or his deputy, according to the form prescribed in the schedule hereunto annexed; and such clerk of the peace, or deputy respectively, shall, and he is hereby authorized and required to grant a certificate (b) in the form prescribed in the schedule hereunto annexed, for which such clerk of the peace, or deputy, shall receive the fee of one shilling, and no more, and such clerk of the peace, or his deputy, shall file such notice, and transmit an attested copy thereof, to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state; and every person who, not having delivered such notice, and obtained such certificate as aforesaid, shall, from and after the expiration of forty days next after the passing of this act, keep or use any printing-press or types for printing, or having delivered such notice, and obtained such certificate as aforesaid, shall use any printing-press or types for printing, in any other place than the place expressed in such notice, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 24. "Nothing herein contained shall extend to his majesty's printers for England and Scotland, or to the public presses belonging to the Universities of Oxford and Cambridge respectively."

Sect. 25. "From and after the expiration of forty days after the passing of this act, every person carrying on the business of a letter-founder, or maker or seller of types for printing, or of printing-presses, shall cause notice of his or her intention to carry on such business to be delivered to the clerk of the peace of the county, stewartry, riding, division, city, borough, town, or place, where such person shall propose to carry on such business, or his deputy, in the form prescribed in the schedule to this act annexed (c); and such clerk of the peace, or his deputy, shall, and is hereby authorized and required thereupon to grant a certificate in the form (d) also prescribed in the said schedule, for which such clerk of the peace, or his deputy, shall receive a fee of 1*s*. and no more, and shall file such notice, and transmit an attested copy thereof to one of his majesty's principal secretaries of state; and every person who shall, after the expiration of the said forty days, carry on such business, or make or sell any type for printing, or printing press, without having given such notice, and obtained such certificate, shall forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 26. "Every person who shall sell types for printing, or printing-presses, as aforesaid, shall keep a fair account in writing of all persons to whom any such types or presses shall be sold, and shall produce such accounts to any justice of the peace who shall require the same; and if such person shall neglect to keep such account, or shall refuse to produce the same to any such justice, on demand in writing to inspect the same, such person shall forfeit and lose, for such offence, the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 27. "From and after the expiration of forty days after the passing of this act, every person who shall print any paper or book whatsoever, which shall be meant or intended to be published or dispersed, whether the same shall be sold or given away, shall print upon the front of every such

Sect. 28. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to any papers printed by the authority and for the use of either house of Parliament."

Not to extend to papers printed by authority of Parliament.

Sect. 29. "Every person, who, from and after the expiration of forty days after the passing of this act, shall print any paper for hire, reward, gain, or profit, shall carefully preserve and keep one copy (at least) of every paper so printed by him or her, on which he or she shall write, or cause to be written or printed, in fair and legible characters, the name and place of abode of the person or persons by whom he or she shall be employed to print the same; and every person printing any paper for hire, reward, gain, or profit, who shall omit or neglect to write, or cause to be written or printed, as aforesaid, the name and place of his or her employer on one of such printed papers, or to keep or preserve the same for the space of six calendar months next after the printing thereof, or to produce and show the same to any justice of the peace, who, within the said space of six calendar months, shall require to see the same, shall, for every such omission, neglect, or refusal, forfeit and lose the sum of 20*l*."

Printers shall keep a copy of every paper they print, and write thereon the name and abode of their employer.

Penalty of 20*l*. for neglect, or refusing to produce the copy within six months.

Sect. 30. "It shall be lawful for any person, to whom, or in whose presence, any printed paper, not having the name and place of abode of any person printed thereon, in manner hereinbefore directed, or having a fictitious or false name or place of abode printed thereon, shall be sold, or offered for sale, or shall be delivered gratis, or offered so to be, or shall be pasted, fixed, or left in any public place, or in any other manner exposed to public view, to seize and detain the persons so selling or offering to sell, or delivering or offering to deliver, or pasting, fixing, or leaving, in any public place, or in any other manner exposing to public view, any such printed paper, as aforesaid, and forthwith to take and convey him or her before some justice of the peace for the county, stewartry, riding, division, city, borough, town, or place, where such person shall be seized, or to deliver him or her to some constable, or other peace officer, to be taken and conveyed before such justice, as aforesaid, to the intent that such justice may hear and determine whether such person hath been guilty of any offence against this act."

Persons selling, &c., any paper, without the name and abode of the printer, may be taken before a justice, to determine whether they have offended against this act.

Sect. 31. "Nothing herein contained shall extend to the impression of any engraving, or to the printing by letter-press, of the name, or the name and address, or business or profession, of any person, and the articles in which he deals, or to any papers for the sale of estates or goods by auction, or otherwise."

Not to extend to impressions of engravings, or the printing names and addresses, &c.;

Sect. 32. Sect. 34. "No person shall be prosecuted or sued for any penalty imposed by this act, unless such prosecution shall be commenced, or such action shall be brought, within three calendar months next after such penalty shall have been incurred."

Sect. 35. "Any pecuniary penalty imposed by this act, exceeding the sum of 20*l.*, may be sued for and recovered, by any person who will sue for the same, by action of debt, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, if such penalty shall have been incurred in England or Wales, or the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and in his majesty's Court of Exchequer in Scotland, if such penalty shall have been incurred in Scotland; in which action it shall be sufficient to declare or allege that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of 20*l.* (being the sum demanded by such action), being forfeited by an act made and passed in the thirty-ninth year of the reign of his majesty King George III., intituled, 'An Act' [here set forth the title of the act] (a); and the plaintiff, if he shall recover in any such action, shall have his full costs: and any pecuniary penalty imposed by this act, and not exceeding the sum of 20*l.*, and for the recovery whereof no provision is hereinbefore contained, shall and may be recovered before any justice or justices of the peace for the county, stewartry, riding, division, city, town, or place, in which the same shall be incurred, or the person having incurred the same shall happen to be, in a summary way; and, in case such last-mentioned penalty shall not forthwith be paid, such justice or justices shall, by warrant under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, and directed to any constable or other peace officer, cause the same to be levied

(a) See the title of the act, ante, p. 289. Fleming v. Bailey, 5 East, 313. The declaration, which was framed on the above 39 Geo. III. c. 79, stated that the defendant was indebted to the plaintiff in 60*l.*; and then contained three counts, in each of which the plaintiff went for a penalty of 20*l.*, under the statute, for printing a certain paper meant to be published and dispersed, and omitting the printer's name and place of abode, as required by s. 27. After verdict for the plaintiff, Lawes moved in arrest of judgment, that no action lay by a common informer to recover penalties not exceeding 20*l.* under this statute; and, in support of the motion, s. 35 was cited. Birch showed cause, and, amongst other things, contended, that the jurisdiction of the superior courts could not be ousted without express words, or by necessary implication; and that here no such words or necessity existed: he cited Hill v. Dechair, Sty. 381; Shipman v. Henbest, 4 T. R.

109; R. v. Morley, 2 Burr. 1040; Cates q. t. v. Knight, 3 T. R. 442, and 2 Haw. c. 26, s. 26, 30. But per Lord Ellenborough, C. J., a common informer can have no right to sue for any penalty, but where power is given to him for that purpose by the statute. Now, the statute in question only says, that a common informer may sue in any court of record for any pecuniary penalty imposed by the act not exceeding 20*l.* The penalty given for this offence, each of which must be taken by itself, and cannot be reckoned accumulatively, does not exceed 20*l.*; and, therefore, it is not within the provisions of the 35th clause, which give an action. And the sense of that clause requires that the form of the declaration there afterwards given should be read the same as if the sum to be recovered were left in blank; for how otherwise can the penalty of 100*l.* given by the 15th section be recovered? Per Cur.—Judgment arrested.

Sect. 36. "All pecuniary penalties and forfeitures imposed by this act shall, when recovered, either by action in any court, or in a summary way before any justice, be applied and disposed of in manner hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, one moiety thereof to the plaintiff in any such action, or the informer before any justice, and the other moiety thereof to his majesty, his heirs and successors."

Application of penalties.

Sect. 37. "Every action and suit which shall be brought or commenced against any justice or justices of the peace, constable, peace officer, or other person or persons, for anything done or acted in pursuance of this act, shall be commenced within three calendar months next after the fact committed, and not afterwards; and the venue in every such action or suit shall be laid in the proper county where the fact was committed, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in every such action or suit shall and may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon; and if such action or suit shall be brought or commenced after the time limited for bringing the same, or the venue shall be laid in any other place than as aforesaid, then the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant or defendants; and, in such case, or if the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant or defendants upon the merits, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuit, or discontinue his, her, or their action after appearance, or if, upon demurrer, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall have double costs; which he or they shall and may recover in such and the same manner as any defendant can by law in other cases." By the 51 Geo. III. c. 65, to explain and amend the 39 Geo. III. c. 79, so far as respects certain penalties on printers and publishers:

51 Geo. 3, c. 65.

Sect. 1, reciting the 39 Geo. III. c. 79, s. 27, 35, enacts, "that nothing in the twenty-seventh section of the said act contained shall extend to make any person or persons offending against the same liable to more than twenty-five forfeitures or penalties for printing or publishing, or dispersing, or assisting in publishing or dispersing, any number of copies of one and the same paper or book, contrary to the said section of the said act."

Printing papers or books contrary to 39 Geo. 3, c. 79.

Sect. 2. "If any justice or other magistrate, before whom any person shall be convicted of any offence or offences against the provisions of the before-mentioned act, shall see cause to mitigate such penalty or penalties, it shall be lawful for such justice or other magistrate to mitigate or lessen the same to any sum not less than 5*l.*, over and above all reasonable costs and charges expended or incurred in the prosecution."

Justices may mitigate penalties.

Sect. 3, reciting that "doubts have arisen whether the provisions contained in the said act may not be considered as extending to notes and post bills of the governor and company of the Bank of England, and to bills of exchange, promissory notes, bonds, and other securities for payment of money, bills of lading, policies of insurance, letters of attorney, transfers or assignments of public stocks, funds, and other securities, and to dividend warrants, receipts for money or goods, deeds, or other instruments, proceedings in the courts of law and equity, and other inferior courts, warrants, orders, and other papers, printed by the authority of any public board or public officer, in the execution of the duties of their respective offices, many of which securities, instruments, proceedings, and other matters aforesaid, are usually wholly or in part printed;" enacts, "that nothing in the said recited act or in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to require the name and residence of the printer to be printed upon any such bank note, bank post bill, bill of exchange, or promissory note, or upon any bond or other security for payment of money, or upon any bill of lading, policy of insurance, letter of attorney, deed, or agreement, or upon any transfer or assignment of any public stocks, funds, or other securities, or upon any transfer or assignment of the stocks of any public corporation or company, authorized or sanctioned by act of parliament, or upon any dividend warrant of or for any such public or other stocks, funds, or securities, or upon any receipt for money or goods, or upon any proceedings in any court of law or equity, or in any inferior court, warrant, order, or other papers, printed by the authority of any public board or public officer, in the execution of the duties of their respective offices, notwithstanding the whole or any part of the said several securities, instruments, proceedings, matters, and things aforesaid, shall have been or shall be printed; any thing herein or in the said recited act contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding."

Appeal.

Sect. 4. "If any person or persons shall think himself, herself, or themselves aggrieved by any conviction, judgment, or determination of any justice or justices, relating to any matter or thing in the before-mentioned act contained, then and in that case he, she, or they may appeal to the justices of the peace at the general quarter sessions to be holden in and for the county, city, or place where such conviction, judgment, or determination shall have been made, next after the expiration of twenty days from the making thereof, first giving six days' notice of such appeal to the person or persons prosecuting for such penalty or penalties; and the said justices shall hear and determine the said appeal at such general quarter sessions, or, if they think proper, adjourn the hearing thereof until the next general quarter sessions, to be holden for such county, town, or place; and the said justices may, in like manner, if they see cause, mitigate any penalty or penalties, and may order any money to be returned which shall have been paid or levied under any conviction as aforesaid, and may also order and award such costs to be paid by either party to the other, as they shall think and judge reasonable."

Prison-Breaking.

FOR the law relative to escapes where there is no actual breaking of the prison, see "Escape," Vol. II., and as to Rescues, see "Rescue," post.

At common law.

It seemeth that, at the common law, all prison-breaches were felonies, if the party were lawfully in custody for any cause whatsoever. (2 Haw. c. 18, s. 1.)

By statute.

But by the following statute, which is called the statute de frangentibus prisonam, the severity of the common law is moderated; in the explication of which statute will be contained the whole learning relating to this subject.

The statute is this: concerning prisoners which break prison, the king willeth and commandeth that none that breaketh prison shall have judgment of life or member for breaking of prison only, except the cause for which he was taken and imprisoned did require such judgment, if he had been convicted thereupon, according to the law and custom of the realm.

Prison broken by a stranger.

Concerning Prisoners which break.]—Therefore, if the prison be broken by a stranger, and not by the prisoner, or by his procurement, this is no felony in the prisoner. Hale's Sum. 108.

What shall be deemed a prison.

Which break Prison.]—It seems clear that any place whatsoever wherein a person under a lawful arrest for a supposed crime is restrained of his liberty, whether in the stocks, or street, or in the common gaol, or the house of a constable or private person, is properly a prison within this statute; for imprisonment is nothing else but a restraint of liberty. (2 Haw. c. 18, s. 4.)

(a) The act gives this form.

And therefore this extendeth as well to a prison in law as a prison in deed. (2 Inst. 589).

But there must be an actual breaking; for if the door be open and he goes out, it is not felony, but a misdemeanor only. (2 Inst. 589; 2 Haw. c. 18, s. 9.) Must be an actual breaking.

But if the prison be fired without the privity of the prisoner, he may lawfully break, to save his life. (Hale's Sum. 108.)

Also, it seems that no breach of prison will amount to felony, unless the prisoner escape. (2 Haw. c. 18, s. 12.)

But there need not, it seems, be any actual intent to break, to constitute the offence. Where, therefore, it appeared that the prisoner made his escape from the house of correction, by tying two ladders together and placing them against the wall of the yard, and, in making his escape, had thrown down some of the bricks of the wall, this was held to be a sufficient breaking. (R. v. Haswell, R. & R. 458.)

That none that breaketh Prison shall have Judgment of Life or Member.] How punishable.
—That is, shall be guilty of felony. But, nevertheless, he is still punishable as for a high misprision, by fine and imprisonment; for it cannot be thought the meaning of the statute, in ordaining that such offences shall not be punished as capital ones, to intend that they shall not be punished at all. (2 Haw. c. 18, s. 21.)

Except the Cause for which he was taken and imprisoned did require such Judgment.]—This is to be intended of a lawful cause; and therefore false imprisonment is not within this act. (2 Inst. 590.) Party must be lawfully in prison.

Imprisonment is a restraint of a man's liberty under the custody of another, by lawful warrant, in deed or in law. Lawful warrant is either when the offence appeareth by matter of record, as when the party is taken upon an indictment; or when it doth not appear by matter of record, as when a felony is done, and the offender, by a lawful mittimus, is committed to gaol for the same: but between these two cases there is a great diversity; for in the first case, whether any felony were committed or no, if the offender be taken by force of a capias, the warrant is lawful, and if he break prison, it is felony, although no felony were committed; but in the other case, if no felony be done at all, and yet he be committed to prison for a supposed felony, and break prison, this is no felony, for there is no cause. (2 Inst. 590.) Imprisonment, what.

So that the cause must be just and not feigned, for things feigned require no judgment: thus, if a man give another a mortal wound, for which he is committed to prison, and breaketh prison, and the other dieth of the wound within the year, this death hath relation to the stroke; but because relations are but fictions in law, and fictions are not here intended, this prison-breaking is not felony. (2 Inst. 591; Cole's case, Plowd. Com. 401.) For what.

So that the offence for which the party was imprisoned must be a capital one at the time of the offence, and not become such by a matter subsequent. (2 Haw. c. 18, s. 14.)

And the cause must be expressed in the mittimus, although not so certainly as in an indictment; yet with such a convenient certainty as it may appear judicially that the offence requireth such judgment; as, not for felony generally, but for felony in stealing such a horse, and the like. (2 Inst. 591.)

But if the offence for which the party is committed be supposed in the mittimus to be of such a nature as requires a capital judgment; yet if, in the event, it be found to be of an inferior nature, and not to require such a judgment, it seems difficult to maintain that the breaking of the prison, on a commitment for it, can be felony; for the words of the statute are, except the cause for which he was taken and imprisoned did require such judgment; and here it appears that the offence, which is the cause of his imprisonment, doth not require such a judgment. (2 Haw. c. 18, s. 15.)

Prison-Breaking.

Suspicion, &c.

But if a man be committed by lawful warrant for suspicion of felony done, if he break prison he may be indicted for that escape, albeit the commitment be for suspicion of felony, and yet no judgment can be given against him for suspicion, but for the felony itself, whereof he is suspected. (2 Inst. 592.)

And an indictment that such a person feloniously broke the prison, generally, is not good; but it ought to rehearse the specialty of the matter, that he, being imprisoned for such or such felony, broke the prison. (2 Inst. 591.)

But if the party be only arrested for and in his mittimus charged with a crime which doth not require judgment of life or member, as petit larceny, or homicide by self-defence or by misadventure, and the offence be in truth no greater than the mittimus doth suppose it to be, it is clear, from the express words of the statute, that the breaking of the prison cannot amount to felony. (2 Haw. c. 18, s. 15.)

But if a felony be made by a subsequent statute, and an offender is committed thereupon, if he break prison, it is felony; for, since all breaches of prison were felonies by the common law, which is restrained by this statute in respect only of imprisonment for offences not capital, when an offence becomes capital, it is as much out of the benefit of the statute as if it had always been so. (Hale's Sum. 108.)

Also, it is said that the party may be arraigned for prison-breaking, before he be convicted of the crime for which he was imprisoned; for that it is not material whether he were guilty of such crime or not; for the words of the statute are, for which he was taken and imprisoned. (2 Haw. c. 18, s. 16.)

But if he be first indicted and acquitted of the principal felony, he shall not be indicted for the breach of prison afterwards; for it being clear that he was not guilty of the felony, he is in law as a person never committed for felony, and so his breach of prison is no felony. (1 Hale, 612.)

Voluntary or negligent gaoler.

But the gaoler shall not be punished as a felon for the party's breach of prison, unless he voluntarily consented to it: but it seems to be a negligent escape in the gaoler, for which he may be punished by fine and imprisonment, because there wanted either that due strength in the gaol, or that due vigilance in the gaoler or his officers, that should have prevented it; and if gaolers might not be punished for this as a negligent escape, they would be careless either to secure their prisoners or to retake them that escape. (1 Hale, 601.)

And therefore if a criminal, endeavouring to break the gaol, assault his gaoler, he may be lawfully killed by him in the affray. (1 Haw. c. 28, s. 13.)

The 4 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 43, 44, contains provisions relating to the venue, trial, and evidence in prosecutions for prison-breaking and escapes: see them under title "Escape," Vol. II. p. 8, 11.

Escape of offenders convicted by courts-martial, and having a conditional pardon.

By the Mutiny Act, it is usually enacted, that if any offender, under sentence of death by a court-martial as aforesaid, shall obtain his majesty's conditional pardon as aforesaid, all and every the laws now in force touching the escape of felons under sentence of death, shall apply to such offender and to all persons aiding, abetting, or assisting in any escape or intended escape of any such offender, or contriving any such escape, from the time when such order shall be made by such justice or baron as aforesaid, and during all the several proceedings which shall be had for the purposes aforesaid.

Prisoners of War.

Aiding prisoners of war to escape.

BY the 52 Geo. III. c. 156, "every person who shall, from and after the passing of this act, knowingly and wilfully aid or assist any alien enemy of his majesty, being a prisoner of war in his majesty's dominions, whether such prisoner shall be confined as a prisoner of war in any prison or other place of confinement, or shall be suffered to be at large in his majesty's dominions, or any part thereof, on his parole, to escape from such prison or other place of confinement, or from his majesty's dominions, if at large upon parole, shall, upon being convicted thereof, be adjudged guilty of felony, and be liable to be transported as a felon for life, or for such term of fourteen or seven years, as the court before whom such person shall be convicted shall adjudge."

Process prior to Indictment, not referrible to Appearance in Courts of Record.

I. To compel an Appearance in a Court of Record (a).

By the commission of the peace, the justices in sessions have power to make and continue processes upon indictments against the persons indicted, until they can be taken, surrender themselves, or be outlawed. Process by the commission.

And by the 1 Edw. IV. c. 2, indictments and presentments taken in the sheriff's tourn shall be delivered to the next sessions, who may award process thereupon in like form as if they had been taken before themselves. Process on indictments taken in the tourn.

And the law also in several cases in express words directs process to be made by justices out of sessions; and in other cases by necessary implication; and where a statute doth give power to justices out of sessions to inquire, hear, and determine, there they may make process to cause the party to come and answer, otherwise they cannot proceed to hear and determine; and this may be either before or after presentment or indictment, as the several statutes do require: before presentment or indictment, it is called a warrant; after presentment or indictment, it is properly called process. (Dalt. c. 193, p. 471.) Process by justices out of sessions.

Commonly, an indictment, being but an accusation against a man, is of no force but only to put him to answer unto it. And hereof all process hath the name, because it proceedeth, or goeth out, upon former matter, either original or judicial. (Lamb. 519.) Process, what,

And it seemeth plain, from the nature of the thing, that there can be no need of process where the defendant is present in court, but only where he is absent. (2 Haw. c. 27; 1 Chit. C. L. 338.) No need of, if party be present,

(a) As to this kind of process in general, see 1 Chit. C. L. 337 to 347; Com. Dig. Process; also, Mr. Gude's work on the subject.

To be in the king's name.

The process ought to be in the name of the king. And if it issue from the King's Bench, it ought to be under the teste of the chief justice. If it issue from any other court, there seems to be the same reason that it ought to be under the teste of the first in the commission. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 8 ; 1 Chit. C. L. 339.)

When returnable.

Upon an indictment in sessions, (for a misdemeanor, not being a felony,) there must be fifteen days between the teste and return of the venire ; but if the entry be by consent of parties, the venire may be returnable immediatè, and the trial be the same day. (Anon. 3 Salk. 371.)

Process for felony.

Process on an indictment for felony, by the 25 Edw. III. c. 14, is two capiases, and then an exigent. (Hale's Sum. 209 ; 2 Haw. c. 27, s. 115.)

Process for misdemeanors, &c.

The ordinary processes upon all indictments of trespass against the peace, or of other offences against penal statutes, not being felony, or a greater offence, are as follow : first, if the offender be absent, a venire facias, which is but in the nature of a summons to cause the party to appear, shall be awarded, except where other process is directed by some statute. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 9.)

If it appear by the return of such venire, that the party hath lands in the county, whereby he may be distrained, the distress infinite shall be awarded from time to time till he do appear, and by force thereof he shall forfeit on every default so much as the sheriff shall return upon him in issues. But if a nil be returned on such a venire, then three capiases, that is, a capias, alias, and pluries, shall issue. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 10.)

Where the inhabitants of a parish are indicted or presented, the process is, first, a venire, then a distringas.

And see further, as to the different kinds of process, 1 Chit. C. L. 338.

Process on informations.

By the 21 Jac. I. c. 4, by which all popular actions on penal statutes are restrained to their proper counties, the like process in every popular action, bill, plaint, suit, or information on a penal statute, before the quarter sessions (or higher courts), shall be awarded as in an action of trespass vi et armis, at the common law.

And, consequently, the process in all such suits must be by attachment or pone per vadios ; and afterwards by distress infinite, where by the return the party appears to be sufficient, otherwise by capias. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 13.)

When any person is charged with any offence (not being treason or felony) for which he may be prosecuted by indictment or information in K. B ; upon affidavit thereof, or on certificate of indictment, &c., being filed, any judge of the court may issue his warrant to apprehend the party ; who shall be thereupon held to bail to answer the charge, or on failure of bail shall be committed : and if any person in custody for want of bail shall not plead in eight

The 48 Geo. III. c. 58, s. 1, enacts, " That whenever any person shall be charged with any offence for which he or she may be prosecuted by indictment or information in his majesty's court of King's Bench, not being treason or felony, and the same shall be made appear to any judge of the same court by affidavit, or by certificate of an indictment or information being filed against such person in the said court for such offence, it shall and may be lawful for such judge to issue his warrant under his hand and seal, and thereby to cause such person to be apprehended and brought before him or some other judge of the same court, or before some one of his majesty's justices of the peace, in order to his or her being bound to the king's majesty with two sufficient sureties, in such sum as in the said warrant shall be expressed, with condition to appear in the said court at the time mentioned in such warrant, and to answer to all and singular indictments or informations for any such offence ; and in case any such person shall neglect or refuse to become bound as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for such judge or justice respectively to commit such person to the common gaol of the county, city, or place where the offence shall have been committed, or where he or she shall have been apprehended, there to remain until he or she shall become bound as aforesaid, or shall be discharged by order of the said court in term time, or of one of the judges of the said court in vacation ; and the recognizance to be thereupon taken shall be returned and filed in the said court, and shall continue in force until such person shall have been acquitted of such offence, or in case of conviction, shall have received judgment for the same, unless sooner ordered by the said court to be discharged ; and that where any person, either by virtue of such warrant of commitment as aforesaid, or by virtue of any writ of capias ad respondendum issued out of the said court, is now detained, or shall hereafter be committed to and detained in any gaol for want of bail, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor of such indictment or information to cause a copy thereof to be delivered to such person, or to the gaoler, keeper, or turnkey of the gaol wherein such person is or shall be so detained, with a notice thereon indorsed, that unless such person shall, within eight days from the time of such delivery of a copy of the indictment or information aforesaid, cause an appearance, and also a plea of demurrer to be entered in the said court to such indictment or information, an appearance and the plea of not guilty will be entered thereto in the name of such person; and in case he or she shall thereupon, for the said space of eight days after such delivery of a copy of the indictment or information as aforesaid, neglect to cause an appearance, and also a plea or demurrer to be entered in the said court to such indictment or information, it shall be lawful for the prosecutor of such indictment or information, upon an affidavit being made and filed in the said court, of the delivery of a copy of such indictment or information, with such notice indorsed thereon as aforesaid, to such person, or to such gaoler, keeper, or turnkey, as the case may be, which affidavit may be made before any judge or commissioner of the said court authorized to take affidavits in the said court, to cause an appearance and the plea of not guilty to be entered in the said court to such indictment or information, for such person, and such proceedings shall be had thereupon as if the defendant in such indictment or information had appeared and pleaded not guilty, according to the usual course of the said court; and that if, upon the trial of such indictment or information, any defendant so committed and detained as aforesaid, shall be acquitted of all the offences therein charged upon him or her, it shall be lawful for the judge before whom such trial shall be had, although he may not be one of the judges of the said court of King's Bench, to order that such defendant shall be forthwith discharged out of custody as to his or her commitment as aforesaid, and such defendant shall be thereupon discharged accordingly."

days after copy of indictment, &c., and notice to plead, are delivered at the gaol, the prosecutor may enter the plea of not guilty, and proceed to trial.

Party acquitted may be discharged.

Bench warrants.

It appears now to be the established practice, independently of this statute, upon an indictment found for a misdemeanor at the assizes or sessions, to issue a bench warrant, signed by a judge or justices of the peace, or two of the latter, to apprehend the defendant; and, when the assizes and sessions are over, the clerk of assize, and clerk of the peace respectively, will, on the application of the prosecutor, grant a certificate of the indictment having been found, upon which any judge of the King's Bench, or justice of the peace of the proper county, will grant a warrant for apprehending the defendant, and will oblige him to enter into recognizance to answer, or for want of sureties will commit him. See 1 Chit. C. L. 339, and the various authorities there cited.

If a defendant appear to an indictment of felony, and afterwards before issue joined make an escape either from his bail or from prison, the common capias alias, and pluries, shall be awarded against him, unless there had been an exigent before, in which case a new exigent shall be awarded. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 19).

Process on an escape.

By the 3 Edw. I. c. 14, the exigent shall not be awarded against accessories until the principals shall be attainted. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 130.)

Process against accessories.

By the 8 Hen. VI. c. 10, on indictments for treason, felony, or trespass against persons dwelling in other counties than where the indictment is taken, before any exigent awarded, presently after the first writ of capias awarded and returned, another writ of capias shall be awarded, directed to the sheriff of the county whereof the person indicted was supposed to be conversant by the same indictment, returnable before the same justices or others before whom he is indicted, at a certain day continuing the space of three months from the date of the said last writ, where the counties are holden from month to month; and where they are holden from six weeks to six weeks he shall have four months, until the return of the same writ; by which writ of second capias it shall be commanded to the same sheriff to take the person indicted by his body, if he can be found within his bailiwick; and if he cannot be found within his bailiwick, that the said sheriff shall make proclamation in two counties before the return of the same writ, that he which is so indicted shall appear before the said justices or others in the county, liberty, or franchise where he is indicted, at the day contained in the said last writ of capias, to answer to the king of the felony, treason, or trespass, whereof he is so indicted; after which second writ of capias so served and returned, if he which is so indicted come not at the day of the same writ of capias returned, the exigent shall be awarded. And every exigent and outlawry otherwise awarded or pronounced shall be void.

And if any such indictment shall be removed by certiorari, then before the exigent awarded, presently after such first capias returned, another writ of capias shall be directed as before, returnable before the king in his bench.

But this shall not extend to indictments taken in the county of Chester.

Also, if any person be indicted of felony or treason, and at the time of the same felony or treason supposed was conversant within the county whereof the indictment maketh mention, the like process shall be made against the person so indicted, as hath formerly been used; that is, without sending process into the other county.

But every person indicted in the form aforesaid, after he is duly acquit by verdict, shall have an action upon his case, against the procurer of such indictment; and if such procurer be attainted thereof, the plaintiff shall recover treble damages. Which seemeth to be upon account of the distance at which he is supposed to live from the place where he is indicted, and consequently his extraordinary trouble in that behalf.

Dwelling in other Counties.]—If the defendant be named of B. and late of C., there is no need of any capias to the sheriff of the county where C. lies, because it appears that the defendant is at present conversant at B. But if a defendant be named of no certain place at present, but only late of B. and late of C. and late of D., being all of them in counties different from that wherein the prosecution is commenced, a capias shall go to the sheriff of every one of those counties. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 126.)

County of Chester.]—But it may be awarded into the counties palatine of Lancaster and Durham; and it seems that it shall be directed to and returned by the chancellor of Lancaster or bishop of Durham; and it hath been said that, if he will not return it, the exigent may be awarded as well as if he had returned it; because the court (of the sessions at least) cannot compel him to return it, and the prosecution might be unreasonably delayed, if the proceedings were to be stayed till he should return it. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 125; Hale's Sum. 209, 210.)

Mr. Marrow saith that, by the equity of this statute, if a person indicted in one county is imprisoned in another, the justices may award a habeas corpus to remove him before themselves. (Lamb. 526).

Concerning the execution of the process, it is laid down as a general rule, that wherever the king is a party to the suit (as he certainly is to all informations and indictments), the process ought to be executed by the sheriff himself, and not by the bailiff of any franchise, whether it have the clause non omittas or not, and whether the defendant be within a franchise or in the county at large; for the king's prerogative shall be preferred to any franchise; but it is said, that this is to be intended only where in the grant of the franchise no mention is made of causes to which the king is a party; (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 17;) and see further as to the execution of process, post, "Warrant." doors.

And if the party be in a house, if the doors be shut, and the sheriff (having given notice of his process) demand admittance, and the doors be not opened, he may break open the doors, and enter to take the offender. (2 Hale, 202; Appearance, and see, further, post, "Warrant.")

In the execution of process against any man in the case of a misdemeanor, it is necessary to demand admittance, before the breaking of the outer door of the house can be legally justified; but quære, if it be so in the case of felony.

Launock v. Brown, 2 B. & Ald. 592. Trespass for breaking and entering plaintiff's dwelling-house and seizing a gun. Plea, not guilty. At the trial before Holroyd, J., the defendants, two of whom were constables, and the third the gamekeeper of the manor where the plaintiff resided, justified the trespass under a warrant granted by virtue of the 22 & 23 Car. II. c. 25, s. 2, which empowers gamekeepers and other persons, authorized by warrant under the hand and seal of any justice of the peace for the county, in the day-time, to search the houses of unqualified persons suspected of having in their custody guns, &c., for the purpose of destroying game, and to seize, detain, and keep the same, to and for the use of the lord of the manor, or to cut to pieces and destroy them. The plaintiff was proved to be an unqualified person, but, on the warrant being produced, several objections were taken to it as being informal. And it further appearing that the outer door of the plaintiff's house had been broken open without his having been previously requested to open it, the learned judge was of opinion that the justification was not sufficiently made out, and the plaintiff obtained a verdict. And now, on a motion for a rule to show cause why the verdict should not be set aside, and a nonsuit entered, it was contended that the defendants were justified in obeying the warrant; and that, if the warrant was informal, the proper remedy of the plaintiff was not against them, but against the magistrate who had granted it. Then, as to the other objection, that the outer door was broken open, he contended that here there appeared to have been a misdemeanor on the part of the plaintiff; and that, in the execution of criminal process, the outer door may be lawfully broken open. If a previous request be held to be necessary, it will be very inconvenient; for in many criminal cases—as, for instance, felony, it will give the party accused notice that he may make his escape.—Abbott, C. J. I am of opinion that, in this case, the verdict is right. It is not at present necessary for us to decide how far, in the case of a person charged with felony, it would be necessary to make a previous demand of admittance before you could justify breaking open the outer door of his house; because I am clearly of opinion that, in the case of a misdemeanor, such previous demand is requisite; and that is sufficient for the determination of the present case. It is reasonable that the law should be so; for if no previous demand is made, how is it possible for the party to know what the object of the person breaking open the door may be? He has a right to consider it as an aggression on his private property, which he will be justified in resisting to the utmost.—Bayley, J. The present verdict is quite right, because, even in the execution of criminal process, you must demand admittance before you can justify breaking open the outer door. That point was mentioned in the judgment of the court, in the case of Burdett v. Abbott, 14 East, 163. Holroyd and Best, Js., concurred. Rule refused.

By the 29 Car. II. c. 7, s. 6, no person on the Lord's day shall serve or cause to be served any writ, process, or warrant, order or judgment (except in cases of treason, felony, or breach of the peace); but the service thereof shall be void, and the person serving the same shall be liable to answer damages to the party grieved, in the same manner as if he had done it without any writ, process, warrant, order, or judgment at all. (See "Lord's Day," Vol. III.)

It seems to be agreed that every suit, whether civil or criminal, and also every process in such suit against jurors, ought to be properly continued from day to day from its commencement to its conclusion, without any the least gap or chasm; the suffering any such gap or chasm is properly called a discontinuance; and the continuing the suit by improper process (as by a capias

instead of a distringas), or by giving the parties an illegal day, is properly called a miscontinuance; and if the justices before whom the matter is depending do not come on the day to which it is continued, it is said to be put without day, and cannot be revived without a re-summons on re-attachment. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 89, et seq.)

Now, process may be discontinued several ways. As, 1, Where the second is not attested on the very same day on which the first is returnable. 2. Where there is a sessions intervening between the teste and the return of a capias, that the defendant may not be imprisoned an unreasonable time. But it is no objection to an exigent that it is not returnable the next sessions, because it must allow time for five county courts to be holden between its teste and return. 3. Where, after issue or demurrer, the court gives the party a day to a distant sessions, without making any continuance to that immediately following. 4. Where the sessions to which the suit is continued is adjourned, and the suit is not adjourned accordingly. 5. Where any of the parties are described in any continuance of the suit, whether on the roll, or by process by a name or addition variant from those in the original, though only in one letter. 6. Where a venire or distringas is issued, without any award on the roll to warrant them. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 90, et seq.)

And it seems generally to be taken as an undoubted principle, that a discontinuance by suffering a total chasm in the proceedings, whether on the roll or in the process, by not giving a fresh continuance instantly upon the determination of the precedent, shall never be aided by any appearance of pleading over; but it is holden by the greater number of authorities that if the original be good, and the defendant present in court, he shall be compelled to answer to such original, let the process whereon he came in, or the execution of it, be never so erroneous or defective, so that it never were discontinued; for the end of process is to compel an appearance, and the end being served, and a legal charge appearing against the defendant no way discontinued, the law will not so far regard a slip in the process, as to let the defendant out of court, in order only to have him brought in again in better form. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 107.)

Process stayed by putting in bail.

The processes (as well of capias as of outlawry) may be stayed by a superseas issuing from other justices (out of sessions), testifying that the party hath come before them, and hath found sureties for his appearance to answer to the indictment, or to pay his fine. (Dalt. c. 193.)

And it seemeth that even any one justice may bail persons indicted at the sessions for any offence under the degree of felony; for that the statutes relating specially to the power of justices in granting bail do not in this case seem to take away the power which one justice had before the making of the said statutes. (2 Haw. c. 15, s. 54; and see further as to bail, "Bail," Vol. I.)

Commitment.

As to the commitment, see "Commitment for safe Custody," Vol. I.

II. Of Outlawry for Non-Appearance (a).

Process of outlawry.

Judgment of outlawry is given by the coroner, at the fifth county court, upon the party's not appearing to the exigent, which is a writ commanding the sheriff to cause the defendant (exigi) to be demanded from county court to county court until he be outlawed: and such judgment is entered thus: "Therefore, by the judgment of the coroners of our lord the king of the county aforesaid, he is outlawed." (2 Haw. c. 48, s. 21.)

Meaning of the word outlaw.

The word outlaw (utlaghe), utlagatus, cometh not immediately from the Latin lex, but is derived to us through the Saxon laga, which signifieth law. And a person outlawed signifies one that is out of the protection of the king, and out of the aid of the law.

(a) See the law of outlawry and process fully stated in 1 Chit. C. L. 347 to 370.

And a man which is outlawed is called outlawed; but a woman which is outlawed is called waved, and not utlagata; for that women are not sworn in leets or tornes, as men at the age of twelve or more are; and therefore men may be called utlagati—that is, extra legem positi, but women are waviatæ—that is, derelictæ, left out or not regarded, because they were not sworn to the law; wherein it is to be noted, that of ancient time a man was not said to be within the law that was not sworn to the law, which is intended of the oath of allegiance in the leet. (1 Inst. 122.)

2. Of Outlawry.

A woman outlawed.

Hence it is that a man under the age of twelve years cannot be outlawed. (1 Inst. 122.)

Process of outlawry lies in all indictments of treason or felony, and on all returns of rescous; and also on all indictments of trespass with force and arms: and it seems probable that it lies on an indictment or conspiracy or deceit, or any other crime of a higher nature than a trespass with force and arms; but not on any indictment for a crime of an inferior nature. And it seems agreed that it lies not on any action on a statute, unless it be given by such statute, either expressly, as in the case of a præmunire, or impliedly, as where a recovery is given by an action wherein such process lay before, as on a writ of trespass for a forcible entry, on the 8 Hen. VI. c. 9, because the statute expressly gives a recovery by such a writ, and such process lies on it by the common law. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 113.)

For what outlawry may be.

By the 31 Eliz. c. 3, in every action personal, wherein any exigent shall be awarded out of any court, one writ of proclamation shall be awarded out of the same court, having day of teste and return as the writ of exigent shall have, directed and delivered of record to the sheriff where the defendant dwells; which writ of proclamation shall contain the effect of the action; and the sheriff shall make one proclamation in the open county court, and another at the general quarter sessions where the defendant dwells, and another a month at least before the quinto exactus, by virtue of the said writ of exigent, at or near the most usual door of the church or chapel where the defendant shall be dwelling at the time of the exigent awarded, upon a Sunday, immediately after divine service.

Outlawry proclaimed at the sessions.

Also, by the 4 & 5 Wil. III. c. 22, s. 4, upon issuing any exigent out of any of the king's courts against any person for a criminal matter, before judgment or conviction, there shall also issue a writ of proclamation, bearing the same teste and return, where the person in the record of proceeding is mentioned to inhabit, according to the form of the 31 Eliz. c. 3, which writ of proclamation shall be delivered to the sheriff three months before the return of the same.

If there are two coroners in a county, or more, one may execute the writ, as in case of an exigent, but the return must be in the name of the coroners. (2 Hale, 56.)

Return of the outlawry.

And the return of the outlawry must be certain: it must show where the county court was held, and in what county; and must return the day, and year of the king, to every exactus. (2 Hale, 203.)

Also, the sheriff's name and office must be subscribed to the return of the exigent. (2 Hale, 204.)

It is said that the justices in sessions cannot issue a capias utlagatum, but must return the record of the outlawry into the King's Bench, and the process of capias utlagatum shall issue. (2 Hale, 52.)

Capias utlagatum.

But in T. 10 J. 1, the opinion of all the court of Common Pleas was, that if one be outlawed before the justices of the peace on an indictment of felony, they may award a capias utlagatum, and so was the opinion of Periam, chief baron, and all the court of Exchequer; for they that have power to award process of outlawry have also power to award a capias utlagatum, as incident to their authority and jurisdiction. (12 Rep. 103.)

If a person be outlawed at the suit of one man, all men shall take advantage of this personal disability. (1 Inst. 128.)

Consequences of outlawry.

But such disability abateth not the writ, but only disableth the plaintiff, until he obtain a charter of pardon. (1 Inst. 128.)

Upon outlawry in treason or felony, the offender shall lose and forfeit as much as if he had appeared and judgment had been given against him, as long as the outlawry is in force. (2 Haw. c. 48, s. 22.)

For treason or felony.

2. Outlawry.

For an inferior offence.

But the outlawry for a misdemeanor doth not inure as a conviction for the offence, as it doth in cases of treason and felony; but as a conviction of the contempt for not answering, which contempt is therefore punished, not by fine as a conviction for the offence, but by forfeiture of goods and chattels for the contempt. (R. v. Tippen, 2 Salk. 494; see 1 Mac. & Y. 196; 1 Chit. C. L. 366.)

Goods forfeited from the time of issuing the exigent.

The very issuing of the exigent, in case of treason or felony, gives to the king the forfeiture of the goods of the party from the time of the teste of the writ of exigent: and the forfeiture by the exigent awarded stands, although the indictment be quashed, until there be a judgment of reversal on a writ of error; because the king's title, being of record, must be awarded by a record. (2 Hale, 204, 205.)

Lands forfeited from the time of the outlawry.

And as the award of the exigent gives the forfeiture of the goods, so the outlawry gives the forfeiture or loss of the lands of the party outlawed; to wit, in case of outlawry of treason, his lands are forfeited to the king, of whomsoever they are held; and, in case of outlawry of felony, to the lord by escheat of whom they are immediately holden. (2 Hale, 206.)

But the outlawry must be first returned.

But it must be remembered, that the bare judgment of outlawry by the coroner, without the return thereof of record, is no attainder, nor gives any escheat; but it must be returned by the sheriff, with the writ of exigi facias, and the return indorsed. (2 Hale, 206.) Or else it must be removed by certiorari; for the judgment given by the coroner in the county court is not matter of record, that court not being a court of record. (1 Inst. 288.)

And after inquisition found.

And by the outlawry all personal chattels are vested in the king by forfeiture; but real chattels, or freehold estates, are not vested in the king till after inquisition found. (Anon. 3 Salk. 262.)

Whether it is lawful to kill an outlaw.

In ancient times no man could have been outlawed but for felony, the punishment whereof was death; and upon this account an outlawed man was called wolfeshead, because he might be put to death by any man as a wolf, that hateful beast, might. But in the beginning of the reign of King Edward the Third, it was resolved by the judges, for avoiding of inhumanity and effusion of Christian blood, that it should not be lawful for any man but the sheriff, having lawful warrant, to put to death any man outlawed, though it were for felony; and, if he did, he shall undergo such pain of death as if he had killed any other man: and so the law continues to this day. (1 Inst. 28.)

Judges of assize may award execution of persons outlawed before justices of the peace.

If a man be indicted before justices of the peace, and thereupon outlawed, and is taken and committed to prison, the justices of gaol-delivery may award execution of this prisoner; for they are constituted to deliver the gaol. (4 Inst. 166; Hale's Sum. 158; 2 Hale, 35.)

Clergy in cases of outlawry.

Where clergy is allowable, it shall be as much allowed to one who is outlawed as to one who is convicted by verdict or confession. (2 Haw. c. 33, s. 27.)

But a statute taking the benefit of clergy from those who shall be found guilty doth not thereby take it from those who are outlawed. (2 Haw. c. 33, s. 28.)

But by the 3 & 4 Wil. III. c. 9, s. 2, if any person be indicted of any offence, for which, by any former statute, he is excluded from clergy upon conviction, if he shall be outlawed thereupon, he shall not have his clergy. (See now as to Clergy, ante, Vol. I. tit. "Clergy.")

By any former Statute.—Hereby it appears that this extends not to offences made felonies by statutes subsequent to this statute. (2 Haw. c. 33, s. 49.)

Persons outlawed cannot be a plaintiff.

Where a person is outlawed, the defendant may show all the matter and outlawry returned of record, and demand judgment if he shall be answered, because he is out of the law, to sue an action during the time that he is outlawed. (1 Inst. 128.)

Cannot be a juror.

It seems to be a good challenge of a juror, that he is outlawed either for a criminal matter, or, as some say, in a personal action; but not a principal challenge, but only to the favour, unless the record of the outlawry be produced. (2 Haw. c. 25, s. 16; c. 43, s. 25.)

But it seems clear that outlawry, in a personal action, is not a good exception against a witness, as it is against a juror. (2 Haw. c. 46, s. 21.)

An outlawed person may make a will, and have executors or administrators. (Wolley v. Bradwell, Cro. El. 575.)

And an executor may reverse the outlawry of the testator, where he was not lawfully outlawed. (1 Leon. 325.)

Outlawry may be reversed several ways: as, by procuring a supersedeas, and delivering it to the sheriff before the quinto exactus; or by showing any matter apparent on record which makes the outlawry erroneous, as the want of an original; or the omission of process, or want of form in a writ of proclamation, or a return by a person appearing not to be sheriff, or a variance between the original and exigent, or other process, or by a misnomer or want of addition. (2 Haw. c. 50.)

And upon a writ of error upon an outlawry in felony, the party outlawed must render himself in custody, and pray the allowance of the writ of error in person; and if the outlawry be reversed, he shall be put to answer the indictment. (2 Hale, 209.)

But by the 4 & 5 Wil. III. c. 18, one outlawed, except for treason or felony, need not appear in person to reverse an outlawry, but may appear by attorney. (Anon. 2 Salk. 496. See Volet v. Waters, 3 D. & R. 55.)

There is another kind of process out of a court of record against offenders, called Attachment, which is generally for contempt; which belongs to title "Attachment," Vol. I.

At which day, A. S. knight, the sheriff aforesaid, returned that the aforesaid A. O. is not found in his bailiwick, and he did not come. Therefore it is commanded, that you cause to be demanded, &c.

(5.) The exigent.

William the Fourth, &c. [as ante, 309, No. 1.] To the sheriff, &c. greeting. We command you that you cause A. O., of _____, in your county, [yeoman,] to be demanded, until, by the law and custom of our kingdom of England, he be outlawed, if he shall not appear; and if he shall appear, that then you take him and cause him to be safely kept, so that you have his body before our justices assigned to keep our peace, and also to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors, in your said county committed, at the general quarter sessions of the peace of your county, next after the feast of _____ next ensuing, to be held wheresoever in the same county the said sessions shall happen to be holden, to answer unto us of divers trespasses, contempts, and offences, of which he is indicted. And have you then there this writ. Witness, Sir J. P., Baronet, at _____, in the said county, the _____ day of _____, in the _____ year of our reign.

At which day, A. S., Knight, sheriff of the county aforesaid, returned that at this county court holden at _____, the _____ day of _____, in the _____ year of the reign of our lord the king that now is, and so at four other county courts then next following there holden, the aforesaid A. O. was demanded, and did not appear. Therefore, by the judgment of the coroner of our said lord the king, in the county aforesaid, he was outlawed.

(6.) The capias utlagatum.

William the Fourth, &c. [as ante, 309, No. 1.] To the sheriff, &c. greeting. We command you that you omit not, by reason of any liberty in your county, but that you take A. O., late of _____, in your county, labourer, if he shall be found within your county, and him cause safely to be kept, so that you have his body before the keepers of our peace and our justices assigned to hear and determine divers felonies, trespasses, and other misdemeanors, in your county committed, at _____, the _____ day of _____, to stand right in our court before our justices aforesaid, upon a certain outlawry against him, the said A. O., promulgated, at our suit, for certain felonies [or, trespasses] whereof he is indicted. And have you then there this writ. Witness, &c.

Promissory Notes.

BY the 15 Geo. III. c. 51, various provisions were made to restrain the negotiation of promissory notes and inland bills of exchange, under a limited sum, in England; but doubts have arisen as to the power of justices of the peace to hear and determine offences under that act.

By the 48 Geo. III. c. 88, s. 1, the said act of 15 Geo. III. is repealed, and by sect. 2, it is enacted, "that all promissory or other notes, bills of exchange, or drafts, or undertakings in writing, being negotiable or transferable for the payment of any sum or sums of money, or any orders, notes, or undertakings in writing, being negotiable or transferable for the delivery of any goods, specifying their value in money, less than the sum of 20s. in the whole, heretofore made or issued, or which shall hereafter be made or issued, shall, from and after the first day of October, 1808, be and the same are hereby declared to be absolutely void and of no effect; any law, statute, usage, or custom, to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding." Promissory notes for less than 20s. declared void.

Sect. 3. "If any person or persons shall, after the first day of July, 1808, by any art, device, or means whatsoever, publish or utter any such notes, bills, drafts, or engagements as aforesaid, for a less sum than 20s., or on which less than the sum of 20s. shall be due, and which shall be in anywise negotiable or transferable, or shall negotiate or transfer the same, every such person shall forfeit and pay, for every such offence, any sum not exceeding 20*l.*, nor less than 5*l.*, at the discretion of the justice of the peace who shall hear and determine such offence." Penalty on persons uttering such notes, 20*l.* to 5*l.*

Sect. 4. "It shall be lawful for any justice or justices of the peace, acting for the county, riding, city, or place, within which any offence against this act shall be committed, to hear and determine the same in a summary way, at any time within twenty days after such offence shall have been committed; and such justice or justices, upon any information exhibited or complaint made upon oath in that behalf, shall summon the party accused, and also the witnesses on either side, and shall examine into the matter of fact, and upon due proof made thereof, either by the voluntary confession of the party, or by the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, or otherwise, (which oath such justice or justices is or are hereby authorized to administer,) shall convict the offender, and adjudge the penalty for such offence." Justices may determine on such offences within twenty days.

Sect. 5. "If any person shall be summoned as a witness to give evidence before such justice or justices, either on the part of the prosecutor or the person accused, and shall neglect or refuse to appear at the time or place to be for that purpose appointed, without a reasonable excuse for such his neglect or refusal, to be allowed by such justice or justices, then such person shall forfeit, for every such offence, the sum of 40s., to be levied and paid in such manner and by such means as are directed for recovery of other penalties under this act." Penalty on witnesses not attending, 40s.

Sect. 6. "That the justice or justices before whom any offender shall be convicted as aforesaid, shall cause the said conviction to be made out, in the manner and form following; (that is to say,)

Form of conviction.

"Be it remembered, that on the day of , in the year of our Lord , A. B., having appeared before me [or, us], one [or more] of his majesty's justices of the peace [as the case may be] for the county, riding, city, or place [as the case may be], and due proof having been made upon oath by one or more credible witness or witnesses, or by confession of the party [as the case may be], is convicted of [specifying the offence]. Given under my hand and seal [or, our hands and seals], the day and year aforesaid."

Returnable to the quarter sessions.

Which conviction the said justice or justices shall cause to be returned to the then next general quarter sessions of the peace of the county, riding, city, or place, where such conviction was made, to be filed by the clerk of the peace, to remain and be kept among the records of such county, riding, city, or place."

Copies of convictions.

Sect. 7. "It shall be lawful for any clerk of the peace for any county, riding, city, or place, and he is hereby required, upon application made to him by any person or persons for that purpose, to cause a copy or copies of any conviction or convictions filed by him under the directions of this act, to be forthwith delivered to such person or persons upon payment of one shilling for every such copy."

Recovery and application of penalties.

Sect. 8. "The pecuniary penalties and forfeitures hereby incurred and made payable upon any conviction against this act, shall be forthwith paid by the person convicted, as follows: one moiety of the forfeiture to the informer, and the other moiety to the poor of the parish or place where the offence shall be committed; and in case such person shall refuse or neglect to pay the same, or to give sufficient security to the satisfaction of such justice or justices to prosecute any appeal against such conviction, such justice or justices shall, by warrant, under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, together with all costs and charges attending such distress and sale, returning the overplus (if any) to the owner; and which said warrant of distress the said justice or justices shall cause to be made out in the manner and form following; (that is to say,)

Form of warrant of distress.

"To the Constable, Headborough, or Tithingman of .

"Whereas A. B., of , in the county of , is this day convicted before me [or, us] one [or more] of his majesty's justices of the peace [as the case may be] for the county of , [or, for the riding of the county of York, or for the town, liberty, or district of , as the case may be] upon the oath of , or , a credible witness or witnesses [or, by confession of the party, as the case may be], for that the said A. B. hath [here set forth the offence], contrary to the statute in that case made and provided, by reason whereof the said A. B. hath forfeited the sum of , to be distributed as herein is mentioned, which he hath refused to pay: these are, therefore, in his majesty's name, to command you to levy the said sum of by distress of the goods and chattels of him the said A. B.; and if within the space of five days next after such distress by you taken, the said sum, together with the reasonable charges of taking the same, shall not be paid, then that you do sell the said goods and chattels so by you distrained, and out of the money arising by such sale, that you do pay one-half of the said sum of to , of , who informed me [or, us, as the case shall be] of the said offence, and the other half of the said sum of to the overseer of the poor of the parish, township, or place where the offence was committed, to be employed for the benefit of such poor, returning the overplus [if any] upon demand to the said A. B., the reasonable charges of taking, keeping, and selling the said distress being first deducted; and if sufficient distress cannot be found of the goods and chattels of the said A. B. whereon to levy the said sum of , that then you certify the same to me [or, us, as the case shall be], together with this warrant. Given under my hand and seal [or, our hands and seals], the day of , in the year of our Lord ."

Security for appearance of party,

Sect. 9. "It shall be lawful for such justice or justices to order such offender to be detained in safe custody until return may conveniently be had and made to such warrant of distress, unless the party so convicted shall give sufficient security, to the satisfaction of such justice or justices, for his appearance before the said justice or justices on such day as shall be appointed by the said justice or justices for the day of the return of the said warrant of distress (such day not exceeding five days from the taking of such security); which security the said justice or justices is and are hereby empowered to take by way of recognizance or otherwise."

on return of such warrants.

Sect. 10. "If, upon such return, no sufficient distress can be had, then, and in such case, the said justice or justices shall and may commit such offender to the common gaol or house of correction of the county, riding, division, or place where the offence shall be committed, for the space of three calendar months, unless the money forfeited shall be sooner paid, or unless or until such offender, thinking him or herself aggrieved by such conviction, shall give notice to the informer that he or she intends to appeal to the justices of the peace at the next general quarter sessions of the peace to be holden for the county, riding, or place wherein the offence shall be committed, and shall enter into recognizance before some justice or justices, with two sufficient sureties conditioned to try such appeal, and to abide the order of and pay such costs as shall be awarded by the justices at such quarter sessions (which notice of appeal, being not less than eight days before the trial thereof, such person so aggrieved is hereby empowered to give); and the said justices at such sessions, upon due proof of such notice being given as aforesaid, and of the entering into such recognizance, shall hear and finally determine the causes and matters of such appeal in a summary way, and award such costs to the parties appealing or appealed against, as they the said justices shall think proper; and the determination of such quarter session shall be final, binding, and conclusive to all intents and purposes."

Offenders may be committed for want of distress.

Sect. 11. "No person shall be disabled from being a witness in any prosecution for any offence against this act, by reason of his being an inhabitant of the parish wherein such offence was committed."

Parishioners may be witnesses.

Sect. 12. "No proceedings to be had, touching the conviction or convictions of any offender or offenders against this act, shall be quashed for want of form, or be removed by writ of certiorari, or any other writ or process whatsoever, into any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster."

Convictions not removable by certiorari.

Sect. 13. "If any action or suit shall be commenced against any person or persons for any thing done or acted in pursuance of this act, then and in every such case such action or suit shall be commenced or prosecuted within three calendar months after the fact committed, and not afterwards; and the same and every such action or suit shall be brought within the county where the fact was committed, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in every such action or suit shall and may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon, and that the same was done in pursuance and by the authority of this act; and if the same shall appear to have been so done, or if any such action or suit shall be brought after the time limited for bringing the same, or be brought or laid in any other place than as aforementioned, then the jury shall find for the defendant or defendants; or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuit, or discontinue his, her, or their action after the defendant or defendants shall have appeared, or if, upon demurrer, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall and may recover treble costs, and have the like remedy for the recovery thereof as any defendant or defendants hath or have in any other cases by law."

Limitation of actions.

the time of drawing or issuing thereof, but not on any day subsequent thereto; and (3) shall be made payable within twenty-one days next after the day of the date thereof; and shall not be transferable or negotiable after the time thereby limited for payment; and (4) every indorsement thereon shall be made before the expiration of that time, and shall bear date at or not before the time of making thereof, and shall specify the name and place of abode of the person to whom or to whose order the money is to be paid; otherwise such note, bill, draft, or undertaking shall be void.

And by the 37 Geo. III. c. 32, s. 3, if the person liable to pay the same shall fail to make full payment in money of the sum therein mentioned, or any part thereof [for seven days, 37 Geo. III. c. 61, s. 2], after demand by the holder, one justice, on complaint by such holder, may summon such person refusing to pay; and on his appearance, or in default, on proof on oath of such summons having been duly served, may hear and determine the same, and may award such sum to be paid, together with the costs, not exceeding 20s., as to him shall seem meet; and if not paid upon demand, may levy the same by distress, together with all costs attending such distress.

Which notes, bills, drafts, or undertakings and indorsements, may be in the form or to the effect following:

The publishing, uttering, or negotiating notes, bills of exchange, drafts, or undertakings, contrary to this act, is prohibited and restrained under the like penalties as for offences against the former act; so that the impracticability of recovering the said penalties is alike in both cases.

The 55 Geo. III. c. 184, points out the duties payable on promissory notes and bills. The stamp laws are about to be amended and consolidated under a new enactment.

Prophecies.

5 Eliz. c. 15.

BY the 5 Eliz. c. 15, if any person shall advisedly and directly advance, publish, and set forth by writing, printing, signing, or any other open speech or deed, any fond, fantastical, or false prophecy, upon or by the occasion of any arms, fields, beasts, badges, or such other like things accustomed in arms, cognizances, or signets, or upon or by reason of any time, year, or day, name, bloodshed, or war, to the intent thereby to make any rebellion, insurrection, dissension, loss of life, or other disturbance in the realm; and shall be convicted thereof before a judge of assize, or justice of the peace, within six months after the offence committed, he shall for the first offence be imprisoned for a year, and forfeit 10*l.*; and for the second offence shall be imprisoned for life, and forfeit his goods: half the forfeitures to the king, and half to him who shall sue for them in any court of record.

The intent of this act was, to abolish certain foolish and superstitious notions which prevailed in the times of ignorance, as were set forth in a statute made in the 33 Hen. VIII. c. 14, reciting—Whereas divers and sundry persons, making their foundation by prophecies, have taken upon them a knowledge (as it were) what shall become of them which bear in their arms, cognizance, or badge, fields, beasts, fowls, or any other thing which hath been used or accustomed to be put in any of the same, or in and upon the letters of their names, have devised, descanted, and practised, to make folk think, that by their untrue guesses it might be known what good or evil things should come, happen, or be done, by or to such persons as bore or had such badges or cognizances, or had such letters in their names, to the great terror and destruction of such noble personages, of whom such false prophecies have or should hereafter set forth, whereby, in times past, many noblemen have suffered, and (if their prince would give any ear thereto) might hap to do hereafter; and therefore enacted, that he who should do so, should be guilty of felony without benefit of clergy.

This statute was wholly repealed by the 1 Edw. VI. c. 12, which repealed all statutes making any offences felony, from the first year of the reign of King Henry the Eighth. And the substance thereof was re-enacted, with a mitigation of the penalty, by the 3 & 4 Edw. VI. c. 15. Which statute expiring, the 5 Eliz. c. 15, was enacted as above.

Purveyors.

Abuses of purveyors.

ANCIENTLY, the king's court was supplied with necessaries from the ancient demesnes of the crown; and in respect thereof the tenants of those lands had many privileges, which they still enjoy: but this method, being found to be troublesome and inconvenient, was by degrees disused; and, afterwards, the king was wont to appoint certain officers to buy in provisions for his household, who were called purveyors, and claimed many privileges by the prerogative of the crown. (2 Inst. 542; 1 Haw. c. 47, s. 1.)

Purveyance taken away.

The several laws which restrained the exorbitance of these purveyors made up a pretty large title in the old books; but these laws proving ineffectual to remedy the evil complained of, at length by the 12 Car. II. c. 24, purveyance was entirely taken away; by which it is enacted, that no sum of money, or other thing, shall be taken for any provision, carriages, or purveyances for the king.

And that no person, under colour of purveyance, shall take any timber, fuel, cattle, corn, grain, malt, hay, straw, victual, cart, carriage, or other thing, without consent of the owner; nor shall require any to furnish any horses, oxen, or other cattle, carts, ploughs, wains, or other carriages, for the use of the king or his household, without the owner's consent.

On pain of being committed to gaol by a justice of the peace, and the constable, until the next sessions, to be there indicted; and also of paying to the party treble damages and treble costs on an action at law.

Quo Warranto.

A Writ of Quo warranto is in the nature of a writ of right for the king, against him who claims or usurps any office, franchise, or liberty, to inquire by what authority (quo warranto) he supports his claim, in order to determine the right. (Finch. Law, 322; 2 Inst. 282.)

It lies also, in case of nonuser (or long neglect of a franchise), or misuser (or abuse of it), being a writ commanding the defendant to show by what warrant he exercises such a franchise, having never had any grant of it, or having forfeited it by neglect or abuse. (3 Bla. Com. 263.)

The court will not grant a quo warranto information against persons for usurping a franchise of a mere private nature, not connected with public government. (R. v. Ogden, 10 B. & Cres. 230.)

This writ, being more in the nature of a civil than a criminal proceeding, is not here further noticed. (See Tidd's Pract. 9 ed.; Com. Dig. Quo Warranto; 3 Bla. Com. 263.)

As to Assaults with intent to commit a Rape, see "Assault," Vol. I. p. 289.

I. What it is.

RAPE is, when a man hath carnal knowledge of a woman by force, and against her will. (2 Inst. 180; 1 Haw. c. 41, s. 1.) Rape, what.

To constitute the offence there must be a penetration. (R. v. Hill, 1 East, P. C. 439.) It was held, in Russen's case, 1 East's P. C. 438; 1 Russell, 803, that the least degree of penetration was sufficient, though not attended with the deprivation of the marks of virginity. In that case it was proved, that the parts of the injured party were so narrow, that a finger could not be introduced, and that the hymen was whole and unbroken; and yet this was held a sufficient penetration to constitute the offence (emission having also been proved, which was necessary as the law stood at that time.) (See R. v. Hodgson, and R. v. Clarke, "Buggery," Vol. I.) But where it appeared that the hymen was not ruptured, Gurney, B., held that the penetration was not sufficient to constitute the offence. (R. v. Gammon, 5 Car. & P. 321.) Penetration.

Before the 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 18, it was necessary to prove emission, which might be proved either positively, by the evidence of the woman that she felt it; or, it might be presumed from circumstances, as, for instance, that the defendant, after having connexion with the prosecutrix, arose from her Emission.

1. What it is, and Punishment for.

voluntarily, without being interrupted in the act. (R. v. Harmwood, 1 East, P. C. 440; R. v. Sheridan, 1 East, P. C. 438; R. v. Burrows, R. & R. 519.)

But now by that act, s. 18, reciting "And whereas, upon trials for the crimes of buggery, and of rape, and of carnally abusing girls under the respective ages hereinbefore mentioned, offenders frequently escape by reason of the difficulty of the proof which has been required of the completion of those several crimes;" for remedy thereof it is enacted, "that it shall not be necessary, in any of those cases, to prove the actual emission of seed in order to constitute a carnal knowledge, but that the carnal knowledge shall be deemed complete upon proof of penetration only."

Youths under fourteen.

A boy under the age of fourteen years is presumed by law incapable to commit a rape. (1 Hale, 631.)

Wife.

A husband cannot be guilty of a rape upon his wife. (Id. 629.)

But, in both these cases, they may be principals in the second degree, and punished for being present, aiding and abetting. (Id. 629, 630; Lord Audley's case, 3 How. St. Tr. 419.)

Using deceit.

Having carnal knowledge of a married woman under circumstances which induce her to suppose it is her husband, is not a rape. (R. v. Jackson, R. & R. C. C. 487.)

Consenting at last.

The offence of a rape is no way mitigated by showing that the woman at last yielded to the violence, if such her consent were forced by fear of death or of duress. (1 Haw. c. 41, s. 2.)

Ravishing a common strumpet.

Also, it is not a sufficient excuse in the ravisher to prove that the woman is a common strumpet; for she is still under the protection of the law, and may not be forced. (1 Haw. c. 41, s. 2.)

Consenting after the fact.

Nor is it any excuse that the woman consented after the fact. (1 Haw. c. 41, s. 2.)

Woman ravished conceiving.

It is said by Mr. Dalton (c. 160), that if a woman, at the time of the supposed rape, do conceive with child by the ravisher, this is no rape: "for (he says) a woman cannot conceive except she doth consent." But Mr. Hawkins observes, that this opinion seems very questionable; not only because the previous violence is no way extenuated by such a subsequent consent, but also because, if it were necessary to show that the woman did not conceive, the offender could not be tried till such time as it might appear whether she did or not; and likewise because the philosophy of this notion may be very well doubted of. (1 Haw. c. 41, s. 9.) And Lord Hale says, this opinion in Dalton seems to be no law. (1 Hale, 631.)

Punishment of.

By 9 Geo. IV. c. 31, s. 16, "every person convicted of the crime of rape shall suffer death as a felon." By the 4 Geo. IV. c. 48, this sentence may be recorded.

Carnal knowledge of children.

Sect. 17. "If any person shall unlawfully and carnally know and abuse any girl under the age of ten years, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon. And if any person shall unlawfully and carnally know and abuse any girl, being above the age of ten years, and under the age of twelve years, every such offender shall be guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, for such term as the court shall award. See further, "Children," Vol. I.

See the general clauses of this act, "Malicious Injuries to Persons," Vol. III.

II. Evidence on an Indictment of Rape.

Evidence.

We have already seen as to what will constitute the offence, and the proofs must be adduced accordingly.

The woman's oath.

The party ravished may give evidence on oath, and is in law a competent witness; but the credibility of her testimony, and how far forth she is to be believed, must be left to the jury, and is more or less credible according to the circumstances of fact that concur in that testimony. (1 Hale, 633.)

For instance: if the witness be of good fame; if she presently discovered the offence, and made pursuit after the offender; have shown circumstances and signs of the injury, whereof many are of that nature that only women are the most proper examiners and inspectors; if the place wherein the fact was done were remote from people, inhabitants, or passengers; if the offender fled for it. These and the like are concurring evidences to give greater probability to her testimony, when proved by others as well as herself. (Id.)

2. Evidence of.

Circumstances in favour of it.

But, on the other side, if she concealed the injury for any considerable time after she had opportunity to complain; if the place where the fact was supposed to be committed were near to inhabitants, or common recourse or passage of passengers, and she made no outcry when the fact was supposed to be done, when and where, it is probable, she might be heard by others; or if a man prove himself to be in another place, or in other company, at the time she charges him with the fact; or if she be wrong in the description of the place; or swear the fact to be done in a place where it was impossible the man could have access to her at that time, as if the room were locked up, and the key in the custody of another person; these and the like circumstances carry a strong presumption that her testimony is false or feigned. (Id.)

Circumstances in disfavour of it.

The defendant may give evidence of the woman's notoriously bad character for want of chastity or common decency, or that she had before been connected with the prisoner himself; but he cannot give evidence of any other particular facts to impeach her chastity. (R. v. Hodgson, 1 Phil. Ev. 190; R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. 243.) So, what she herself said so recently after the fact as to preclude the possibility of her being practised on, has been holden to be admissible in evidence as a part of the transaction; but the particulars of her complaint are not evidence of the truth of her statement. (R. v. Brazier, 1 East's P. C. 444; R. v. Clarke, 2 Stark. 241.) The woman, however, is not compellable to answer whether she has not had connexion with other men, or with a particular person named; nor is evidence of her having had such connexion admissible. (R. v. Hodgson, R. & R. 211; Arch. C. L. 287.) In a late case on the trial of an indictment for a rape, it was held that the prisoner's counsel might ask the prosecutrix the following questions, with a view to contradict her: "Were you not, on, &c. (since the time of the alleged offence), walking in the High Street at Oxford to look out for men?" "Were you not, on, &c. (since the time of the alleged offence), walking in High Street with a woman reputed to be a common prostitute?" It was also held, that evidence might be adduced by the prisoner to show the general light character of the prosecutrix, and that general evidence might be given of her being a street-walker; but semble, that evidence of specific acts of criminality by her would not be admissible. (R. v. Barker, 3 C. & P. 589.)

Bad character of woman.

It has been made a doubt, at different periods in the history of our courts of law, at what particular age an infant could be sworn to prove a rape, or an assault with intent to ravish her; and at one time a rule appears to have prevailed, that no child could be admitted as a witness under the age of nine years, and very few under ten. (R. v. Travers, 1 Str. 700; R. v. Dannel, 1 East's P. C. 442.) But it appears now to be well established, that a child of any age, if capable of distinguishing between good and evil, may be examined upon oath; but that, whatever may be its age, it cannot be examined unless sworn. (Brazier's case, Reading Sp. Ass. 1779; 1 East's P. C. 443, 444.) By such capability of distinguishing between good and evil, must be understood a belief in God, or in a future state of rewards and punishments; from which the court may be satisfied that the witness entertains a proper sense of the danger and impiety of falsehood. (White's case, 1 Leach, 430.) See title "Infant," Vol. III.

Infant a witness.

It appears to have been allowed, that the fact of the child's having complained of the injury recently after it was received, is confirmatory evidence; but where the child is not fit to be sworn, it is clear that any account which it may have given to others ought not to be received. (1 Russ. 812, citing

2. Evidence of. Brazier's case, supra. See 1 Phil. Ev. 19, 222, 6 ed.) Thus, on an indictment for a rape on a child of five years of age, where the child was not examined, but an account of what she had told her mother about three weeks after the transaction was given in evidence by the mother, and the jury convicted the prisoner, principally, as was supposed, on that evidence, the judges, on a case reserved for their opinion, thought the evidence clearly inadmissible; and the prisoner was accordingly pardoned. (Tucker's case, Exeter Spr. Ass. 1808, cor. Marshall, Serjt.; MS. C. C. R.; 5 Burn's J., 24 ed. 3; ante, "Infant," Vol. III.)

When the child has appeared not sufficiently to understand the nature and obligation of an oath, judges have often thought it necessary for the purposes of justices, to put off the trial of a prisoner, directing that the child in the meantime should be properly instructed. Thus, in a criminal prosecution that was coming on to be tried before Rooke, J., at Gloucester, finding that the principal witness was an infant, who was wholly incompetent to take an oath, he postponed the trial till the following assizes, and ordered the child to be instructed in the meantime by a clergyman in the principles of her duty, and the nature and obligation of an oath. At the next assizes the prisoner was put upon his trial, and the girl being found by the court, on examination, to have a proper sense of the nature of an oath, was sworn, and upon her testimony the prisoner was convicted, and afterwards executed. Mr. J. Rooke mentioned this at the Old Bailey in 1795, in the case of Patrick Murphey, who was indicted for a rape on a child of seven years old; and the learned judge added, that upon a conference with the other judges, upon his return from the circuit, they unanimously approved of what he had done. (Vide 2 Bac. Abr. 577 (n.); 1 Leach, 430 (n.)

In a case where the party ravished had died before the trial, her deposition, corroborated by other evidence of actual force and penetration, was held sufficient to warrant a conviction, though there did not appear to be any direct evidence of emission. It was left to the jury to determine whether the crime had been completed by penetration and emission; and they were directed that they might collect the fact of emission from the evidence, though the unfortunate girl was dead, and could not therefore give any further account of the transaction, than that which was contained in her deposition before the magistrates. (R. v. Fleming and Windham, 2 Leach, 854.)

Where the evidence of children is admitted, it is much to be wished, in order to render their evidence credible, that there should be some concurrent testimony of time, place, and circumstances, in order to make out the fact; and that the conviction should not be granted singly on the unsupported accusation of an infant under years of discretion. There may be, therefore, in many cases of this nature, witnesses who are competent,—that is, who may be admitted to be heard; and yet, after being heard, may prove not to be credible, or such as the jury is bound to believe. For one excellence of the trial by jury is, that the jury are triers of the credit of the witnesses as well as of the truth of the fact. (4 Bla. Com. 214; 1 Phil. Ev. 19, 6 ed.)

Wife.

The party grieved is so much considered as a witness of necessity in this as in other personal injuries, that if one assist another man to ravish his own wife, she is admissible as a witness against him. (Lord Audley's case, 3 Howell's St. Tr. 419, cited in 1 East's P. C. 444.)

General caution.

"It is true," says Lord Hale, "that rape is a most detestable crime, and therefore ought severely and impartially to be punished with death; but it must be remembered, it is an accusation easily to be made, and hard to be proved, and harder to be defended by the party accused, though never so innocent." He then mentions two remarkable cases of malicious prosecutions for this crime, that had come within his knowledge; and concludes, "I mention these instances that we may be more cautious upon trials of offences of this nature, wherein the court and jury may, with so much ease, be imposed upon, without great care and vigilance; the heinousness of the offence many times transporting the judge and jury with so much indignation, that they are over-hastily carried to the conviction of the person accused thereof, by the confident testimony, sometimes, of malicious and false witnesses." (1 Hale, 635, 636; 4 Bla. Com. 214.)

3. Principal & Accessary.

III. Principal and Accessary.

Mr. Hawkins says, all who are present, and actually assist a man to commit a rape, may be indicted as principal offenders, whether they be men or women. (1 Haw. c. 41, s. 6.)

So one woman may be a principal to the ravishment of another. In R. v. Burgess and others, Chester Spr. Ass. 1813, upon an indictment charging three persons jointly with the commission of a rape, an objection was taken that three persons could not be guilty of the same joint act; but it was overruled, upon the ground that the legal construction of the averment was only that they had done such acts as subjected them to be punished as principals in the offence. The execution was, however, respited, probably with a view to enable the learned judges to consult other authorities on the accuracy of their opinion: but the prisoners were afterwards executed. (5 Ev. Col. Stat. Cl. 6, p. 244, note (17), 2 ed.; and see 1 Russ. 801.)

A general conviction of a prisoner, charged both as principal in the first degree and as an aider and abettor of other men in rape, is valid, on the count charging him as principal. And on such an indictment evidence may be given of several rapes on the same woman, at the same time, by the prisoner and other men, each assisting the other in turn, without putting the prosecutor to elect on which count to proceed. (R. v. Folkes, R. & M. C. C. 354. And see R. v. Gray, 7 C. & P. 164.)

What it is.

RECOGNIZANCE is a bond of record, testifying the recognizor to owe a certain sum of money to some other; and the acknowledging of the same is to remain of record; and none can take it but only a judge or officer of record. (Dalt. c. 186; 2 Bla. Com. 341.)

In what cases it may be taken.

These recognizances, in some cases, the justices of the peace are enabled to take by the express words of certain statutes; but in other cases (as for the peace and good behaviour, and the like), it is rather in congruity, and by reasonable intendment of law, than by any express authority given them, either by their commission, or by the statute law. (Crom. 125; Dalt. c. 168.)

Wheresoever any statute giveth them power to take a bond of any man, or to bind over any man to appear at the assizes or sessions, or to take sureties for any matter or cause, they may take a recognizance. Yea, wheresoever they have authority given them to cause a man to do a thing, there it seemeth they have, in congruity, power given them to bind the party by recognizance to do it; and if the party shall refuse to be bound, the justice may send him to gaol. (Dalt. c. 168.)

But he can take no recognizance but only of such matters as concern his office; and if he doth, it seemeth to be void. (Dalt. c. 168.)

Recognizance to prosecute and give evidence in felonies.

As regards the power and duty of justices to bind by recognizances to prosecute or give evidence in felonies, the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 2, reciting the expediency of amending and extending the provisions of the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13, and 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 10, enacts, "that the two justices of the peace, before they shall admit to bail, and the justice or justices, before he or they shall commit to prison, any person arrested for felony, or on suspicion of felony, shall take the examination of such person, and the information upon oath of those who shall know the facts and circumstances of the case, and shall put the same, or as much thereof as shall be material, into writing; and the two justices shall certify such bailment in writing; and every such justice shall have authority to bind by recognizance all such persons as know or declare any thing material touching any such felony or suspicion of felony, to appear at the next court of oyer and terminer, or gaol delivery, or superior criminal court of a county palatine, or great sessions * or sessions of the peace, at which the trial thereof is intended to be, then and there to prosecute or give evidence against the party accused; and such justices and justice respectively shall subscribe all such examinations, informations, bailments, and recognizances, and deliver or cause the same to be delivered to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court." See "Examination," Vol. II. This statute wholly repeals the 1 & 2 P. & M. c. 13, and 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 10.

Coroners.

As regards the power and duty of justices to bind by recognizances to prosecute or give evidence in misdemeanors, the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, s. 3, enacts, "that every justice of the peace before whom any person shall be taken on a charge of misdemeanor, or suspicion thereof, shall take the examination of the person charged, and the information upon oath of those who shall know the facts and circumstances of the case, and shall put the same, or as much thereof as shall be material, into writing, before he shall commit to prison, or require bail from the person so charged; and, in every case of bailment shall certify the bailment in writing; and shall have authority to bind all persons by recognizance to appear to prosecute or give evidence against the party accused, in like manner as in cases of felony; and shall subscribe all examinations, informations, bailments, and recognizances *, and deliver or cause the same to be delivered to the proper officer of the court in which the trial is to be, before or at the opening of the court, in like manner as in cases of felony."

On appeal or certiorari.

A recognizance to prosecute or give evidence seems binding on an infant. See Exp. Williams, 13 Price, 670; McClell, 493: it was there held that infancy was no ground for discharging a forfeited recognizance to appear at the assizes to prosecute for felony.

Infancy.

A feme covert must enter into a recognizance, by sureties or otherwise, to appear as a witness. (Bennet v. Watson, 3 M. & Sel. 1; post, 324; 1 Chit. C. L. 91.)

Feme covert.

But, in general, the parties' own recognizance, without sureties, is all that can be insisted on. (Ante, Vol. II. p. 122.)

Sureties.

Where a defendant, indicted at the quarter sessions for a conspiracy, had entered into insufficient recognizances, it was holden that the Court of King's

2. Refusing to enter into. Bench, on a removal by certiorari, might discharge them on motion, and compel him to enter into better securities. (R. v. Hooper and others, 1 Chit. C. L. 491.)

II. Refusing to enter into.

Refusing to enter into.

Commitment.

If the party improperly refuse to enter into the recognizance to prosecute or give evidence, the magistrate, it seems, has power to commit him, this power being virtually included in his commission, and, by necessary consequence from the above, the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64. (See 1 Hale, 586; 2 Hale, 52.) And in a case where a married woman refused to enter into a recognizance for her appearance at sessions, to give evidence against a felon, and the magistrate committed her, the Court of King's Bench held that the commitment was legal. (Bennet v. Watson, 3 M. & S. 1.) But in a recent case it was made a question whether a magistrate has power to commit a person for contemptuously refusing to take an oath and give evidence touching a charge of riot alleged to have been committed by a person then under examination. (Cropper v. Horton, 4 D. & R., M. C. 42.) And in the same case, where the plaintiff was committed by a justice for refusing to give evidence before him, touching a certain riot and disturbance, without showing that there had been a person charged before the justices, and that the plaintiff was apprized of the existence of such a charge, with respect to which he was required to be examined as a witness, it was held the warrant of commitment was no justification of the magistrate, in an action of trespass.

III. Form, &c. of.

Form of recognizance.

Every obligation and recognizance, taken by justices of the peace, must be made to our lord the king: on pain of imprisonment of any person that shall take it otherwise. (Dalt. c. 168.)

It must also contain the name, place of abode, and trade or calling, both of principal and sureties, and the sums in which they are bound. (Barl. Recog. p. 454.)

Condition.

And it is most commonly subject to a condition, which is either indorsed or underwritten, or contained within the body of it, upon the performance of which the recognizance shall be void. (Barl. Recog. p. 454.)

Manner of taking it.

When the parties are to enter into recognizance, call them by their names, thus:—

“ You, A. B., acknowledge to owe to our sovereign lord the king the sum of _____, and you, C. D., acknowledge to owe to our sovereign lord the king the sum of _____, to be levied of your respective goods and chattels, lands and tenements, for the use of our said lord the king, his heirs and successors, if default shall be made in the condition following; that is to say, if you, the said A. B., shall make default in appearing,” &c.

But the parties need not sign it. (Barl. Recog. p. 454.)

Marking of.

And it is usual for the justices to mark at the foot of the examination, A. B., in 40l. to appear, &c. And from such short note make out a record afterwards. (Barl. Recog. p. 454.)

A record.

Yet the recognizance is matter of record presently so soon as it is taken and acknowledged, although it be not made up. Dalt. c. 168; sed vide Glynn v. Thorpe, 1 B. & Ald. 153, where it was considered that a recognizance was not a record until enrolled.

On parchment.

Lord Coke (1 Inst. 260) says that a record is a memorial or remembrance in rolls of parchment, &c. From whence it seemeth that a recognizance ought to be engrossed on parchment—perhaps, for this reason, because parchment is more durable than paper: but since there is no law which prohibits it to be ingrossed on paper, it seemeth that, if it shall be on paper only, and not on parchment, it is good in law. 4. Forfeiture of, &c.

And when it is made up, if the justice shall only subscribe his name without his seal to it, this is well enough; and that may be in either of these sorts: "Acknowledged before me, J. P.," or only to subscribe his name thus—"J. P." (Dalt. c. 176.)

By the 3 Geo. IV. c. 46, s. 4, it is enacted, that each and every justice of the peace, before whom any recognizance (see infra) shall be entered into or taken, shall and is hereby required to give, or cause to be given, at the time of entering into such recognizance, to the person or persons, surety or sureties, so entering into the same, and to each of them, a written or printed paper or notice, in the form or to the effect stated in the schedule marked [see Form, post, No. 1,] to this act annexed, adapting the same to the particular circumstances of the case; and each and every such justice shall, in such recognizance, state and particularly specify, not only the profession, art, mystery, or trade, of every person so entering into such recognizance, together with their christian name and names, and surnames, but also the parish, township, or place of his or her residence; and, in case such residence shall be in any city, town, or borough, shall also state and particularly specify the name of the street, and number of the house (if any), in which such person shall reside, and, also, whether owner or tenant thereof, or lodger therein."

The words "any recognizance," appear sufficient to embrace all recognizances; but the whole of the statute, and the notice above required, appear to relate only to recognizances to be returned to the general or quarter sessions. (Car. C. L. 120.)

The 2d, 3d, & 4th sections of the 7 Geo. IV. c. 64, which have been already noticed, relate to the certifying of recognizances to prosecute or give evidence. See them, ante, 322, 323. And by the 3 Hen. VII. c. 1, the justices shall certify their recognizances for keeping the peace to the next sessions, that the party may be called; and, if he make default, the default shall be recorded, and the recognizance, with the record of the default, shall be sent and certified into the Chancery, King's Bench, or Exchequer.

IV. Forfeiture, Estreat, Discharge, or Respite of Recognizances.

If the party fail to comply with the condition of the recognizance, the same will become forfeited, and may be put in force against him. Forfeiture.

It is incumbent on persons under recognizance, who, in consequence either of bills not having been found, or of none having been preferred, may not be called upon to answer or give evidence, to see that their appearance is recorded so as to enable the court to order his recognizance to be cancelled, as otherwise such an attendance is no attendance at all. (Per Thompson, C. B., R. v. Miller, Jun., 1808, 4 Chit. C. L. 490, 491.)

By the 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 36, (constituting the Central Criminal Court,) recognizances for prosecuting to give evidence, &c. before sessions of the peace, are made obligatory on persons entering into the same to prosecute, &c. before justices of oyer and terminer and gaol delivery, notice being given to the parties entering into the recognizance of the change of the court. See "Central Criminal Court," Vol. I.

Rejoinder.

CRIMINAL pleadings rarely proceed beyond a replication. The following is a form of rejoinder—

"And the said C. D. as to the said replication of the said A. G. to the said plea of him the said C. D., saith that our lord the king, by reason of any thing by the said C. D. in that replication alleged, ought not further to prosecute the said indictment against him the said C. D.; because he saith that," [&c., so proceeding to state the matter of the rejoinder; and concluding thus:] "And of this the said C. D. puts himself upon the country."

Replication.

A REPLICATION signifies the answer in pleading to the defendant's plea. Except sometimes to special pleas to indictments for not repairing highways, a special replication seldom occurs in criminal proceedings; and the common similiter to the general issue is the only replication usually adopted.

The following are the forms of the commencement and conclusion of replications.

Form of to an indictment.

"And hereupon A. C.," [the clerk of the peace, or clerk of the arraigns], "who prosecutes for our said lord the king in this behalf, says, that by reason of any thing in the said plea of the said C. D. above pleaded in bar alleged, our said lord the king ought not to be precluded from prosecuting the said indictment against the said C. D.; because he says that," [&c. state the matter of the replication; and conclude thus:] "And this he the said A. C. prays may be inquired of by the country." Or, if it conclude with a verification, then thus: "And this he the said A. C. is ready to verify; wherefore he prays judgment, and that the said C. D. may be convicted of the premises in the said indictment above specified."

Form of to a plea to an indictment in K. B.

"And hereupon Edmund Henry Lushington, Esq., coroner and attorney of our said lord the king, in the court of our said lord the king, before the king himself, who prosecutes for our said lord the king in this behalf, says, that by reason of," &c.; and the conclusion thus: "And this the said coroner and attorney of our said lord the king prays," &c.; as above. [Where the plea is pleaded to an information, the replication is thus: "And the said attorney-general [or coroner and attorney] of our said lord the king, who prosecutes as aforesaid, says, that by reason of," &c. &c. "And this the said attorney-general [or coroner and attorney] of our said lord the king prays," &c., as above.]

Rescue.

As to escapes, see "Escape," Vol. I. p. 3 to 15; as to prison-breaking, see ante, "Prison-Breaking."

What a rescous is. RESCOUS is an ancient French word, coming from rescours, that is, recuperare, to recover; and signifies a forcible setting at liberty, against law, a person arrested by the process or course of law. (1 Inst. 160.)

Rescue is a common-law felony, if the party rescued be a convicted felon. (R. v. Haswell, R. & R. C. C. 458.) It is a misdemeanor, if the party rescued be convicted of a misdemeanor. (1 Hale, 607.)

It seems that it is necessary that the rescuer should have knowledge that the person is under arrest for a criminal offence, if he be in the custody of a private person: but if he be in the custody of an officer, there at his peril he is to take notice of it. (2 Hale, 606.)

But it is said, that to rescue a felon taken on a general warrant, to answer what shall be objected against him, no cause being expressed in the warrant, is not felony. (1 Hale, 578.)

Nor unless a felony hath been really done. (Hale's Sum. 116.)

Hindrance of arrest.

A hindrance of a person to be arrested, that has committed felony, is a misdemeanor, but no felony: but if the party be arrested, and then rescued, if the arrest were for felony, the rescuer is a felon; if for treason, a traitor; if for trespass, fineable. (Hale's Sum. 116; 2 Haw. c. 21, s. 7; R. & R. C. C. 458.)

As to rescuing a distress for rent, see "Distress for Rent," Vol. I. What amounts to, see Knowles v. Blake, 3 M. & P. 214; 5 Bing. 499, S. C.

Although a prison-breaker may be arraigned for that offence, before he be arraigned for the crime for which he was imprisoned, yet he who rescues one imprisoned for felony, cannot, according to the better opinion, be arraigned for such offence, as for a felony, till the principal offender be attainted; but he may be immediately proceeded against for a misprision, if the king pleases. (2 Haw. c. 21, s. 7.)

Therefore, if the principal die before the attainder, he shall be fined and imprisoned. (Hale's Sum. 116.)

Also, if the principal be found not guilty, or guilty of a crime not capital, the rescuer ought to be discharged of felony: but he may be fined for the misdemeanor. (1 Hale, 598, 599.) See "Accessory," Vol I.

An indictment of rescous must set forth the nature and cause of the imprisonment, and the special circumstances of the fact in question. (2 Haw. c. 21, s. 5.)

Upon an indictment at Exeter summer assizes, 1795, for an assault and rescue, it appeared that the sheriff's officers having apprehended a man by virtue of a writ against him, a mob collected, and endeavoured by violence to rescue the prisoner. In the course of the scuffle, which was at ten o'clock at night, one of the bailiffs, having been violently assaulted, struck one of the assailants, a woman, and, as it was thought for some time, had killed her; whereupon, and before her recovery was ascertained, the constable was sent for, and charged with the custody of the bailiff who had struck the woman. The bailiffs, on the other hand, gave the constable notice of their authority, and represented the violence which had been previously offered to them; notwithstanding which, he proceeded to take them into custody upon the charge of murder, and at first offered to take care also of their prisoner, who, however, was soon rescued by the surrounding mob: and the woman having recovered, the bailiffs were released by the constable the next morning. Heath, J., was clearly of opinion that the constable and his assistants were guilty of the assault and rescue, and directed the jury accordingly; who, however, acquitted the defendants. (1 East's P. C. 305.)

By the 25 Geo. II. c. 37, s. 9, "if any person or persons whatsoever shall by force set at liberty or rescue, or attempt to rescue or set at liberty, any person out of prison, who shall be committed for, or found guilty of murder, or rescue, or attempt to rescue, any person convicted of murder, going to execution, or during execution, every person so offending shall be deemed, taken, and adjudged to be guilty of felony, and shall suffer death without benefit of clergy."

And as to rescuing the body after execution, see "Homicide," Vol. III. p. 332.

By the 1 & 2 Geo. IV. c. 88, "An Act for the Amendment of the Law of Rescue," sect. 1, after reciting that "divers daring attempts have of late been made to effect the rescue or prevent the detention of persons charged with, or committed for or on suspicion of felony: and whereas it might tend more effectually to prevent the commission of such offences if further provisions were made for the punishment of persons who may hereafter be convicted thereof, as are hereinafter enacted:" it is enacted, that "if any person shall rescue, or aid and assist in rescuing, from the lawful custody of any constable, officer, headborough, or other person whomsoever, any person charged with, or suspected of, or committed for any felony, or on suspicion thereof, then if the person or persons so offending shall be convicted of felony, and be entitled to the benefit of clergy (a), and be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding one year, it shall be lawful for the court by or before whom any such person or persons shall be convicted, to order and direct, in case it shall think fit, that such person or persons, instead of being so fined and imprisoned as aforesaid,† shall be transported beyond the seas for seven years, or be imprisoned only, or be imprisoned and kept

There are also special penalties enacted for rescuing offenders against particular statutes, which belong not to this general title.

Outlawry. Upon the return of a rescous, process of outlawry shall issue. (2 Haw. c. 27, s. 113; ante, p. 307, 308.)

Forms.

(1.) Commitment for rescue.

Commencement as usual, ante, 175, No. 1.] on the _____ day of _____, A. D. _____, at the parish of _____ in the said county, whilst C. D., a constable, was conveying one E. F. to the common gaol at _____, under and by virtue of a warrant of commitment of one of his majesty's justices of the peace, for having [feloniously stolen the goods of J. N.], did unlawfully assault and beat the said C. D., and did then and there [feloniously,] unlawfully, and forcibly, and against the will of the said C. D., rescue the said E. F. out of the custody of the said C. D. And you the said keeper, &c. [Conclude as usual, as ante, 175, No. 1.]

The word "feloniously" should be omitted in all cases (excepting murder, see the 25 Geo. II. c. 37, s. 9, ante, p. 329), where the party is not convicted of the offence; and also in cases where he has been convicted, if the offence be under felony.

(2.) Indictment for a rescue.

I. What is a Riot, Rout, or Unlawful Assembly.

What is an unlawful assembly.

WHEN three persons or more shall assemble themselves together, with an intent mutually to assist one another against any who shall oppose them in the execution of some enterprise of a private nature, with force or violence, against the peace, or to the manifest terror of the people, whether the act intended were of itself lawful or unlawful; and if they only meet to such a purpose or intent, although they shall after depart of their own accord, without doing any thing, this is an unlawful assembly.

What a rout.

If after their first meeting they shall move forward towards the execution of any such act, whether they put their intended purpose in execution or not, this, according to the general opinion, is a rout.

What a riot.

And if they execute such a thing indeed, then it is a riot. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 1; Dalt. c. 136, p. 310, 311.)

constitute.

Three persons or more.—And, therefore, if the jury do acquit all but two, and find them guilty, the verdict is void, unless they be indicted together with other rioters unknown, because it finds them guilty of an offence whereof it is impossible that they should be guilty; for there can be no riot where there are no more persons than two. (2 Haw. c. 47, s. 8.)

Who.

(R. v. Scott and Hans, 3 Burr. 1262.) Six persons were indicted; whereof two died before trial, two were acquitted, and two convicted. It was moved in arrest of judgment, for that two only could not be found guilty of a riot, unless they were indicted together with other persons unknown; which was not the case here; for it doth not appear that any others were guilty besides these two; here is no finding as to the two dead persons. —By Lord Mansfield. Six were indicted. Two of them are acquitted. Two are dead untried. The jury have found the other two guilty of a riot; consequently, it must have been with one or both of those who have not been tried; as it could not otherwise have been a riot.

1. What is a Riot, Rout, &c.

Note.—In 1 Haw. p. 156, 157, 158, (folio edition,) the words more than three persons are three times over inserted instead of three persons or more; which is only remarked as an instance, that, in a variety of matter, it is impossible for the mind of man to be always equally attentive.

Women are punishable as rioters; but infants, under the age of discretion, are not persons within the aforesaid description, punishable as rioters. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 14.)

Women.
Infants.

Assemble themselves together.]—It seems agreed, that if a number of persons, being met together at a fair, or market, or church aisle, or on any other lawful and innocent occasion, happen, on a sudden quarrel, to fall together by the ears, they are not guilty of a riot, but of a sudden affray only, of which none are guilty but those who actually engage in it; because the design of their meeting was innocent and lawful, and the subsequent breach of the peace happened unexpectedly, without any previous intention concerning it. Yet it is said, that if persons, innocently assembled together, do afterwards, upon a dispute happening to arise among them, form themselves into parties, with promises of mutual assistance, and then make an affray, they are guilty of a riot; because, upon their confederating together with an intention to break the peace, they may as properly be said to be assembled together for that purpose from the time of such confederacy, as if their first coming together had been on such a design. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 3.)

The nature of the assembly.

An assembly of a man's friends for the defence of his person against those who threaten to beat him, if he go to such a market, &c., is unlawful; for he who is in fear of such insults must provide for his safety by demanding the surety of the peace against the persons by whom he is threatened, and not make use of such violent methods, which cannot but be attended with the danger of raising tumults and disorders, to the disturbance of the public peace. But an assembly of a man's friends at his own house, for the defence of the possession of it against such as threaten to make an unlawful entry, or for the defence of his person against such as threaten to beat him in his house, is indulged by law; for a man's house is looked upon as his castle. He is not, however, to arm himself and assemble his friends in defence of his close. (Per Heath, J., R. v. the Bishop of Bangor, Shrewsbury Sum. Ass. 1796. See 1 Russ. 362, and see the authorities there cited.)

And the law is, that if any person encourages, or promotes, or takes part in riots, whether by words, signs, or gestures, or by wearing the badge or ensign of the rioters, he is himself to be considered a rioter; for in this case all are principals. (Per Mansfield, C. J., in Clifford v. Brandon, 2 Campb. 370.)

In the execution of some enterprise of a private nature.]—It also seems agreed that the injury or grievance complained of and intended to be revenged or remedied by such an assembly must relate to some private quarrel only; as the inclosing of lands, in which the inhabitants of a town claim a right of common, or gaining the possession of tenements, the title whereof is in dispute, or such like matters relating to the interest or disputes of particular persons, and no way concerning the public; for, wherever the intention of such an assembly is to redress public grievances, as to pull down inclosures in general, or reform religion, and the like, it is high treason. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 6.)

Against the peace, or to the terror of the people.]—It seems to be clearly agreed that in every riot there must be some such circumstances, either of Violence necessary.

1. What is a actual force or violence, or at least of an apparent tendency thereto, as are Riot, Rout, &c. naturally apt to strike a terror into the people, as the show of armour, threatening speeches, or turbulent gestures; for every such offence must be laid to be done in terrorem populi. And from hence it clearly follows that assemblies at wakes, or other festival times, or meetings for exercise of common sports or diversions, as bull-baiting, wrestling, and such like, are not riotous (a). (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 5; R. v. Hughes, 4 C. & P. 372; see Ex parte Hill, 1 M. & Ry. Mag. C. 106, note.) In R. v. Hughes, and others, 4 C. & P. 373, it was held the defendants could not be convicted of a riot, because the indictment did not show it was in terrorem populi. As to prize-fighting, see R. v. Billingham and others, 4 D. & R. M. C. 127; ante, "Fighting," Vol. II.

But it is not necessary, in order to constitute this crime, that personal violence should have been committed. (Per Mansfield, C. J., in Clifford v. Brandon, 2 Campb. 369.)

From the same ground also it seems to follow that it is possible for three persons or more to assemble together with an intention to execute a wrongful act, and also actually to perform their intended enterprise, without being rioters: as if a man assemble a meet company, to carry away a piece of timber or other thing, whereto he pretends a right, that cannot be carried without a great number, if the number be not more than are needful for such purpose, although another man hath better right to the thing so carried away, and that this act be wrong and unlawful, yet it is of itself no riot, except there be withal threatening words used, or other disturbance of the peace. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 5; Lamb. 178; Dalt. c. 137; R. v. Birt, 5 C. & P. 154.)

Much more may any person, in a peaceable manner, assemble a meet company to do any lawful thing, or to remove or cast down any common nuisance: thus, every private man, to whose house or land any nuisance shall be erected, made, or done, may in peaceable manner assemble a meet company, with necessary tools, and may remove, pull, or cast down such nuisance, and that before any prejudice received thereby; and for that purpose, if need be, may also enter into another man's ground. Thus, a man erected a wear across a common river, where people have a common passage with their boats, and divers did assemble with spades, crows of iron, and other things necessary to remove the said wear, and make a trench in his land, that did erect the wear, to turn the water, so as they might the better take up the said wear, and they did remove the said nuisance; this was holden neither any forcible entry, nor yet any riot. (Dalt. c. 137.)

But in the cases aforesaid, if in removing any such nuisance the persons so assembled shall use any threatening words, (as to say they will do it though they die for it, or such like words,) or shall use any other behaviour, in apparent disturbance of the peace, then it seemeth to be a riot; and therefore, where there is cause to remove any such nuisance, or to do any like act, it is the safest not to assemble any multitude of people, but only to send one or two persons, or if a greater number, yet no more than are needful, and only with meet tools, to remove, pull, or cast down the same, and that such persons tend their business only, without disturbance of the peace, or threatening speeches. (Dalt. c. 137.)

Reading riot act.

It is not necessary that the riot act should be read to constitute a riot. Before the proclamation can be read, a riot must exist; and the effect of the proclamation will not change the character of the meeting, but make those guilty of a capital offence who do not disperse within one hour after the proclamation is read. (R. v. Furzey, 6 C. & P. 81.)

(a) But see in 2 Chit. Crim. L. 494, an ancient custom of kicking about footballs on Shrove Tuesday, at Kingston-upon-Thames. an indictment said to have been drawn in the year 1797 by a very eminent pleader, for the purpose of suppressing

Whether the act intended were of itself lawful or unlawful.]—It hath been generally holden that it is no way material, whether the act intended to be done by such an assembly be of itself lawful or unlawful: from whence it follows, that if three or more persons assist a man to make a forcible entry into lands, to which one of them has a good right of entry, or if the like number in a violent and tumultuous manner join together in removing a nuisance, or other thing which may lawfully be done in a peaceable manner, they are as properly rioters as if the act intended to be done by them were never so unlawful. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 7; Dalt. c. 137.)

III. Injuries by Rioters, &c.

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 8, "if any persons, riotously and tumultuously assembled together to the disturbance of the public peace, shall unlawfully and with force demolish, pull down, or destroy, or begin to demolish, pull down, or destroy, any church or chapel, or any chapel for the religious worship of persons dissenting from the United Church of England and Ireland, duly registered or recorded, or any house, stable, coach-house, outhouse, warehouse, office, shop, mill, malthouse, hop-oast, barn, or granary, or any building or erection used in carrying on any trade or manufacture, or any branch thereof, or any machinery, whether fixed or moveable, prepared for or employed in any manufacture, or in any branch thereof, or any steam-engine, or other engine, for sinking, draining, or working any mine, or any staith, building, or erection, used in conducting the business of any mine, or any bridge, waggon-way, or trunk for conveying minerals from any mine; every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon."

See the general clauses, "Malicious Injuries to Property," Vol. III.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals the 9 Geo. III. c. 29, 52 Geo. III. c. 130, and 56 Geo. III. c. 125, and so much of the 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 5, as relates to any rioters demolishing or pulling down, or beginning to demolish or pull down, any of the buildings therein mentioned.

It is not a "beginning to demolish" a house within the meaning of the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 8, unless the jury be satisfied that the ultimate object of the rioters was to demolish the house; and that if they had carried their intention into full effect, they would, in point of fact, have demolished it. For if the rioters merely do an injury to the house, and then go away, having completed their purpose, it is not a beginning to demolish within the statute. (R. v. Thomas, 4 C. & P. 237; R. v. Price, 5 C. & P. 510.)

Where a mob, after the obnoxious person had escaped, continued to attack a house until the police interfered, it was left to the jury to say, whether they had not the intention to demolish the house, as well as to injure the person; and the jury, being of that opinion, found the defendants guilty. (R. v. Batt, 6 C. & P. 329.)

IV. How Riots may be restrained by a Private Person.

How restrained
by a private person.

By the common law, any private person may lawfully endeavour to suppress a riot, by staying those whom he shall see engaged therein from executing their purpose, and also by stopping others whom he shall see coming to join them. However, it seems extremely hazardous for private persons to proceed to these extremities; and such violent methods seem only proper against such riots as savour of rebellion. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 11.)

In the riots of 1780, however, this matter was much misunderstood, and a general persuasion prevailed that no indifferent person could interpose without the authority of a magistrate; in consequence of which much mischief was done, which might otherwise have been prevented. So, there is a great difference between the right of a private person in a case of intended felony and of breach of the peace; it is lawful for a private person to do any thing to prevent the perpetration of a felony. (Vide per Heath, J., Handcock v. Baker, 2 B. & P. 264; ante, "Arrest," Vol. I. 266.)

V. How restrained by a Constable or other Peace Officer.

How restrained
by a constable.

By the common law, the sheriff, constable, and other peace officers, may and ought to do all that in them lies, towards the suppressing of a riot, and may command all other persons to assist therein. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 11.)

The 1 & 2 Wil. IV. c. 41, enables magistrates to appoint special constables on occasions of tumults, riots, or felonies, and enables those constables to act on such occasions, and contains other provisions relative thereto. These will be found collected under title "Constable," Vol. I.

VI. How restrained by one Justice.

How restrained by one justice.

By the common law, a justice of the peace has power to restrain rioters; and see R. v. Billingham, 4 D. & R. M. C. 127.

By the 34 Edw. III. c. 1, the justices of the peace shall have power to restrain rioters, and to arrest and chastise them according to their offences; and cause them to be imprisoned and duly punished according to the law and custom of the realm, and according to that which to them shall seem best to do, by their discretions and good advisement.

And this statute hath been liberally construed for the advancement of justice, for it hath been resolved, that if a justice find persons riotously assembled, he alone, without staying for his companions, hath not only power to arrest the offenders and bind them to their good behaviour, or imprison them if they do not offer good bail; but that he may also authorize others to arrest them by a bare verbal command, without other warrant; and that by force thereof, the person so commanded may pursue and arrest the offenders in his absence as well as presence. Also it is said, that, after a riot is over, any one justice may send his warrant to arrest any person who was concerned in it, and also that he may send him to gaol till he shall find sureties for his good behaviour. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 16.)

But it seems to be agreed that no one justice hath any power by force of this statute either to record a riot upon his own view, or to take an inquisition thereof after it is over. Also, if one justice, proceeding upon this statute, shall arrest an innocent person as a rioter, it seemeth that he is liable to an action of trespass, and that the party arrested may justify the rescuing himself, because no single justice is by this statute made a judge of the said offence. But if a riot shall be committed by persons armed in an unusual manner, contrary to the statute of Northampton, 2 Edw. III. c. 3, and any one justice acting ex officio, in pursuance of the statute, seize the armour, and imprison the offender, and make a record of the whole matter, such a record cannot be traversed, because it is made by one acting in a judicial capacity. And for the same reason, if a justice proceeding on the statute of the 15 Rich. II., against forcible entries and detainers, shall upon his own view record a riot, which shall be committed in the making of any such forcible entry or detainer, a riot so recorded cannot be traversed. Also, if a justice, acting as a judge by any statute whatsoever empowering him so to do, make a record upon his view of a riot committed in his presence, such record shall not be traversed; for the law gives such uncontrollable credit to all matters of record made by any judge of record as such, that it will never admit of an averment against the truth thereof. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 17.)

6. How restrained by one Justice.

But if the rioters are above the number of twelve, the offence is greatly enhanced, and the power of one justice very much enlarged, by the 1 Geo. I. st. 2, c. 5, commonly called the Riot Act, and intituled, "An Act for preventing Tumults and Riotous Assemblies, and for the more speedy and effectual punishing the Rioters." Sect. 1, after reciting, that "whereas of late many rebellious riots and tumults have been in divers parts of this kingdom, to the disturbance of the public peace, and the endangering of his majesty's person and government, and the same are yet continued and fomented by persons disaffected to his majesty, presuming so to do, for that the punishments provided by the laws now in being are not adequate to such heinous offences; and by such rioters his majesty and his administration have been most maliciously and falsely traduced, with an intent to raise divisions, and to alienate the affections of the people from his majesty; therefore, for the preventing and suppressing of such riots and tumults, and for the more speedy and effectual punishing the offenders therein:" enacts, "that if any persons, to the number of twelve or more, being unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously assembled together, to the disturbance of the public peace, at any time after the last day of July, in the year of our Lord 1715, and being required or commanded by any one or more justice or justices of the peace, or by the sheriff of the county, or his under-sheriff, or by the mayor, bailiff or bailiffs, or other head-officer, or justice of the peace of any city or town corporate, where such assembly shall be, by proclamation to be made in the king's name, in the form hereinafter directed, to disperse themselves and peaceably to depart to their habitations, or to their lawful business, shall, to the number of twelve or more (notwithstanding such proclamation made), unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously remain or continue together by the space of one hour after such command or request made by proclamation, that then such continuing together to the number of twelve or more, after such command or request made by proclamation, shall be adjudged felony without benefit of clergy, and the offenders therein shall be adjudged felons, and shall suffer death as in case of felony, without benefit of clergy." (See as to clergy, which is now abolished, "Clergy," Vol. I.)

Rioters remaining one hour after proclamation, shall be adjudged felons.

If the proclamation be read several times, the hour is to be computed from the first reading. (R. v. Woolcock, 5 C. & P. 516.)

If there be such an assembly that there would have been a riot if the parties had carried their purpose into effect, this is within the act, and whether there was a cessation or not is a question for a jury. (Id.)

Sect. 2. "The order and form of the proclamation that shall be made by the authority of this act, shall be as hereafter followeth (that is to say), the justice of the peace, or other person authorized by this act to make the said proclamation, shall, among the said rioters, or as near to them as he can safely come, with a loud voice command, or cause to be commanded, silence to be, while proclamation is making, and after that shall openly and with loud voice make or cause to be made proclamation in these words, or like in effect:—

How the proclamation shall be made.

"Our sovereign lord the king chargeth and commandeth all persons, being assembled, immediately to disperse themselves, and peaceably to depart to their habitations, or to their lawful business, upon the pains contained in the act made in the first year of King George, for preventing tumults and riotous assemblies. "God save the King."

The proclamation.

6. How restrained by one Justice.

Justices, &c., to resort to the place.

Persons so assembled, and not dispersing within an hour, to be seized.

And if they make resistance, the persons killing them, &c. to be indemnified.

Opposing the proclamation, felony.

And persons so assembled, if the proclamation be hindered, shall

“And every such justice and justices of the peace, sheriff, under-sheriff, mayor, bailiff, and other head-officer aforesaid, within the limits of their respective jurisdictions, are hereby authorized, empowered, and required, on notice or knowledge of any such unlawful, riotous, and tumultuous assembly, to resort to the place where such unlawful, riotous, and tumultuous assemblies shall be, of persons to the number of twelve or more, and there to make or cause to be made proclamation in manner aforesaid.”

Great care must be taken in reading the proclamation correctly. Thus, if in reading it the magistrate omit the words “God save the King” at the end of it, persons remaining together for an hour after such reading of the proclamation, cannot be capitally convicted under the act. (R. v. Child and others, 4 C. & P. 442.)

Where the indictment omitted the words “of the reign of,” in setting out the proclamation, which were contained in such proclamation, Patteson, J., held the variance to be fatal. (R. v. Woolcock, 5 C. & P. 516.) Those words are not in the form given by the act.

Sect. 3. “If such persons so unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously assembled, or twelve or more of them, after proclamation made in manner aforesaid, shall continue together and not disperse themselves within one hour, that then it shall and may be lawful to and for every justice of the peace, sheriff, or under-sheriff of the county where such assembly shall be, and also to and for every high or petty constable, and other peace-officer within such county, and also to and for every mayor, justice of the peace, sheriff, bailiff, and other head-officer, high or petty constable, and other peace-officer of any city or town corporate where such assembly shall be, and to and for such other person and persons as shall be commanded to be assisting unto any such justice of the peace, sheriff, or under-sheriff, mayor, bailiff, or other head-officer aforesaid (who are hereby authorized and empowered to command all his majesty’s subjects of age and ability to be assisting to them therein), to seize and apprehend, and they are hereby required to seize and apprehend such persons so unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously continuing together after proclamation made, as aforesaid, and forthwith to carry the persons so apprehended before one or more of his majesty’s justices of the peace of the county or place where such persons shall be so apprehended, in order to their being proceeded against for such their offences, according to law; and that if the persons so unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously assembled, or any of them, shall happen to be killed, maimed, or hurt, in the dispersing, seizing, or apprehending, or endeavouring to disperse, seize, or apprehend them, by reason of their resisting the persons so dispersing, seizing, or apprehending, or endeavouring to disperse, seize, or apprehend them, that then every such justice of the peace, sheriff, under-sheriff, mayor, bailiff, head-officer, high or petty constable, or other peace-officer, and all and singular persons, being aiding and assisting to them, or any of them, shall be free, discharged, and indemnified, as well against the king’s majesty, his heirs, and successors, as against all and every other person and persons, of, for, or concerning the killing, maiming, or hurting of any such person or persons so unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously assembled, that shall happen to be so killed, maimed, or hurt, as aforesaid.”

Sect. 5. “If any person or persons do or shall, with force and arms, wilfully and knowingly oppose, obstruct, or in any manner wilfully and knowingly let, hinder, or hurt, any person or persons that shall begin to proclaim or go to proclaim, according to the proclamation hereby directed to be made, whereby such proclamation shall not be made, that then every such opposing, obstructing, letting, hindering, or hurting such person or persons, so beginning or going to make such proclamation, as aforesaid, shall be adjudged felony without benefit of clergy, and the offenders therein shall be adjudged felons, and shall suffer death as in case of felony, without benefit of clergy; and that also every such person or persons so being unlawfully, riotously, and tumultuously assembled, to the number of twelve, as aforesaid, or more, to whom proclamation should or ought to have been made if the same had not been hindered, as aforesaid, shall likewise, in case they or any of them, to the number of twelve or more, shall continue together, and not 7. How re- and shall suffer death as in case of felony, without benefit of clergy." (As to clergy, which is now abolished, see "Clergy," Vol. I.)

Sect. 7. "This act shall be openly read at every quarter session, and at every leet or law-day."

Sect. 8. "No person or persons shall be prosecuted by virtue of this act, for any offence or offences committed contrary to the same, unless such prosecution be commenced within twelve months after the offence committed."

Sect. 9. "The sheriffs and their deputies, stewards and their deputies, bailies of regalities and their deputies, magistrates of royal boroughs, and all other inferior judges and magistrates, and also all high and petty constables, or other peace officers of any county, stewartry, city, or town, within that part of Great Britain called Scotland, shall have the same powers and authority for putting this present act in execution within Scotland, as the justices of the peace and other magistrates aforesaid respectively have by virtue of this act, within and for the other parts of this kingdom; and that all and every person and persons who shall at any time be convicted of any of the offences aforementioned, within that part of Great Britain called Scotland, shall for every such offence incur and suffer the pain of death, and confiscation of moveables: and also that all prosecutions for repairing the damages of any church or chapel, or any building for religious worship, or any dwelling-house, barn, stable, or out-house which shall be demolished or pulled down in whole or in part, within Scotland, by any persons unlawfully, riotously, or tumultuously assembled, shall and may be recovered by summary action, at the instance of the party aggrieved, his or her heirs, or executors, against the county, stewartry, city, or borough respectively, where such disorders shall happen, the magistrates being summoned in the ordinary form, and the several counties and stewartries called by edictal citation at the market-cross of the headborough of such county or stewartry respectively, and that in general, without mentioning their names and designations."

Sect. 10. "This act shall extend to all places for religious worship, in that part of Great Britain called Scotland, which are tolerated by law, and where his majesty king George, the Prince and Princess of Wales, and their issue, are prayed for in express words."

VII. How restrained by Two Justices.

By the 13 Hen. IV. c. 7, s. 1, if any riot, assembly, or rout of people, 13 Hen. 4, c. 7. against the law be made, the justices, three or two of them at the least, and the sheriff, or under sheriff, shall come with the power of the county if need be.

And by the 2 Hen. V. c. 8, s. 2, the king's liege people, being sufficient 2 Hen. 5, c. 8.
 to travel, shall be assistants to them, upon reasonable warning, to ride with them in aid to resist such riots, routs, and assemblies, on pain of imprisonment, and to make fine and ransom to the king.

If any Riot, Assembly, or Rout of People, against the Law, be made.]—It is said that the justices are not only empowered hereby to raise the power of the county to assist them in suppressing a riot, which shall happen within their own view or hearing, but also that they may safely do it, upon a credible information given them of a notorious riot happening at a distance, whether there were any such riot in truth or not; for it may be dangerous for them to stay till they can get certain information of the fact: but they seem to be punishable for alarming the country in this manner, without such probable ground for their proceeding as would induce a reasonable man to think it necessary and convenient. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 22.)

Assembly.]—It seems clear from hence, that if the justices, in going towards the place where they have heard that there is a riot, shall meet persons coming from thence riotously arrayed, they may arrest them for being assembled together in such an unlawful manner, and also make a record thereof; for the statute extends to all other unlawful assemblies whatsoever, as well as to riots. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 22.)

7. How restrained by two Justices.

The King's liege People.—Except women, clergymen, persons decrepit, and infants under the age of fifteen.

To resist such Riots.—And also to arrest the rioters, and conduct them to prison.

And shall arrest them.—13 Hen. IV. c. 7, s. 1.

And, if they shall escape, they may take them on a fresh pursuit; but they cannot at another time award any process against them on the record, but ought to send the record into the King's Bench, that process may issue thereon from thence: yet there seems to be no doubt but that they may arrest them for their trespass on the aforesaid statute (34 Edw. III.), in order to compel them to find sureties for their good behaviour. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 24.)

13 Hen. 4, c. 7.

And by the 13 Hen. IV. c. 7, s. 1, the same justices and sheriff, or under-sheriff, shall have power to record (a) that which they shall find so done in their presence against the law; by which record the offenders shall be convicted in the same manner and form as is contained in the statute of Forcible Entries (b).

Shall have Power to record.—And this they may do, whether the offenders be in custody at the same time, or have escaped. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 24.)

Shall be convicted.—And it seemeth to be certain that the record of a riot, expressly mentioned to have happened within the view of the justices by whom it is recorded, is a conviction of so great authority, that it can no way be traversed, however little ground of truth there might be to affirm that any riot at all was committed, or however innocent the parties may be of the fact recorded against them. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 25.)

However, it seemeth clear that if, in such a record of a riot, it be contained that the party was guilty therein of a felony, or maim, or rescous, the party shall be concluded thereby as to the riot only, and not as to any of the other matters; because the justices have by this statute a judicial authority over no other offences except riots, routs, and unlawful assemblies. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 26.)

And, inasmuch as such a final record is a conviction of the parties, as to all such matters as are properly contained in it, it ought to be certain both as to the time and place of the offence, and the number of persons concerned therein, and the several kinds of weapons made use of by them, and all other circumstances of the fact: for, since the parties are excluded from denying the truth of such record, and have no other remedy to defend themselves against it, but only by advantage of the insufficiency of what is contained in it, they may justly demand the benefit of excepting to it, if it do not expressly show both that they are guilty within the meaning of the statute, and also how far they are guilty, and that the justices have pursued the power so given them by the said statute. From the same ground it seems also to follow, that such a record may be excepted against, if it do not appear to have been made by the sheriff or under-sheriff, in concurrence with the justices. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 26.)

And this record ought to remain with one of the justices, and shall not be left amongst the records of the sessions; it being made out of sessions, and not appointed to be certified thither. (Dalt. c. 82.)

In the same Manner and Form as is contained in the Statute of Forcible Entries.—That is, the statute of the 15 Rich. II. c. 2. And thereupon it is said that the offenders, being under the arrest of the justices, and also convicted by a record of their offence, ought immediately to be committed to gaol by the same justices, till they shall make fine and ransom to the king; which can be assessed by no other justices of the peace except those by whom the record of the offence was made. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 28.) 7. How restrained by two Justices.

And this fine, Mr. Dalton (c. 82) says, the justices shall cause to be estreated into the Exchequer, that so it may be levied to the king's use; and then they are to deliver the offenders again.

But Mr. Hawkins says, that it hath been questioned whether the justices can safely dismiss the offenders upon their paying such a fine as shall be imposed upon them, without some judgment for their imprisonment as well as fine: because it is enacted by the 2 Hen. VIII. c. 8, that such rioters attainted of great and heinous riots shall have one whole year's imprisonment at the least, without being let out of prison by bail or mainprize; and that the rioters attainted of petty riots shall have imprisonment as best shall seem to the king or to his council. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 35.)

And, by the 13 Hen. IV. c. 7, s. 1, if the offenders be departed before the coming of the said justices and sheriff, or under-sheriff, the same justices, three or two of them, shall diligently inquire (a) within a month after such riot, assembly, or rout of people so made, and thereof shall hear and determine according to the law of the land. 13 Hen. 4, c. 7.

The same Justices.—It is generally said that any justices of the county may take such an inquiry, whether they dwell near the place where the riot happened, or at a distance, or whether they went to view the riot or not: for the statute ought to be construed as largely as the words will bear in favour of the justices' power in the suppressing of such riots; and therefore those words in the statute, "that the same justices shall inquire," ought to be thus expounded: that the same justices who were before empowered to raise the posse shall inquire, and that is, any justices in the county. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 32.)

Shall diligently inquire.—This is, by a jury; in order to which it is enacted by the 19th Hen. VII. c. 13, that the sheriff, on their precept directed to him, shall, on pain of 20*l.*, return twenty-four persons, whereof every of them shall have lands and tenements within the shire to the yearly value of 20*s.* of charter-land or freehold, or 26*s. 8d.* of copyhold, or of both, over and above all charges; and he shall return upon every juror in issues, at the first, 20*s.*, and at the second, 40*s.* 19 Hen. 7, c. 13.

Note.—Charter-land had its name from a particular form in the charter or deed, which, ever since the reign of Henry VIII., hath been disused. (1 Inst. 6.)

Within a Month.—That is, if they do not make inquiry within a month, they are punishable for the neglect. Yet they may inquire after the month; for the lapse of a month doth not determine their authority, but only subjects them to a penalty. (R. v. Ingram, 2 Salk. 593; 1 Lord Raym. 215, S. C.)

Shall hear and determine according to the Law of the Land.—And therefore they may award process under their own teste against those who shall be indicted before them of any of the offences above mentioned, according to the form of this statute; and also may award the like process for the trial of a traverse of such an inquisition; and do all other things in relation thereunto, which are of course incident to all courts of record. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 34.)

And the riot being so found by inquisition, the justices must make a record thereof in writing of such their inquiry or presentment found before them; which record also is to remain with one of the justices. (Dalt. c. 82.)

And, by the 13 Hen. IV. c. 7, s. 2, if the truth cannot be found in the manner as is aforesaid, then, within a month then next following, the justices, three or two of them, and the sheriff or under-sheriff, shall certify before the king and his council all the deed and circumstances thereof, which certificate shall be of the like force as the presentment of twelve men; upon which certificate the offender shall be put to answer, and shall be punished according to the discretion of the king and his council. 13 Hen. 4, c. 7.

19 Hen. 7, c. 13.

Sect. 3. And, if they do traverse the matter so certified, the certificate and traverse shall be sent into the King's Bench to be tried.

And, by the 19 Hen. VII. c. 13, if the offence be not found, by reason of any maintenance or embracery of the jurors, then the same justices and sheriff, or under-sheriff, shall, in the same certificate, certify the names of the maintainers and embracers, with their misdemeanors.

Shall certify.—And it seemeth certain that such certificate, being in nature of an indictment at the common law, ought to comprehend the certainty of time, place, and persons, and other material circumstances, both of the riot and maintenance. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 13.)

Before the King and his Council.—It seems clear, by the council being here distinguished both from the Chancery and King's Bench, that the certificate ought to be made to the privy council board, and not to either of those courts, which, in some statutes relating to judicial proceedings, are taken for the king's council. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 41.)

2 Hen. 5, c. 8.

And, by the 2 Hen. V. c. 8, the said justices and other officers shall execute their offices aforesaid at the king's costs, in going and continuing in doing their said offices, by payment thereof to be made by the sheriff, by indentures betwixt the said sheriff and justices, and other officers aforesaid, whereof the sheriff, upon his account in the Exchequer, shall have due allowance.

In order to the defraying of which, the said statute directs the fines of the offenders to be enlarged, and thereout the sheriff may pay the charges of the said justices, and of the jury, that is, for their diet, and the sheriff's fees, and the like. (Dalt. c. 82.)

Sect. 4. And the justices dwelling nighest in the county where such riot, assembly, or rout shall be, together with the sheriff or under-sheriff, shall do execution of the said statute of the 13 Hen. IV., every one upon pain of 100*l.* to the king.

The Justices dwelling nighest.—Although these only are liable to this penalty, yet if any others, on notice, shall neglect to supply their default, they are fineable at discretion. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 48.)

But if any justices, who do not dwell nearest to the place, do actually execute the statute, they excuse all the rest. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 46.)

Dwelling nighest in the County.—Therefore, if they dwell nighest, but in another county, they are not in danger of this penalty. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 45.)

Shall do Execution of the said Statute.—That is, in the whole, and not in part only; as by recording a riot, and committing the parties. (1 Haw. c. 65, s. 50.)

Alehouses.

By the 9 Geo. IV. c. 61, s. 20, and 1 Wil. IV. c. 64, two justices may order the closing of doors of public-houses and beer-houses during riots. (See "Alehouse," Vol. I.)

VIII. How by Process out of Chancery.

2 Hen. 5, c. 8.

By the 2 Hen. V. c. 8, if default be found in the two justices, sheriff, or under-sheriff, then, at the instance of the party grieved, a commission shall be issued under the great seal, to inquire as well of the truth of the case for the complainant, as of such default.

2 Hen. 5, c. 9.

8 Hen. 6, c. 14.

And by the 2 Hen. V. c. 9, and 8 Hen. VI. c. 14, rioters shall be taken by writ and proclamation out of chancery, on suggestion of two justices and the sheriff, of the common fame of such riot.

By the 39 Geo. III. c. 79, s. 1, after reciting that a traitorous conspiracy had long been carried on in conjunction with the person exercising the powers of government in France, to overturn the laws and government in Great Britain and Ireland, it is enacted, that all societies, calling themselves United Englishmen, United Scotchmen, United Irishmen, and United Britons, and the society commonly called the London Corresponding Society, and all other corresponding societies of any other city, town, or place, shall be suppressed and prohibited. (See the 57 Geo. III. c. 19, post, 349.)

9. Seditious Meetings, &c.

Sect. 2. "From and after the passing of this act, all and every the said societies, and also every other society now established, or hereafter to be established, the members whereof shall, according to the rules thereof, or to any provision or agreement for that purpose, be required or admitted to take any oath or engagement, which shall be an unlawful oath or engagement within the intent and meaning of an act, passed in the thirty-seventh year of his majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act for more effectually preventing the administering or taking of Unlawful Oaths,' [see this act, title "Oaths," Vol. III.] or to take any oath not required or authorized by law; and every society, the members whereof, or any of them, shall take, or in any manner bind themselves by any such oath or engagement, on becoming or in consequence of being members of such society; and every society, the members whereof shall take, subscribe, or assent, to any test or declaration not required by law, or not authorized in manner hereinafter mentioned; and every society, of which the names of the members, or of any of them, shall be kept secret from the society at large, or which shall have any committee or select body so chosen or appointed, that the members constituting the same shall not be known by the society at large to be members of such committee or select body, or which shall have any president, treasurer, secretary, delegate, or other officer so chosen or appointed, that the election or appointment of such persons to such offices shall not be known to the society at large, or of which the names of all the members, and of all committees or select bodies of members, and of all presidents, treasurers, secretaries, delegates, and other officers, shall not be entered in a book or books to be kept for that purpose, and to be open to the inspection of all the members of such society; and every society which shall be composed of different divisions or branches, or of different parts, acting in any manner separately or distinct from each other, or of which any part shall have any separate or distinct president, secretary, treasurer, delegate, or other officer, elected or appointed by or for such part, or to act as an officer for such part; shall be deemed and taken to be unlawful combinations and confederacies; and every person who, from and after the passing of this act, shall become a member of any such society, or who, being a member of any such society at the passing of this act, shall afterwards act as a member thereof; and every person who, after the passing of this act, shall directly or indirectly maintain correspondence or intercourse with any such society, or with any division, branch, committee, or other select body, president, treasurer, secretary, delegate, or other officer, or member thereof as such, or who shall, by contribution of money or otherwise, aid, abet, or support such society, or any members or officers thereof as such; shall be deemed guilty of an unlawful combination and confederacy."

All societies shall be deemed unlawful, the members whereof shall be required to take any oath unlawful under 37 Geo. 3, c. 123, or any oath, test, &c., not authorized by law; or which shall have any members, committees, &c., not known to the society at large; or the names of all the members whereof shall not be entered in regular books; or which shall act in separate or distinct branches; and members thereof, and persons corresponding with or supporting them, guilty of an unlawful combination.

Sect. 3. "Nothing herein contained shall extend to any declaration to be taken, subscribed, or assented to by the members of any society, in case the form of such declaration shall have been first approved and subscribed by two or more of his majesty's justices of the peace for the county, stewartry, riding, division, or place, where such society shall ordinarily assemble, and shall have been registered with the clerk of the peace, or his deputy, for such county, stewartry, riding, division, or place, for which there shall be paid a fee of 1s. and no more; but that such approbation of the justices as aforesaid shall remain valid and effectual no longer than until the next general session for such county, stewartry, riding, division, or place, unless the same shall, on application made by the parties concerned, be confirmed by the major part of the justices present at such general session; and if the same shall not be then and there so confirmed, the provisions of this act shall from thenceforth extend to such declaration, and to all societies or persons sub-

Act shall not extend to declarations approved by two justices, and registered with the clerk of the peace; provided such approbation be confirmed at the next general quarter sessions.

9. Seditious Meetings, &c.

39 Geo. 3, c. 79.

Former members not acting after passing this act, not liable to penalty.

Not to extend to regular lodges of Freemasons held before passing of this act ;

but two members of each lodge shall certify the same on oath, and deposit such certificate within two months with the clerk of the peace, with whom the name of the society, the names of the members, and the time and place of meeting, shall be registered before March 25, yearly.

Clerk of peace to lay such certificate and registry before the general session yearly, who may order any lodge to be discontinued, if likely to be injurious to the public peace.

Justices on oath of an unlawful meeting being held, may declare the licence of the house forfeited (a).

scribing the same, in so far as may relate to all acts which may be done by them, or any of them, subsequent to the holding of such general session."

Sect. 4. "No person who, at or before the passing of this act, shall be, or shall have been a member of any such society, shall be liable to any pain or penalty for having been a member of such society at or before the passing of this act, in case such person shall not in any manner act as a member of such society at any time after the passing of this act."

Sect. 5. "And whereas certain societies have been long accustomed to be holden in this kingdom under the denomination of lodges of Freemasons, the meetings whereof have been in great measure directed to charitable purposes ;" it is enacted, "that nothing in this act shall extend to the meetings of any such society or lodge, which shall, before the passing of this act, have been usually holden under the said denomination and in conformity to the rules prevailing among the said societies of Freemasons."

Sect. 6. "This exemption shall not extend to any such society, unless two of the members composing the same shall certify, upon oath, (which oath any justice of the peace or other magistrate is hereby empowered to administer,) that such society or lodge has, before the passing of this act, been usually held under the denomination of a lodge of Freemasons, and in conformity to the rules prevailing among the societies or lodges of Freemasons in this kingdom ; which certificate, duly attested by the magistrate before whom the same shall be sworn, and subscribed by the person so certifying, shall, within the space of two calendar months after the passing of this act, be deposited with the clerk of the peace for the county, stewartry, riding, division, shire, or place, where such society or lodge hath been usually held : provided, also, that this exemption shall not extend to any such society or lodge, unless the name or denomination thereof, and the usual place or places, and the time or times of its meetings, and the names and descriptions of all and every the members thereof, be registered with such clerk of the peace as aforesaid, within two months after the passing of this act, and also on or before the twenty-fifth day of March in every succeeding year."

Sect. 7. "The clerk of the peace, or the person acting in his behalf, in any such county, stewartry, riding, division, shire, or place, is hereby authorized and required to receive such certificate, and make such registry as aforesaid, and to enrol the same among the records of such county, stewartry, riding, division, shire, or place, and to lay the same, once in every year, before the general session of the justices for such county, stewartry, riding, division, shire, or place ; and that it shall and may be lawful for the said justices, or for the major part of them, at any of their general sessions, if they shall so think fit, upon complaint made to them, upon oath, by any one or more credible persons, that the continuance of the meetings of any such lodge or society is likely to be injurious to the public peace and good order, to direct that the meetings of any such society or lodge within such county, stewartry, riding, division, shire, or place, shall from henceforth be discontinued ; and any such meeting held, notwithstanding such order of discontinuance, and before the same shall, by the like authority, be revoked, shall be deemed an unlawful combination and confederacy under the provisions of this act."

Sect. 14. "It shall be lawful for any two or more justices of the peace, acting for any county, stewartry, riding, division, city, town, or place, upon evidence on oath, that any meeting of any society, hereby declared to be an unlawful combination and confederacy, or any meeting for any seditious purpose, hath been held, after the passing of this act, at any house, room, or place, licensed for the sale of ale, beer, wine, or spirituous liquors, to adjudge and declare the licence or licences for selling ale, beer, wine, or spirituous liquors, granted to the person or persons keeping such house, room, or place, to have been forfeited ; and the person or persons so keeping such house, room, or place, shall, from and after the day of the date of such adjudication and declaration, be subject and liable to all and every the penalties and forfeitures for any act done after that day, which such person or persons would be subject and liable to, if such licence or licences had expired, or otherwise determined on that day."

Sect. 15. "And whereas divers places have of late been used for delivering lectures or discourses, and holding debates, which are not within the provisions of the act, passed in the 36th year of his majesty's reign, for the more effectually preventing seditious meetings and assemblies (a), but which lectures, discourses, or debates, have in many instances been of a seditious and immoral nature; and other places for the purpose of reading books, pamphlets, newspapers, or other publications; be it further enacted, that every house, room, field, or other place, at or in which any lecture or discourse shall be publicly delivered, or any public debate shall be had on any subject whatever, for the purpose of raising or collecting money or any other valuable thing from the persons admitted, or to which any person shall be admitted by payment of money, or by any ticket or token of any kind delivered in consideration of money or any other valuable thing, or in consequence of paying or giving, or having paid or given, or having agreed to pay or give, in any manner, any money or other valuable thing, or where any money or other valuable thing shall be received from any person admitted either under pretence of paying for any refreshment or other thing, or under any other pretence, or for any other cause, or by means of any device or contrivance whatever; and every house, room, or place, which shall be opened or used as a place of meeting, for the purpose of reading books, pamphlets, newspapers, or other publications, and to which any person shall be admitted by payment of money, or by any ticket or token of any kind delivered in consideration of money or other valuable thing, or in consequence of paying or giving, or having paid or given, or having agreed to pay or give, any money, or other valuable thing, or where any money or other valuable thing shall be received from any person admitted either under pretence of paying for any refreshment or other thing, or under any other pretence, or for any other cause, or by means of any device or contrivance whatever; shall be deemed a disorderly house or place, within the intent and meaning of the said act, passed in the 36th year of his majesty's reign, for the more effectually preventing seditious meetings and assemblies, unless the same shall have been previously licensed in manner hereinafter mentioned; and the person by whom such house, room, field, or place, shall be opened or used, for any of the purposes aforesaid, shall forfeit the sum of 100*l.* for every day or time that such house, room, field, or place, shall be opened or used as aforesaid to such person as shall sue for the same, and be otherwise punished as the law directs in cases of disorderly houses; and every person managing or conducting the proceedings, or acting as moderator, president, or chairman, at such house, room, field, or place, so opened or used as aforesaid, or therein debating, or delivering any discourse or lecture, or furnishing or delivering any book, pamphlet, newspaper, or other publication as aforesaid; and also every person who shall pay, give, collect, or receive, or agree to pay, give, collect or receive, any money, or any thing, for or in respect of the admission of any person into any such house, room, field, or place, or shall deliver out, distribute, or receive any such ticket or tickets, or token or tokens as aforesaid, knowing such house, room, field, or place to be opened or used for any such purpose aforesaid, shall, for every such offence, forfeit the sum of 20*l.*"

Sect. 16. "Any person who shall at any time hereafter appear, act, or behave him or herself as master or mistress, or as the person having the command, government, or management of any such house, room, field, or place

Sect. 17. "It shall be lawful for any justice or justices of the peace of any county, stewardry, city, borough, town, or place, who shall, by information upon oath, have reason to suspect that any house, room, field, or place, or any parts or part thereof, are or is opened or used for the purpose of delivering lectures or discourses, or for public debate, or for the purpose of reading books, pamphlets, newspapers, or other publications, contrary to the provisions of this act, to go to such house, room, field, or place, and demand to be admitted therein; and in case such justice or justices shall be refused admittance to such house, room, field, or place, or any part thereof, the same shall be deemed a disorderly house or place, within the intent and meaning of this act, and of the said recited act of the 36th year aforesaid [chap. 8, ante, 345]; and all and every the provisions hereinbefore, and in the said recited act contained, respecting any house, room, field, or place, therein or hereinbefore declared to be a disorderly house or place, shall be applied to such house, room, field, or place, where such admittance shall have been refused as aforesaid; and every person refusing such admittance shall forfeit the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 18. "It shall be lawful for two or more justices of the peace for the county, stewardry, city, borough, town, or place, where any house, room, or other building, shall be intended to be opened for any of the purposes aforesaid, by writing under their hands and seals, at their general sessions of the peace, or at any special session to be held for the particular purpose, to grant a licence to any person or persons desiring the same, to open such house, room, or other building, for the purpose of delivering for money any such lectures or discourses as aforesaid, on any subjects, the same being clearly expressed in such licence, or for the purpose of reading books, pamphlets, newspapers, or other publications; for which licence a fee of 1*s*., and no more, shall be paid, and the same shall be in force for the space of one year, and no longer, or for any less space of time, therein to be specified; and which licence it shall be lawful for the justices of the peace of the same county, stewardry, city, borough, town, or place, at any general sessions of the peace, to revoke and declare void, and no longer in force, by any order of such justices; a copy whereof shall be delivered to, or served upon the person to whom the said licence so revoked shall have been granted, or shall be left at the house, room, or building, for which such licence shall have been granted; and thereupon such licence shall cease and determine, and be thenceforth utterly void and of no effect."

Sect. 19. "It shall be lawful for any justice or justices of the peace of any county, stewardry, city, borough, town, or place, where any such house, room, or other building shall be licensed, as herein provided, to go to such house, room, or building, so licensed, at the time of delivering any such lecture or discourse therein as aforesaid, or at the time appointed for delivering any such lecture or discourse, or whilst such house, room, or building shall be opened or used, or during the time appointed for using the same as a place for reading books, pamphlets, newspapers, or other publications as aforesaid, and demand to be admitted therein; and in case such justice or justices shall be refused admittance to such house, room, or building, the same shall be deemed, notwithstanding any such licence as aforesaid, a disorderly house or place within the meaning of this act; and all and every the provisions hereinbefore contained, respecting any house, room, field, or place, hereinbefore declared to be a disorderly house or place, shall be applied to such house, room, or building so licensed as aforesaid, where such admittance shall have been refused as aforesaid; and every person refusing such admittance shall forfeit the sum of 20*l*."

Sect. 20. "It shall be lawful for any two justices of the peace acting for any county, stewardry, riding, division, city, town, or place, upon evidence, on oath, that any house, room, or place, so licensed and opened as aforesaid, is commonly used for the purpose of delivering there lectures or discourses of a seditious or immoral tendency, or that books, pamphlets, newspapers, or other publications of a seditious or immoral nature, are there commonly kept and delivered to be read, to adjudge and declare the licence for opening the same to have been forfeited; and such licence shall thereupon cease and determine, and shall thenceforth be utterly void and of no effect."

Sect. 21. "Every house, room, or place, licensed for the sale of ale, beer, wine, or spirituous liquors, shall also be deemed a house or place licensed for the purpose of reading books, pamphlets, and other publications, within the intent and meaning of this act; but nevertheless it shall be lawful to and for any two or more justices of the peace for the county, stewartry, riding, division, city, borough, town, or place, where such house, room, or place shall be, upon evidence on oath that books, pamphlets, or other publications of a seditious or immoral nature are usually distributed, for the purpose of being read at such house, room, or place, to adjudge and declare the licence or licences for selling ale, beer, wine, or spirituous liquors, under the authority whereof such house, room, or place shall be used for the purpose of selling ale, beer, wine, or spirituous liquors, to have been forfeited [Form No. 11, post], and the person or persons so keeping such house, room, or place, shall, from and after the day of the date of such adjudication and declaration, be subject and liable to all and every the penalties and forfeitures which such person or persons would be subject and liable to, if such licence or licences had expired, or otherwise determined, on that day, for any act done after that day."

Sect. 22. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to extend to any lecture or discourses to be delivered in any of the universities of these kingdoms, by any member thereof, or any person authorized by the chancellor, vice-chancellor, or other proper officers of such universities respectively, or to any lecture or discourse to be delivered in the public hall of any of the inns of court or chancery, by any person authorized by the benchers of the inns of court, or by the professors in Gresham College; and that no payment made to any schoolmaster, or other person by law allowed to teach and instruct youth, in respect of any lectures or discourses delivered by such schoolmaster, or other person, for the instruction only of such youth as shall be committed to his instruction, shall be deemed a payment of money for admission to such lectures or discourses, within the intent and meaning of this act."

Sect. 13. "If any person shall knowingly permit any meeting of any society hereby declared to be an unlawful combination or confederacy, or of any division, branch or committee of such society, to be held in his or her house or apartment, such person shall, for the first offence, forfeit the sum of 5*l.*, and shall, for any such offence committed after the date of his or her conviction for such first offence, be deemed guilty of an unlawful combination and confederacy in breach of this act."

Sect. 8. "Every person who, at any time after the passing of this act, shall in breach of the provisions thereof, be guilty of any such unlawful combination and confederacy, as in this act is described, shall and may be proceeded against for such offence in a summary way, either before one or more justice or justices of the peace for the county, stewartry, riding, division, city, town, or place, where such person shall happen to be, or by indictment to be preferred in the county, riding, division, city, town, or place in England wherein such offence shall be committed, or by indictment in the court of justiciary, or in any of the circuit courts in Scotland, if the offence shall be committed in Scotland; and every person being convicted [Form No. 12, post] of any such offence, on the oath of one or more credible witness or witnesses, by such justice or justices as aforesaid, shall be by him or them committed to the common gaol or house of correction for such county, stewartry, riding, division, city, town, or place, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, for the term of three calendar months, or shall be by such justice or justices adjudged to forfeit and pay the sum of 20*l.*, as to such justice or justices shall seem meet; and in case such sum of money shall not be forthwith paid into the hands of such justice or justices, he or they shall, by warrant under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, together with all costs and charges attending such distress and sale; and for want of sufficient distress, shall commit such offender to the common gaol or house of correction of such county, stewartry, riding, division, city, town, or place as aforesaid, for any time not exceeding three calendar months; and every person convicted of any such offence upon indictment by due course of law, shall and may be transported for the term of seven years, in the manner provided by law for transportation of offenders, or imprisoned for any time not exceeding two years, as the court before whom such offender shall be tried shall think fit; and every such offender who shall be ordered to be transported, shall be subject and liable to all laws concerning offenders ordered to be transported."

Sect. 9. "It shall be lawful for the justice or justices of the peace, by or before whom any persons shall, in pursuance of this act, be convicted of any unlawful combination or confederacy, and such justice and justices is and are hereby authorized and empowered (if he or they shall see cause) to mitigate and lessen the punishment hereinbefore directed to be inflicted upon any offender against this act, so convicted as aforesaid, so as such punishment be not thereby reduced to less than one-third of the punishment hereby directed to be inflicted as aforesaid, whether such punishment shall be by imprisonment or fine."

Sect. 10. "Any person who shall be prosecuted before any justice or justices of the peace, in a summary way, for any offence against this act, and shall be convicted or acquitted by such justice or justices, shall not afterwards be prosecuted, or be liable to be prosecuted, by indictment or otherwise, for the same offence; and so in like manner any person who shall be convicted or acquitted upon any indictment for any offence against this act, shall not afterwards be prosecuted, or be liable to be prosecuted, before any justice or justices of the peace, in a summary way, for the same offence."

Sect. 11. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend to prevent any prosecution by indictment, or otherwise, for any thing which shall be an offence within the intent and meaning of this act, and which might have been so prosecuted if this act had not been made, unless the offender shall have been prosecuted for such offence under this act, and convicted or acquitted of such offence; save only, that no person shall be prosecuted for having been, before the passing of this act, a member of any such society hereby declared to be an unlawful combination and confederacy, if such person shall not in any manner have acted as a member of such society after the passing of this act."

Sect. 34. "No person shall be prosecuted or sued for any penalty imposed by this act, unless such prosecution shall be commenced, or such action shall be brought, within three calendar months next after such penalty shall have been incurred."

Sect. 35. "Any pecuniary penalty imposed by this act, exceeding the sum of 20*l.*, may be sued for and recovered, by any person who will sue for the same, by action of debt, in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, if such penalty shall have been incurred in England or Wales, or the town of Berwick-upon-Tweed, and in his majesty's Court of Exchequer in Scotland, if such penalty shall have been incurred in Scotland; in which action it shall be sufficient to declare or allege that the defendant is indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of 20*l.* (being the sum demanded by such action), being forfeited by an act made and passed in the 39th year of the reign of his majesty king George the Third, intituled, 'An Act' [here set forth the title of the act], and the plaintiff, if he shall recover in any such action, shall have his full costs; and any pecuniary penalty imposed by this act, and not exceeding the sum of 20*l.*, and for the recovery whereof no provision is hereinbefore contained, shall and may be recovered before any justice or justices of the peace for the county, stewartry, riding, division, city, town, or place, in which the same shall be incurred, or the person having incurred the same shall happen to be, in a summary way; and in case such last-mentioned penalty shall not be forthwith paid, such justice or justices shall, by warrant under his or their hand and seal, or hands and seals, and directed to any constable or other peace-officer, cause the same to be levied by distress and sale of the offender's goods and chattels, together with all costs and charges attending such distress and sale; and in case no sufficient distress can be had or made, such justice or justices shall commit the offender to the common gaol or house of correction for such county, stewartry, riding, division, city, borough, town, or place, there to remain, without bail or mainprize, for any time not exceeding six calendar months, nor less than three calendar months."

Sect. 36. "All pecuniary penalties and forfeitures imposed by this act shall, when recovered, either by action in any court, or in a summary way before any justice, be applied and disposed of in a manner hereinafter mentioned; that is to say, one moiety thereof to the plaintiff in any such action, or the informer before any justice, and the other moiety thereof to his majesty, his heirs, and successors."

Sect. 37. "Every action and suit which shall be brought or commenced against any justice or justices of the peace, constable, peace-officer, or other person or persons, for any thing done or acted in pursuance of this act, shall be commenced within three calendar months next after the fact committed, and not afterwards; and the venue in every such action or suit shall be laid in the proper county where the fact was committed, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in every such action or suit shall and may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon; and if such action or suit shall be brought or commenced after the time limited for bringing the same, or the venue shall be laid in any other place than as aforesaid, then the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant or defendants; and in such case, or if the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant or defendants upon the merits, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuit, or discontinue his, her, or their action after appearance, or if, upon demurrer, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall have double costs; which he or they shall and may recover in such and the same manner as any defendant can by law in other cases."

Sect. 38. "That convictions by any justice or justices of the peace, for offences against this act, and adjudications of forfeitures of licences to be made in pursuance of this act, and notices and certificates delivered and granted in pursuance of this act, shall or may be in the several forms [Forms No. 12, 13, post] set forth for such purposes respectively in the schedule to this act annexed."

By the 57 Geo. III. c. 19, s. 23 (a), reciting, that "it is highly inexpedient that public meetings or assemblies should be held near the houses of Parliament, or near his majesty's courts of justice in Westminster Hall, on such days as are hereinafter mentioned," it is enacted, "that it shall not be lawful for any person or persons to convene or call together, or to give any notice for convening or calling together, any meeting of persons consisting of more than fifty persons, or for any number of persons exceeding fifty, to meet in any street, square, or open place, in the city or liberties of Westminster, or county of Middlesex, within the distance of one mile from the gate of Westminster Hall, save and except such parts of the parish of St. Paul Covent Garden as are within the said distance, for the purpose or on the pretext of considering of or preparing any petition, complaint, remonstrance, declaration, or other address, to the king, or to his Royal Highness the Prince Regent, or to both houses or either house of Parliament, for alteration of matters in church or state, on any day on which the two houses or

Sect. 24, after reciting, that "divers societies or clubs have been instituted in the metropolis, and in various parts of this kingdom, of a dangerous nature and tendency, inconsistent with the public tranquillity, and the existence of the established government, laws, and constitution of the kingdom, and the members of many such societies or clubs have taken unlawful oaths and engagements of fidelity and secrecy, and have taken or subscribed, or assented to, illegal tests and declarations; and many of the said societies or clubs elect, appoint, or employ committees, delegates, representatives, or missionaries, of such societies or clubs, to meet, confer, communicate, or correspond, with other societies or clubs, or with delegates, representatives, or missionaries of such other societies or clubs, and to induce and persuade other persons to become members thereof, and, by such means, maintain an influence over large bodies of men, and delude many ignorant and unwary persons into the commission of acts highly criminal; and whereas certain societies or clubs, calling themselves Spenceans, or Spencean Philanthropists, hold and profess for their object the confiscation and division of the land, and the extinction of the funded property of the kingdom; and whereas it is expedient and necessary that all such societies and clubs, as aforesaid, should be utterly suppressed and prohibited, as unlawful combinations and confederacies, highly dangerous to the peace and tranquillity of this kingdom, and to the constitution of the government thereof, as by law established;" enacts, "that from and after the passing of this act, all societies or clubs calling themselves Spenceans or Spencean Philanthropists, and all other societies or clubs, by whatever name or description the same are called or known, who hold and profess, or who shall hold and profess, the same objects and doctrines, shall be, and the same are hereby, utterly suppressed and prohibited, as being unlawful combinations and confederacies against the government of our sovereign lord the king, and against the peace and security of his majesty's liege subjects."

Sect. 25. "From and after the passing of this act, all and every the said societies or clubs, and also all and every other society or club, now established or hereafter to be established, the members whereof shall be required or admitted to take any oath or engagement which shall be an unlawful engagement within the meaning of an act passed in the thirty-seventh year of his majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act for more effectually preventing the Administering and Taking of Unlawful Oaths,' or within the meaning of an act passed in the fifty-second year of his present majesty's reign, intituled, 'An Act to render more effectual an Act passed in the Thirty-seventh year of his present Majesty, for preventing the Administering and Taking of Unlawful Oaths,' or to take any oath not required or authorized by law; and every society or club, the members whereof, or any of them, shall take or in any manner bind themselves by any such oath or engagement, on becoming, or in order to become, or in consequence of being, a member or members of such society or club; and every society or club, the members or any member whereof shall be required or admitted to take, subscribe, or assent to, or shall take, subscribe, or assent to, any test or declaration not required or authorized by law, in whatever manner or form such taking or assenting shall be performed, whether by words, signs, or otherwise, either on becoming, or in order to become, or in consequence of being, a member or members of any such society or club; and every society or club that shall elect, appoint, nominate, or employ, any committee, delegate or delegates, representative or representatives, missionary or missionaries, to meet, confer, or communicate with any other society or club, or with any committee, delegate or delegates, representative or representatives, missionary or missionaries, of such other society or club, or to induce or persuade any person or persons to become members thereof, shall be deemed and taken to be unlawful combinations and confederacies, within the meaning of an act passed in the thirty-ninth year of the reign of his present majesty, intituled, 'An Act for the more effectual Suppression of Societies established for Seditious and Treasonable Purposes, and for better preventing Treasonable and Seditious Practices;' and shall and may be prosecuted, proceeded against, and punished, according to the provisions of the said act; and every person who, from and after the passing of this act, shall become a member of any such society or club, or who, after the passing of this act, shall act as a member thereof, and every person who, from and after the passing of this act, shall directly or indirectly maintain correspondence or intercourse with any such society or club, or with any committee or delegate, representative or missionary, or with any officer or member thereof, as such, or who shall, by contribution of money or otherwise, aid, abet, or support such society or club, or any members or officers thereof, as such, shall be deemed guilty of an unlawful combination and confederacy within the intent and meaning of the said act passed in the thirty-ninth year of his majesty's reign, 'For the more effectual Suppression of Societies established for Seditious and Treasonable Purposes, and for better preventing Treasonable and Seditious Practices;' and shall and may be proceeded against, prosecuted, and punished, according to the provisions of the said act, with regard to the prosecution and punishment of unlawful combinations and confederacies."

Sect. 26. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend, to any society or societies holden under the denomination of lodges of Freemasons, in conformity to the rules prevailing in such societies of Freemasons, provided such lodges shall comply with the rules and regulations contained in the said act of the thirty-ninth year of his present majesty, relating to such lodges of Freemasons; nor to any declaration to be taken, subscribed, or assented to by the members of any society, the form of which declaration shall have been first approved and subscribed by two or more justices of the peace, and confirmed by the major part of the justices present at a general session, or at a general quarter sessions of the peace, pursuant to the rules and regulations contained in the said act of the thirty-ninth year of his present majesty; nor shall extend or be construed to extend to any meeting or society of the people commonly called Quakers; or to any meeting or society formed or assembled for the purposes of a religious or charitable nature only, and in which no other matter or business whatsoever shall be treated of or discussed."

Sect. 27. "And whereas in the said act of the thirty-ninth year of the reign of his present majesty, it is amongst other things enacted, 'That every society which shall be composed of different divisions or branches, or of different parts acting in any manner separately or distinct from each other, or of which any part shall have any separate or distinct president, secretary, treasurer, delegate, or other officer elected or appointed by or for such part, or to act as an officer for such part, shall be deemed and taken to be unlawful combinations and confederacies;' " it is enacted, "that the said enactment shall not extend or be construed to extend to any meeting or society of the people commonly called Quakers, or to any meeting or society formed or assembled for purposes of a religious or charitable nature only, and in which no other matter or business whatsoever shall be treated of or discussed."

Sheriffs depute, &c., in Scotland,

By the 60 Geo. III. c. 1, intituled, "An Act to prevent the Training of Persons to the Use of Arms, and to the Practice of Military Evolutions and Exercise," [11th December, 1819,] sect. 1, after reciting, that, "in some parts of the United Kingdom, men clandestinely and unlawfully assembled have practised military training and exercise, to the great terror and alarm of his majesty's peaceable and loyal subjects, and the imminent danger of the public peace;" it is enacted, "that all meetings and assemblies of persons for the purpose of training or drilling themselves, or of being trained or drilled to the use of arms, or for the purpose of practising military exercise, movements, or evolutions, without any lawful authority from his majesty, or the lieutenant, or two justices of the peace for any county or riding, or of any stewardry, by commission or otherwise, for so doing, shall be, and the same are hereby prohibited, as dangerous to the peace and security of his majesty's liege subjects and of his government; and every person who shall be present at or attend any such meeting or assembly, for the purpose of training and drilling any other person or persons to the use of arms or the practice of military exercise, movements or evolutions, or who shall train or drill any other person or persons to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements, or evolutions, or who shall aid or assist therein, being legally convicted thereof, shall be liable to be transported for any term not exceeding seven years, or to be punished by imprisonment not exceeding two years, at the discretion of the court in which such conviction shall be had; and every person who shall attend or be present at any such meeting or assembly as aforesaid, for the purpose of being, or who shall at any such meeting or assembly be trained or drilled to the use of arms, or the practice of military exercise, movements, or evolutions, being legally convicted thereof, shall be liable to be punished by fine and imprisonment not exceeding two years, at the discretion of the court in which such conviction shall be had."

Sect. 2. "It shall be lawful for any justice of the peace, or for any constable or peace-officer, or for any other person acting in their aid or assistance, to disperse any such unlawful meeting or assembly as aforesaid, and to arrest and detain any person present at, or aiding, assisting, or abetting any such assembly or meeting as aforesaid; and it shall be lawful for the justice of the peace who shall arrest any such person, or before whom any person so arrested shall be brought, to commit such person for trial for such offence, under the provisions of this act, unless such person can and shall give sufficient bail for his appearance at the next assizes or general or quarter sessions of the peace, to answer to any indictment which may be preferred against him for any such offence against this act, in England and Ireland; and in Scotland every such person shall be arrested and dealt with according to the law and practice of that part of the United Kingdom in the case of a bailable offence."

Sect. 3. "The sheriffs-depute and their substitutes, stewards-depute and their substitutes, justices of the peace, magistrates of royal burghs, and all other inferior judges and magistrates, and also all high and petty constables, or other peace officers of any county, stewardry, city, or town, within that part of the United Kingdom called Scotland, shall have such and the same powers and authorities for putting this present act in execution within Scotland, as the justices of the peace and other magistrates and peace officers and constables aforesaid respectively have, by virtue of this act, within and for other parts of the United Kingdom."

Sect. 4. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend to prevent any prosecution, by indictment or otherwise, for any thing which shall be an offence within the intent and meaning of this act, and which might have been so prosecuted if this act had not been made, unless the offender shall have been prosecuted for such offence under this act, and convicted or acquitted of such offence."

Sect. 5. "Any action or suit which shall be brought or commenced against any justice or justices of the peace, constable, peace officer, or other person or persons, in that part of Great Britain called England, or in Ireland, for any thing done or acted in pursuance of this act, shall be commenced within six calendar months next after the fact committed, and not afterwards; and the venue in every such action or suit shall be laid in the proper county where the fact was committed, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in every such action or suit may plead the general issue, and give this act and the special matter in evidence at any trial to be had thereupon; and if such action or suit shall be brought or commenced after the time limited for bringing the same, or the venue shall be laid in any other place than as aforesaid, then the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant or defendants; and in such case, or if the jury shall find a verdict for the defendant or defendants upon the merits, or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuit, or discontinue his, her, or their actions after appearance, or if, upon demurrer, judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall have double costs, which he or they shall and may recover in such and the same manner as any defendant can by law in other cases."

Sect. 6. "Every action or suit which shall be brought or commenced against any person or persons in Scotland, for any thing done or acted in pursuance of this act, shall in like manner be commenced within six calendar months after the fact committed, and not afterwards, and shall be brought in the court of session in Scotland; and the defender or defenders may plead that the matter complained of was done in pursuance of this act, and may give this act and the special matter in evidence; and if such action or suit shall be brought or commenced after the time limited for bringing the same, then the same shall be dismissed; and in such case, or if the defender or defenders shall be assoilzied, or the pursuer or pursuers shall suffer the action or suit to fall asleep, or a decision shall be pronounced against the pursuer or pursuers upon the relevancy, the defender or defenders shall have treble costs or expenses, which he or they shall and may receive† in such and the same manner as any defender can by law recover† costs or expenses in other cases."

Sect. 7. "That no person shall be prosecuted by virtue of this act for any thing done or committed contrary to the provisions hereinbefore contained, unless such prosecution shall be commenced within six calendar months after the offence committed."

Rivers and Navigation.

See "Seamen;" "Ships;" "Thames," post.

A RIVER which is common to all the king's subjects is a highway. How far a river (Roll. Ab. 390; Young v. —, 1 Ld. Raym. 725; "Highways," a highway. Vol. III. p. 72.) So is a navigable river. (See Miles v. Rose, 5 Taunt. 705; 1 Marsh. 513, S. C.; R. v. Montague, 4 B. & C. 598; 6 D. & R. 616, S. C.; and see Wellbeloved, 19, 444.)

The right to a passage therein cannot be extinguished, except by writ How extin- of ad quod damnum, by act of parliament, or by natural causes. (R. v. Mon- guished. tague, 4 B. & C. 603; 6 D. & R. 616, S. C.; Vooght v. Winch, 2 B. & Ald. 662.) In Com. Dig. Chemin, (A. I.) it is said a navigable river is in the nature of a highway; and, if the water alters its course, the way alters.

A charge for the amendment of a river may sometimes be incurred. Amending. (Mayor of Lynn v. Turner, Cowp. 86.)

The soil of all fresh rivers that are publici juris, primâ facie belongs, Soil of. usque filum aquæ, to the adjoining proprietors. (De Juris Maris, p. 9.) And the soil of arms of the sea, primâ facie, belongs to the king. (Id. p. 1.)

Where an act of parliament, passed for the purpose of making navigable a natural river, does not vest in the undertakers of the navigation the bed of the river, but gives them, for that purpose, a mere privilege of scouring and cleansing it, they are not occupiers of the land used for the purpose of navigation, but have a mere easement in it. (R. v. Irwell and Mersey Navigation, 9 B. & C. 95; 4 Man. & R. 84, S. C.; R. v. Thomas, 9 B. & C. 114; S. C. nom. Rex v. Avon Company, 4 Man. & R. 23; and see R. v. Aire and Calder Navigation, Id. 827.)

The public are not entitled at common law to tow on the banks of ancient Towing paths. navigable rivers. (Ball v. Herbert, 3 T. R. 253.) But a right to a track path on each side of the river Tees (alternately) for towing without paying any acknowledgment, was found upon a trial at bar. (Pierce v. Fauconberge, Lord, 1 Burr. 292.) If an act of parliament for inclosing and allotting the common and waste lands of a parish through which a navigable river flows, empower commissioners to set out such public and private roads and ways as they shall think necessary, and direct that all roads and ways not so set out shall be deemed part of the lands to be allotted; an ancient towing path upon the banks of the river, though not set out by the commissioners, still subsists, for it is not within their jurisdiction. (Simpson v. Scales, 2 B. & P. 496.) A statute authorizing the making of a new course for a navigable river and turning the old part into a floating harbour, will not, without words for the purpose, put an end to a public towing path upon that part, but such towing path will be liable to be used as such for the purposes of the harbour, and it will make no difference though the river was a tide river, and not navigable at low water. (R. v. Tippet, 1 Russ. C. & M. 317.)

A proprietor of land adjoining a river has a right to raise the banks, from Right to raise time to time as occasion may require, upon his own land, so as to confine banks of, &c. the flood water within the banks, and to prevent it from overflowing his land, with this single restriction, that he does not thereby occasion an injury to the lands and property of other persons; and if, being in the actual exercise of this right, an aqueduct and embankment be built lower down the river, it will be subject to the enjoyment of such rights as the landholder possessed at the time when it was constructed. (R. v. Trafford, 2 C. & J. 265; 8 Bingh. 204, S. C.; and see 1 B. & Adol. 874.)

If an aqueduct be built, so as in times of flood to pen back the water of a river, and cause it to overflow the lands of the adjoining proprietors, they may raise fenders to protect their lands, even though the water of the river be thereby forced against and endanger the aqueduct, unless, by the construction or raising of the fenders, the proprietors impede what was, before the erection of the aqueduct, the ancient and accustomed course for the escape of the water in times of flood.

Where, therefore, upon an indictment against the proprietors of land adjoining a public navigation, for a nuisance in erecting and continuing fenders on the banks of a river, whereby the water of the river was forced against the sides and aqueduct of the canal, it appeared that the canal was carried across the river and adjoining valley, by means of an aqueduct and embankment, in which were several arches and culverts; that a brook fell into the river above its point of intersection with the canal, and that, in times of flood, the water, which was penned back into the brook, overflowed its banks, and was carried, by the natural level of the country through the arches in the embankment to the river, doing much damage to the lands over which it passed; that the aqueduct was sufficient for the passage of water at all times, except in times of high flood; and that, on either side of the river and brook, there were fenders to prevent the waters from overflowing the lands adjoining which fenders had been raised from time to time as occasion required; but it did not appear whether the raising of the fenders was or was not an accustomed usage before the construction of the canal; nor what was the ancient course of the water in times of flood; nor whether the raising of the fenders was or was not necessary, in consequence of the construction of the canal:—Held, that no judgment could be given. (Id.)

The ordinary course of water cannot be lawfully changed or obstructed for the benefit of one class of persons to the injury of another, and it seems no sound distinction can be made between the ordinary course of water flowing in a bounded channel at all usual seasons, and the extraordinary course which its superabundant quantity has been accustomed to take up at particular seasons, and if a party obstructs such course, he may be indicted if he thereby create a public nuisance, or sued if he thereby create a private nuisance. (R. v. Trafford, 1 B. & Adol. 874.) But every person may defend himself, if he can, against the sea, which has been compared on such occasions to a common enemy on all parts of the coast where it encroaches. (R. v. Commissioners of Sewers for Pagham, 8 B. & Cres. 355; 2 Man. & R. 468, S. C.)

Nuisances to, in general.

We have already noticed as to what are nuisances at common law to highways in general, and the manner of redressing them, "Highways," Vol. III. p. 132; and the observations there made will, for the most part, be here applicable.

Although a subject may by prescription have a wear in the sea, yet if it be a nuisance to the passage of ships, the same may be abated. (De Jure Maris, 21; Wellbeloved, 446, 447: but see, as to the erection of staiths, R. v. Russell, 6 B. & C. 566; 9 D. & R. 566, S. C.; "Highways," Vol. III. p. 134.)

It is a nuisance to lay timber in a public river, although the soil on which it is laid belongs to the party, provided it obstructs the necessary intercourse. (3 Bac. Ab. 686; R. v. Smith, 3 Keb. 759; and see R. v. Ld. Grosvenor, 2 Stark. C. N. P. 511.)

So, it is a common nuisance to divert part of a public navigable river, whereby the current of it is weakened, and made unable to carry vessels of the same burthen as it would before. (1 Haw. c. 75, s. 11, 5.)

If a vessel be sunk in a navigable river by accident or misfortune, an indictment cannot it seems be maintained against the owner for not removing it. (R. v. Watts, 2 Esp. 675.) But he is at all events bound to place some buoy or signal over the wreck; and it seems that it is not enough to station a watchman near the spot to point out the danger. (Harmond v. Pearson, 1 Camp. 515.)

Filling up havens,
&c. with ballast,
&c.

By the 19 Geo. II. c. 22, s. 1, if any master or owner, or any person acting as master of any ship, pink, crayer, lighter, keil-boat, or other vessel whatsoever, shall cast, throw out, or unlade; or if at any time, from and after the day aforesaid, there shall be cast, thrown out, or unladen from and out of any ship, pink, crayer, lighter, keil-boat, or other vessel whatsoever, being or riding within any haven, port, road, channel, or navigable river, within that part of Great Britain, called England, any ballast, rubbish, gravel, earth, stone, wreck, or filth, but only upon the land where the tide or water never flows or runs; it shall and may be lawful for any one or more justice or justices of the peace for the county, city, town corporate, liberty, or place, where or near which such offence shall be committed, upon information thereof, and he and they are hereby authorized and required to summon, or issue out his or their warrant or warrants to apprehend and bring before him or them, the master or masters, owner or owners, of any such ship, pink, crayer, lighter, keil-boat, or other vessel, or other person or persons acting as such, against whom such complaint or information shall be made or given; and upon his, her, or their appearance or default, to proceed to examine the matter of fact, and upon due proof made (either by the confession of the party offending, or on view of such justice or justices, or upon the oath or oaths of one or more credible witness or witnesses, which oaths the said justices are hereby empowered and required to administer), that any ballast, rubbish, earth, gravel, stone, wreck, or filth, had been cast, unladen, or thrown out of, or from any ship, pink, crayer, lighter, keil-boat, or other vessel, the master or masters, or person or persons acting as master or masters thereof, shall be adjudged, and he and they are hereby respectively declared to be the offenders against this act; and he and they being by such justice or justices (or any of the ways or means aforesaid) thereof convicted, shall forfeit and pay for every such offence any sum not exceeding the sum of 5*l.*, nor under 50*s.*, at the discretion of such justice or justices, the one moiety thereof to the informer, and the other moiety thereof to the overseers of the poor of the parish, town, or place wherein such conviction shall be pronounced, for the use of the poor there.

Justices may issue warrant.

Penalty.

Sect. 2. "The penalties inflicted or incurred by this act shall be recovered and levied by distress and sale either of the goods or chattels of the persons so convicted respectively as aforesaid, or of the ship, pink, crayer, lighter, keil-boat, or other vessel, or of their tackle, apparel, or furniture (by warrant or warrants under the hand and seal, or hands and seals of such justice or justices, and which he and they are hereby empowered and required, on such conviction as aforesaid, to make, and to direct the same to the constables, or to the tithingman, or other proper officer of the parish, town, or place where such warrants are respectively to be executed; and which warrants the constables and tithingmen, and officers aforesaid, are hereby respectively required to execute) together with the charges of such distress and sale, rendering the overplus (if any be, after demand in writing) to the respective owners thereof; and for want of sufficient distress, the said justice or justices are hereby empowered and required to commit such master or masters, or person or persons acting as such, and so convicted as aforesaid, to the common gaol of the county, city, town corporate, or to the house of correction of the county where the offenders shall be respectively convicted as aforesaid, there to remain for the space of two months, or until payment shall be made of the penalties and forfeitures, or so much thereof, as for the non-payment of which such commitment shall be."

Distress.

Imprisonment.

Sect. 6. "None of the distresses to be at any time made by virtue of this act, or any part of such distresses, shall be sold till after the expiration of five days from the making such distresses respectively; but that it shall and may be lawful to and for the persons convicted in the meanwhile (to wit, at any time before the expiration of the said five days) to redeem such distress, by payment of the money for which the same shall have been made by virtue hereof, to and for the uses and purposes of this act, together with the costs and charges of and for making, seizing, and detaining such distress."

Distress sold.

Sect. 3. "As soon as any ship or vessel shall be sunk, stranded, or run on shore in any harbour, port, channel, or navigable river, or shall be brought or drove in, or be there in a ruinous or shattered condition as aforesaid, and permitted to remain there, and the owner, or some other person having, or pretending to have, any property therein, or the command or power thereof, or any other person or persons by their or any of their order, privity, or assent,

Justices to execute act indiscriminately.	Sect. 4. "All and every the justices aforesaid may, and they are hereby respectively authorized and required to put this act in execution against any person or persons within their several jurisdictions, although such justice or justices shall or may be rated or assessed, or do, or shall, or may actually pay for or towards the maintenance or relief of the poor of any parish, town, or place, in which any conviction in pursuance of this act shall be pronounced; any law or statute to the contrary thereof notwithstanding."
Conviction final.	Sect. 5. "All convictions, to be pronounced by the authority of this act, shall be final to all intents and purposes, not to be appealed from, or removed into any court of record at Westminster."
Limitation of powers of act.	Sect. 7. "Nothing in this act contained shall extend, or be construed to extend to take away, abridge, diminish, or alter any right, benefit, or lawful use, that the lord or lords, lady or ladies, of any manor or manors adjoining to, or bordering upon, any haven, port, road, channel, or river, or that any other person or persons whatsoever hath or have to such haven, port, channel, or river, or to the banks, shores, or sides thereof, or any fishery, manufactures, or royalties therein; nor extend to the casting out, unloading, or throwing out of any ship, pink, crayer, lighter, keil-boat, or other vessel, any stone, rocks, bricks, lime, or other materials, used or to be used, in or towards the building, amending, repairing, and keeping in repair, any quay, pier, wharf, wear, or bridge, or the banks or sides of any haven, port, road, channel, or navigable river within this realm; but, on the contrary, this act shall be construed and taken to prevent the mischiefs to be done in, or to, or upon the said havens, ports, roads, channels, or rivers, which may any ways tend to obstruct, prejudice, incommode, hinder, or do any annoyance in the said havens, ports, roads, channels, or rivers, or prejudice the navigation therein, and not otherwise."
Proviso.	Sect. 8. Saves the former jurisdictions, rights, or remedies to punish any nuisances to be done in any haven, port, road, channel, or navigable river.

Unloading ballast from a ship into a machine or vessel, called a hopper, in a navigable river, with intent to carry and cast it into the high and open sea, and carrying it accordingly and casting it out of the said hopper, when the water was more than fourteen fathom deep, at a distance from any port, haven, channel, or navigable river, is an offence against the positive enactment of 19 Geo. II. c. 22, and subjects the offender to the penalty of s. 1. 54 Geo. 3, c. 159.

(Brucklesbank v. Smith, 2 Burr. 656.)

By the 54 Geo. III. c. 159, s. 1, the 9 Geo. III. c. 30, and 10 Anne, c. 7, 54 Geo. 3, c. 159. as far as they relate to the harbour moorings of the navy, and the 51 Geo. III. c. 73, are repealed.

Sect. 2. The Admiralty may establish regulations for the preservation of the king's moorings, and for mooring merchant-ships. Such regulations to be published in the Gazette, and to be hung up conspicuously in custom-houses, &c.

Sect. 3. No private ships to fasten to his majesty's moorings, under penalty of not exceeding 10*l.* for each tide.

Sect. 4. Power given to harbour-master and other officers to unmoor and remove private ships of war or merchant-ships, &c. Penalty of 10*l.* on owner, master, &c., of private ships, neglecting or refusing to remove after one hour's notice.

Sect. 5. Notice to be given when his majesty's moorings are hooked.

Sect. 6. Places to be appointed for breaming ships, and for leaving and receiving gunpowder.

Sect. 7, 8. Penalties on breaming ships, except at appointed places, and on keeping guns shotted.

Sect. 9. Power given to harbour-master and other officers, to enter private ships to search for gunpowder, &c., within limits prohibited. Penalty of 10*l.* for refusing admittance to proper officers.

Sect. 10. None to sweep for his majesty's stores within one hundred yards of his majesty's ships or moorings, but licensed persons, under penalty of 10*l.*

Sect. 11. "If the owner, master, or other person, having the charge or command of any private ship of war, transport, or other private or merchant-ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft whatsoever, or any person working any quarry, mine, or pit, near to the sea, or to any such harbour, haven or navigable river as aforesaid, or any other person or persons whatsoever, shall cast, throw, empty, or unlade, or cause or procure to be cast, thrown, emptied, or unladen, either from or out of any such ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, or from the shore, any ballast, stone, slate, gravel, earth, rubbish, wreck, or filth, into any of such ports, roads, roadsteads, harbours, havens, or navigable rivers of this kingdom as aforesaid, so as to tend to the injury or obstruction of the navigation thereof, or in any place or situation on shore where the same shall be liable to be washed into the sea, or into any such ports, roads, roadsteads, harbours, havens, or navigable rivers, either by ordinary or high tides, or by storms or land-floods; all and every such person and persons so offending shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding the sum of 10*l.* over and besides all expenses which may be incurred in removing to a proper place the said matters which may have been deposited contrary to the provisions of this act, such expenses to be recoverable in such manner and with such power of commitment, on non-payment thereof, as in cases of penalties or forfeitures under this act: provided that nothing herein contained shall extend or be construed to extend to the casting out, unlading, or throwing out of any ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, any stones, rocks, bricks, lime, or other materials used or to be used in or towards the building, repairing, or keeping in repair, any quay, pier, wharf, wear, bridge or other building, or the banks or sides of any port, harbour, haven, channel or navigable river, or any materials for repairing any highway; any thing herein contained to the contrary thereof in anywise notwithstanding." after high water ; and that for every such purpose, every such ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or craft, shall approach the shore, as far as the tide and the draught of water of such ship, vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or craft will admit, and shall, under no circumstances and in no situation, deposit any of the said matters below low-water mark at neap tides ; and that every vessel drawing above eleven feet of water at the stern shall unlade all such materials into some lighter, barge, or boat, as hereinbefore directed, in order that the same may be conveyed as near the shore as possible at the time of high water, as hereinbefore directed."

Ballast cast on shore from side of ship nearest to land.

Sect. 13. " All such ballast and other matters shall, in all the above-mentioned cases, be cast on shore from the side of the ship, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, which shall be nearest to the land, and not otherwise ; and every person who shall offend in any of the above particulars, shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay a sum not exceeding the sum of 10*l.*, over and above all expenses which may be incurred in removing to a proper place the said matters which may have been deposited contrary to the provisions of this act ; such expenses to be recoverable in such manner, and with such powers of commitment on non-payment thereof, as in cases of penalties or forfeitures under this act."

Penalty.

Taking ballast from shore in harbours.

Sect. 14. And, in order to prevent damage being done to the shores or banks of the ports, harbours, or havens, in this kingdom, it is enacted, " that no person or persons shall take any ballast or shingle from the shores or banks, or any portion of the shores or banks, of any port, harbour, or haven, of this kingdom, from which the commissioners for executing the office of Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom for the time being shall find it necessary for the protection of such port, harbour, or haven, or the works thereof, by order under their hands, or the hands of any three of them, or the hands of his or their secretary, and published in the London Gazette, to prohibit the taking or removing of such shingle or ballast, upon pain of forfeiting for every such offence the sum of 10*l.*"

Penalty.

Tarpaulins to be used in taking and discharging ballast.

Sect. 15. " In the taking of ballast into any ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, and also in the discharging of the same from any ship or vessel into any lighter, boat, barge, or other craft, every such ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, shall be provided with, and shall make use of, one or more tarpaulin or tarpaulins, properly stretched and spread, in order to prevent such ballast or any part thereof from falling into the sea, or into any harbour, haven, or navigable river ; and, in case any person or persons shall either take any ballast into any ship or vessel, lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, or shall discharge the same from any ship or vessel into any lighter, barge, boat, or other craft, without using such sufficient tarpaulin or tarpaulins, properly stretched and spread, in order to prevent such ballast or any part thereof from falling into the sea, or into any such harbour, haven or navigable river ; all and every person or persons offending therein shall, for every such offence, forfeit and pay the sum of 5*l.*"

Penalty.

Sect. 16. Admiralty may dispense with the provisions relative to ballast.

Sect. 17. Vessels sunk or stranded, after twenty-eight days' refusal or neglect of owner to raise the same, may be weighed and raised under direction of harbour-master, or commissioner of the navy, and the charge of raising be paid from the sale of vessel or goods on board.

Sect. 18. Harbour-master, &c., indemnified for acts in pursuance of this act.

Sect. 19. On neglect of harbour-master, &c., for two months, the owner or master of the vessel may weigh and raise it.

Sect. 20. Commissioners of the navy, residing at any port, &c., near to the place where any offence is committed against this act, are empowered to act as justices of the peace for all the purposes of the act.

Penalties, &c., how recovered, &c.

Sect. 21. " All the penalties and forfeitures imposed by this act shall be sued for within twelve calendar months next after the offence or offences shall be committed, before any commissioner of the navy or justice of the peace residing at or near to the place where any such offence or offences shall be committed ; all which said penalties and forfeitures shall go and be applied as follows; that is to say, one moiety thereof to the use of his majesty, his heirs, and successors, and the other moiety thereof, with full costs, to be adjudged by such commissioner of the navy or justice of the peace, to the informer; and every such commissioner of the navy, and justice of the peace, is hereby authorized and required, upon information exhibited, or complaint made, to grant and issue his warrant in writing under his hand, to bring before them respectively such offender or offenders at the time and place in such warrant specified; and if on the conviction of the offender or offenders respectively, on his, her, or their confession, or on oath (which oath every such commissioner of the navy or justice of the peace is hereby authorized and empowered to administer), such penalty or forfeiture, together with such costs as aforesaid, shall not be forthwith paid, it shall be lawful for such commissioner of the navy or justice of the peace to commit any such offender or offenders to the common gaol or house of correction for the county, city, or borough, at or near to the place where the offence or offences shall be committed, there to remain without bail or mainprize, for any time not exceeding three months, unless such penalty or forfeiture and costs shall be sooner paid."

54 Geo. 3, c. 159.

Imprisonment (a).

Sect. 22. "It shall be lawful for any commissioner of the navy, residing at or near to any port, harbour, or haven, or any part thereof, or for any justice of the peace for any county, city, or borough, acting in and for any district or place next adjoining to any such port, harbour, haven, road, roadstead, sound, channel, creek, bay, or navigable river, or any member of any of them, where any such offence or offences may be committed, to proceed in the execution of this act, and of all the powers and authorities thereof, herein and hereby given to commissioners of the navy and justices of the peace, in such and the same manner, and as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if such offence or offences had been committed locally within the limits of the jurisdiction of such commissioner of the navy or justice of the peace, although the same may have been committed out of the limits of the jurisdiction of such commissioner or justice, or out of the body of any county of this realm."

Extent of jurisdiction of commissioners of navy and justices of peace.

Sect. 23. "And for the more easy and speedy conviction of offenders against this act, and also for the prevention of frivolous and vexatious appeals, be it further enacted, that every commissioner of the navy and justice of the peace before whom any person or persons shall be convicted of any offence or offences against this act, shall and may cause the conviction to be drawn up according to the following form, or in any form of words to the like effect, mutatis mutandis; which conviction shall be good and effectual to all intents and purposes, without stating the case, or the facts, or evidence, in any more particular manner; that is to say,

I. The Offence of.

THERE are two kinds of robbery; from the person and from the house: Two kinds of robbery. it is the former of these that is treated of under this title; the latter, viz. robbery from the house, belongeth to the titles "Larceny and Burglary."

Robbery is a felonious taking of money or goods, to any value, from the person of another, or in his presence, against his will, by violence, or putting him in fear. (2 East's P. C. 707; 4 Bla. Com. 243; 3 Inst. 68.) Robbery what.

Felonious.]—For to make it robbery there must be a felonious intention; and so it ought to be laid in the indictment. (1 Hale, 532; and see fully, as to the felonious intent, "Larceny," Vol. III.) A. had set wires, in which game was caught; B., a gamekeeper, found them, and took the game and wires for the use of the lord of the manor. A. demanded them, with menaces, and B. gave them up. The jury found that A. acted under a bonâ fide impression that the game and wires were his property. Held, no robbery, but a trespass. (R. v. Hall, 3 C. & P. 409.) Felonious.

Taking.]—The taking must be against the will of the owner, and, to constitute the crime of robbery, the property must be taken from the person either by violence or by putting him in fear; either of these circumstances is sufficient. But no sudden taking of a thing unawares from the person, as by snatching any thing from the head or hand, is sufficient unless some injury be done to the person, or unless there be some previous struggle for the possession of the thing taken. If a robber cut a man's girdle in order to get his purse, and the purse thereby fall to the ground, and the robber run off, or be apprehended before he can take it up, this would not be robbery, because the purse was never in the possession of the robber. (1 Hale, 583; 1 Leach, 228.) Taking.

Where the defendant drew a book from the inside pocket of the prosecutor's coat, about an inch above the top of the pocket, but whilst the book was still about the person of the prosecutor, the prosecutor suddenly put up his hand, upon which the defendant let the book drop, and it fell into the prosecutor's pocket; this was holden, by a majority of the judges, not to be a sufficient asportation to warrant a conviction for stealing from the person, because, from the first to the last, the book remained about the person of the prosecutor; although it was sufficient to constitute a simple larceny. (R. v. Thompson, R. & M. 78; and see further as to what is a taking, ante, "Larceny," Vol. III.)

1. Offence of.

The money or goods.

Money or Goods.]—At common law, the goods taken must be such as would constitute the crime of larceny; (see "Larceny," Vol. III.); but the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 6, post, 380, extends the taking to any "chattel, money, or valuable security."

The value of the goods is immaterial: 1 Hale, 532. But they must be of some value to the party robbed; and, therefore, where the defendant compelled the prosecutor, by threats, to give her his promissory note for a sum of money, it was holden by the judges not to be a robbery, because the note was of no value to the prosecutor. (R. v. Phipoe, 2 Leach, 673; see "Larceny," Vol. III.)

In R. v. Bingley, 5 C. & P. 602, the prisoner attacked the prosecutor, and took from him a piece of paper, containing a memorandum of money that a person owed him, and Gurney, B., held it sufficient to constitute robbery.

From the person of another.

From the Person of Another, or in his Presence.]—The goods must be proved to have been taken, either from the person of another or in his presence. (R. v. Grey, 2 East's P. C. 708; and see R. v. Francis, 2 Stra. 1015.) If a thief put a man in fear, and then in his presence drive away his cattle, it is robbery. (1 Hale, 533.) So, if a man, being assaulted by a robber, throw his purse into a bush; or, flying from a robber, let fall his hat; and the robber, in his presence, take up the purse or hat and carry it away, this would be robbery. (1 Hale, 533.) Upon an indictment for robbery, it appeared that the prosecutor was in company with another, who had the prosecutor's bundle, and who, upon the prosecutor being attacked with great violence by the prisoner, dropped down the bundle, and ran to the prosecutor's assistance, when one of the prisoners took up the bundle, and ran off with it—Vaughan, B., held, that this was not robbery, because the bundle was not in the prosecutor's possession at the time. (R. v. Fallows, 5 C. & P. 508.)

Against his will.

Against his Will.]—The goods must be taken against the will of the party robbed. Therefore, where the party robbed concerted and connived at the robbery, and got one of his confederates to procure two strangers to commit it, for the purpose of getting a reward upon the apprehension and conviction of the strangers, the judges held that it was not a robbery, because the property was not taken against the party's will. (R. v. M'Daniel et al., Fost. 121. (a))

(a) Against the Will.] In the case of M'Daniel, Berry, Eagan, and Salmon, who were indicted as accessories before the fact of a robbery committed by Kelly and Ellis on the person of the said Salmon, it appeared that all the prisoners, and one Thomas Blee, in order to procure themselves the rewards given by act of parliament for apprehending robbers, met at the Bell Inn, in Holborn, and agreed that Blee should procure two persons to commit a robbery on the prisoner Salmon; and that for that purpose they contrived that Blee should inform the persons so to be procured that he would assist them in stealing some linen in Deptford; that in pursuance of this agreement, and with the privity of all the prisoners, Blee procured Ellis and Kelly to go with him to Deptford in order to steal linen, but did not at any time before the robbery inform them of the intended robbery; that they went with Blee to Deptford, and the prisoner Salmon being likewise waiting there, in pursuance of the agreement, they robbed him of the money and goods mentioned in the indictment. This case was argued before all the judges, who were unanimously of opinion that, supposing a robbery to have been committed, all the prisoners were guilty as accessories before, except Salmon, who could not be accessory to the robbing of himself. But, forasmuch as the goods were taken from Salmon in pursuance of the agreement before mentioned, they were of opinion that, in legal construction, he was not robbed at all, since it is of the essence of robbery, that the goods be taken against the will of the owner; although the circumstance of putting in fear is perhaps not necessary to be inserted in the indictment; at least it need not to be strictly proved: for, if a man be knocked down without any previous warning, and thereby rendered insensible, or if he manfully resist and be overpowered without being under any fear at all, it is not the less robbery upon that account. And the prisoners were discharged of the indictment. But afterwards an indictment was found against them, and prosecuted at the expense of the crown, on the representation of the

By Violence.—In a case where a lady was stepping into her carriage, the prisoner snatched at her diamond ear-ring, and separated it from her ear by tearing the ear entirely through, but there was no proof of the ear-ring ever having been seen in his hand, and, upon the lady's arrival at home, it was found amongst the curls of her hair; the judges, on a case reserved, were all of opinion, that there was a sufficient taking from the person to constitute robbery. They thought that it was sufficient, as the ear-ring had been in the possession of the prisoner, separate from the lady's person, though but for a moment, and though he could not retain it, but probably lost it again the same instant. (Lapier's case, O. B., May, 1784, 1 Leach, 320.)

1. Offence of.

By violence,

Snatching an article from a man will constitute robbery, if it be so attached to his person or clothes as to afford resistance. (R. v. Mason, R. & R. C. C. 419; 2 R. C. & M. 68.) The prosecutor's watch was fastened to a steel chain, which went round his neck; the seal and chain hung from his fob. The prisoner laid hold of the seal and chain, and pulled the watch from the fob, but the steel chain still secured it: upon which the prisoner, by two jerks, broke the steel chain and made off with the watch. Case saved for the opinion of the judges upon the question, whether this was a robbery?—The judges were unanimous that it was, as the prisoner did not get the watch at once, but had to overcome the resistance made by the steel chain, and used actual force.

Where the prisoner caught hold of the prosecutor's watch chain, and jerked his watch from his pocket with considerable force, upon which a scuffle ensued, and the prisoner was secured:—Garrow, B., held that the force used to obtain the watch did not make the offence amount to robbery, nor did the force used afterwards in the scuffle; for the force necessary to constitute robbery must be either immediately before or at the time of the larceny, and not after it. (R. v. Gnosil, 1 C. & P. 304.)

The rule appears to be well established, that no sudden taking or snatching of property unawares from a person is sufficient to constitute robbery, unless some injury be done to the person, or there be a previous struggle for the possession of the property, or some force used to obtain it. (Jervis' Arch. C. L. 216, 6 ed.)

Or by putting him in Fear.—Robbery may also be constituted by putting or by putting him in fear as well as by force; or perhaps, in strictness, it may be said that fear will supply the place of force; yet it is not necessary that actual fear should either be laid in the indictment or strictly and precisely proved, provided the property be taken with such circumstances of violence or terror, or threatening by word or gesture, as would, in common experience, induce a man to part with it from an apprehension of personal danger; for the law, in odium spoliatoris, will presume fear where there appears to be so reasonable a ground for it. But it is necessary that it be taken against the will of the party. (2 East's P. C. 711; 1 Hale, 533.)

A colourable gift, which in truth was extorted by fear, amounts to a taking and trespass in law. As, if a person with a drawn sword, or other circumstances of terror, indicating a felonious intent, beg alms of another, who gives it him through mistrust and apprehension of violence, the offence is the same, notwithstanding the pretence. So it is whether there were any weapon drawn or not; or whether it were an offensive weapon; or whether the person assaulted delivered his money upon the other's command, or afterwards gave it him upon his ceasing to use force, and asking it for alms; for the owner was put in fear by the assault, and there remained a reasonable judges, for a conspiracy; in which the principal facts found by the special verdict in the robbery bill were charged. On this indictment they were all convicted; and the court gave judgment, that they be all set in and upon the pillory twice; that they stand committed for seven years, and until they find sureties for their good behaviour for three years afterwards. One of them (Eagan) lost his life in the pillory, through the resentment of the populace, and on that account the others did not stand a second time. But they were all in Newgate very closely confined, in pursuance of their sentence. (Fost. 121; 19 How. St. Tr. 814.)

1. Offence of. ground for its continuance. (2 East's P. C. 711; 1 Haw. c. 34, s. 6; Fost. 128.)

The same rule holds, although the thing taken were not really within the original contemplation of the robber, nor the object of his pursuit at the time.

Blackham assaulted a woman with intent to commit a rape, and she without any demand from him offered him money, which the prisoner took and put into his pocket, but continued to treat her with violence, to effect his original purpose, till he was interrupted by the approach of another person. This was holden to be robbery by a considerable majority of the judges: for the woman, from violence and terror, occasioned by the prisoner's behaviour, and to redeem her chastity, offered the money, which it was clear she would not have given voluntarily; and the prisoner, by taking it, derived that advantage to himself from his felonious conduct; though his original intent was to commit a rape. (R. v. Blackham, T. T. 1787; 2 East's P. C. 711.)

During the riots in London, in the year 1780, a boy with a cockade in his hat knocked violently at the door of the prosecutor, Mahon, who thereupon opened it; and the boy said to him, "God bless your honour, remember the poor mob." Mahon told him to go along, on which he said, "Then I will go and fetch my captain." He went; and the mob, to the amount of 100, armed with sticks and whatever they could get, soon after came, headed by the prisoner, Thomas Taplin, on horseback, having his horse led by the same boy. On their coming up, the by-standers said, "You must give them money;" and the boy said, "Now I have brought my captain." Mahon then asked the prisoner, "How much?" who answered, "Half-a-crown, sir." On which Mahon, who had before only intended to give a shilling, gave the prisoner the half-crown. This was holden to be a robbery. (Taplin's case, O. B. June, 1780, cor. Nares, J., East's P. C. 712.)

Another case of the like sort occurred, upon the trial of some of the rioters in the year 1780. The indictment was for robbing the prosecutor, Daking, in his dwelling-house; into which Daking swore that the prisoner, William Brown, and another man entered; and being asked by him what they wanted, Brown having a drawn sword in his hand, said with an oath, "Put one shilling into my hat, or I have a party that can destroy your house presently:" on which the prosecutor gave him a shilling. Another witness present swore, that the prisoner also used the expression, that "if he (Daking) would keep the blood within his mouth, he must give the shilling." The offence was holden to be robbery. (Brown's case, O. B. June, 1780, cor. Nares, J.; 2 East's P. C. 731.)

If persons who had formed part of a mob, obtain money from a party by advising him to give money to the mob, and be indicted for this as a robbery—the prosecutor, to show that this was not bonâ fide advice, may give evidence of demands of money made by the same mob at other places before and afterwards in the course of the same day, if any of the prisoners were present on those occasions. (R. v. Winkworth, 4 C. & P. 444.)

In Simon's case, it appeared that the prisoners took a bushel and a half of wheat, worth 8s., and obliged the owner to take 13½d. for it, threatening to kill her if she refused; this was holden to be a robbery by all the judges, on a conference. (R. v. Simons, Cornwall Lent Assizes, 1783; 2 East's P. C. 712.)

So, in Spencer's case, the prosecutor, Anderton, having in his possession corn belonging to other persons, the prisoner came to him, together with a mob marching in military order; and one of the mob said, that if he would not sell they would take it away; the prisoner said, that they would give 30s. a load, and if he would not take that, they would take the corn away, on which the prosecutor sold that for 30s. which was worth 38s.: this was holden to be robbery, and the prisoner was convicted and executed. (Spencer's case, York Summer Assizes, 1783, cor. Buller, J., 2 East's P. C. 712.)

No case, however, has gone further than that of James and Ezekiel Astley, who were indicted for robbing Jonathan Grundy. It appeared that the prisoners and a person unknown went to a public-house near Birmingham, during the time of the late riots, which was three or four hundred yards from Mr. G.'s house, early in the morning, where one of them said that they were going up to Mr. G.'s house, "and if he did not turn out the whack, his house would be down by two o'clock in the morning;" on which the stranger observed that he himself would do it; that he was the head of the mob, and had three or four hundred men at command at any time; with other like discourse. They all departed towards Mr. G.'s house; but before they arrived there they saw his servant at a little distance from it, whom they accosted, James Astley telling him he was come as a friend to let Mr. G. know that this man (the stranger) was the head of the mob, and the first man who had entered all the places which were destroyed at Birmingham. They then, seeing Mr. G. come out of his house, pulled off their hats, and shouted "Church and King." Mr. G. did the same, advancing towards the prisoners in much alarm, when the stranger accosted him, saying, "I am come out of friendship to you, Mr. G., to let you know your house is marked to come down to-morrow morning at two o'clock. I am the head of the mob: they are two thousand strong in Birmingham. I must have something to make my men drink. I can bring two or three hundred in an hour's time, or keep them back." Mr. G. said, "As to something to drink, you shall have anything you have a mind for." The stranger said, "I must have money." Mr. G. pulled out half-a-crown from his pocket, and offered it to him; but the stranger refused it, and turned away with expressions of contempt. Mr. G. then asked what he wanted; the stranger replied, he must have twenty guineas; and on Mr. G. saying that he had not so much in his house, the other told him, that if he did not give him something handsome for his men to drink, his house should come down. Mr. G. said, that he might have nine or ten guineas, which the stranger asked to see: and as Mr. G. was taking his purse out of his pocket, James Astley told him he might depend upon it that the other man was at the head of the mob, and the like sort of discourse which had passed before concerning his power; particularly, that he was the first man who had entered every house that had been destroyed. Mr. G. was so struck with that expression, that he immediately took the money out of his purse (nine guineas and a half), which he gave to the stranger, who counted it, and demanded to have something to drink. They all then went into Mr. G.'s house, where they had liquor, and in going away assured him that he should be protected. Mr. G. said that he was greatly alarmed, but not for his person; that no injury was threatened to his person; that when he delivered his money his apprehension was, that if he had refused so to do, the prisoners would have gone to Birmingham, and have returned with other persons, and pulled down his house and plundered it before he could have removed his wife, who was in the house, in great agitation, as the prisoners had threatened, and in the same manner as different houses in Birmingham had been before pulled down. It appeared that the prisoners had a small share of the money afterwards. It was objected to on their behalf, that there was no evidence of robbery, inasmuch as the prosecutor did not deliver his money from any immediate fear of danger to himself or his property, but from an apprehension of future injury to his house by pulling it down. And the counsel for the crown admitting it to be a new case, Grose, J., proposed to have a special verdict found; but, on account of the prisoners' situation, it was agreed that the truth of the evidence should be left to the jury, and if they should find the prisoners guilty, the judgment should be respited, and the facts submitted to the judges for their opinion, whether the evidence amounted to robbery. The jury found the prisoners guilty; saying that they were satisfied that Mr. Grundy did not deliver his money from any apprehension of danger to his life or person, but from an apprehension that, if he refused, his house would at some future time be pulled down, as the prisoners and the stranger threatened, in the same manner as other houses in Birmingham had been before. In Michaelmas term, 1792, a majority of the judges held this to be robbery. (R. v. J. Astley and E. Astley, Stafford Summer Assizes, 1792, cor. Grose, J., 2 East's P. C. 729.)

1. Offence of.

But, in R. v. Wood and Knewland, who, under pretence of an auction, got a woman into a house, and compelled her, by threats of carrying her before a magistrate and to prison, for not paying for a lot pretended to have been bid for by her, to pay them 1s. through fear of prison, and for the purpose of obtaining her liberty, but without fear of any other personal violence—this was holden to be duress, and not robbery. Ashhurst, J., in delivering the opinion of the judges, observed, that there was no reason for such a degree of terror in this case as to induce the prosecutrix to part with her money: she might have known that, having done no wrong, if she had been taken to prison, the law would have taken her under its protection, and set her free; and that the law did not allow the fear of being sent to prison to be a sufficient ground of terror to constitute a robbery.

Degree of fear.

Circumstances from which the court and jury may presume such a degree of apprehension of danger as would induce the prosecutor to part with his property, are sufficient to constitute fear. (Fost. 128.) Therefore, if a man knock another down, and steal from him his property whilst he is insensible on the ground, this is robbery. (Fost. 128.) A stage-coach having frequently been robbed on a particular road, J. N. went in it for the purpose of apprehending the robber. The robber met the coach, presented a pistol, and demanded money of the passengers; J. N. accordingly delivered his money, but immediately afterwards jumped out of the coach, and, with the assistance of others, secured the robber: and this was holden to be robbery. (Fost. 129.) So, where the defendant tore a lady's ear through, in snatching an ear-ring from it, the judges held it to be robbery. (R. v. Lapier, 1 Leach, 320; ante, 373.)

But merely snatching property from a person unawares, and running away with it, will not be robbery, (R. v. Steward, 2 East's P. C. 702; R. v. Horner, Id. 703; R. v. Baker, 1 Leach, 290; R. v. Macauley, Id. 287); because fear cannot, in fact, be presumed in such a case. (See ante, 373.)

Fear of loss of character by threats.

The cases of robbery in which the property has been obtained by means of a fear being excited of injury to the character of the party robbed, appear to be confined to insinuations against, or threats to destroy, the character of the party pillaged, by accusing him of sodomitical practices. (2 Rus. 1009.) The fears unavoidably excited by these means have, on several occasions, been determined by the judges to be sufficient to constitute the crime of robbery. The bare idea of being thought addicted to so odious and detestable a crime is, of itself, sufficient to deprive the injured person of all the comforts and advantages of society; a punishment more terrible, both in apprehension and reality, than even death itself. The law, therefore, considers the fear of losing character by such an imputation as equal to the fear of losing life itself, or of sustaining personal injury. (Per Ashhurst, J., in delivering the opinion of the judges in R. v. James Knewland and Nathaniel Wood, O. B. Feb. Sess. 1796; 2 Leach, 730.)

In the case of Thomas Jones alias Evans, the prisoner was convicted at the O. B. June Sess. 1776, of a robbery, in extorting money by threatening to charge the prosecutor with sodomy, the prosecutor swearing that he was so alarmed by the idea, that he had neither courage nor strength to call out for assistance, and that the violence with which he had been detained in the street by the prisoner, had put him in fear for the safety of his person. (R. v. Jones alias Evans, 1 Leach, 139; 2 East's P. C. 714, S. C.)

Robert Harrold was afterwards convicted for a similar robbery, with the approbation of the judges. (2 East's P. C. 715.)

This matter was afterwards most deliberately considered in Donolly's case, who was tried at the O. B. Feb. Sess. 1779, for a highway robbery. It appeared, that as the prosecutor (the Hon. C. Fielding), a young gentleman, was passing through Soho Square, between six and seven o'clock in the evening, he met the prisoner, whom he had never seen before. The prisoner desired that he would give him a present. The prosecutor asked, for what? The prisoner answered, "You had better comply, or I will take you before a magistrate, and accuse you of an attempt to commit an unnatural crime." The prosecutor then gave him half-a-guinea, which the prisoner said was not sufficient; but Mr. F. had no more in his pocket. Two days after, in the evening, the prosecutor again met the prisoner in Oxford Street, who made use of the same threats as before, telling the prosecutor that he knew what passed in Soho Square, and unless he would give him more money, he would take him before a magistrate, and accuse him of the same attempt; adding, that it would go hard with him, unless he could prove an alibi. The prosecutor then went into an adjoining shop, whither the prisoner followed him, and stayed at the outside of the door. The prosecutor took a guinea out of his pocket, and gave it to the shopkeeper, desiring him to give it to the man at the door, which was done, and the prisoner then departed. The prosecutor then deposed, that he was exceedingly alarmed on both occasions, and under that alarm gave the money; that he was not aware what were the consequences of such a charge, but apprehended it might cost him his life. The jury were desired to consider, 1st, whether upon the evidence, they were satisfied that the prosecutor delivered his money through fear, and under an apprehension that his life was in danger; or, 2dly, if they did not think that the prosecutor apprehended his life was in danger, whether the money were not obtained by means of the prisoner's threats, and against the will of the prosecutor; for, if it were, even in that case, though he were not in fear of his life, the crime would amount to robbery. The jury found the prisoner guilty; and said they were satisfied that the prosecutor delivered his money through fear, and under an apprehension that his life was in danger. There being some difference of opinion among the judges on this case, they directed it to be argued before them, which was done on the 29th April, 1779, at Lord C. J. De Grey's house, present all the judges; when, after very full consideration, they at length all agreed that the case amounted to robbery. (R. v. Donolly, O. B. Feb. 1779, cor. Buller, J., 2 East's P. C. 715; 1 Leach, 193.)

In the May Old Bailey Sessions following, 1779, Sess. Pap., No. 5, p. 3; 2 East's P. C. 726; Willes, J., in giving judgment (after noticing the definition of robbery by Lord Hale and others to the same effect), observed, that the following ingredients were necessary to constitute that offence:—

1. A felonious intent, or animus furandi.
2. Some degree of violence or putting in fear.
3. A taking from the person of another.

He observed, that he should confine himself to show that the prisoner's offence came within the above description, as the judges did not mean to draw the line as to what should or should not constitute robbery, and therefore they declined giving an answer to the cases put by the prisoner's counsel, urging that every case must depend upon its own conviction; but that the facts, in this case, warranted them in saying, as to the first point, that there was a felonious intention in the prisoner to rob the prosecutor. Upon the second point, that the putting in fear was not necessary to be laid in the indictment, so that the facts were charged to be done violently and against the will of the party. Nor was the circumstance of actual fear necessary to be proved; but that the law, in odium spoliatoris, would presume it. In like manner, it had been often holden that actual violence was not necessary, but that constructive violence was sufficient; for, where such a terror was impressed on the mind as did not leave the party a free agent, and, in order to get rid of that terror, he delivered his money, it was robbery. It was also clear that no actual danger was necessary; for a man might commit robbery without having any offensive weapon; and though a tinder-box or candlestick were used. For when a villain came and demanded a man's money, no one knew to what length he would proceed. That here the situation of the prosecutor was that of a young gentleman accosted at night in the street by a stranger, whom he had never before seen, and must have suspected to be a villain, who demanded a present. Even that seemed sufficient; but the stranger went on and told him that he had better comply, &c. That was a threat of a personal injury, for he had every thing to fear

1. Offence of. in being dragged through the streets as a culprit charged with an unnatural crime. That, therefore, was a reasonable fear; which might operate in constantem, as well as in meticulosum virum. It had, he said, been urged on behalf of the prisoner, that this was a fraudulent extorting, and not a taking by violence. But in many cases fraud would supply the want of violence; as in the case of burglary, where breaking was necessary to be laid in the indictment, and yet getting admission into a house under colour of law or pretence of taking a lodging or business had been often holden sufficient evidence of the breaking into the house. But the judges, he observed, did not entirely determine this case on that ground, but were of opinion, that there was proof of a constructive violence, which they thought was sufficient. As to the third point, that there was clearly a taking from the person; though a taking in the presence of the party would have been sufficient. After citing the above-mentioned cases of Jones, Brown, and Harrold, he observed, that in those cases there was this difference from the present, that there was some actual violence proved, as taking by the collar or arm; but that the judges all held that that did not make any material distinction, but that sufficient was proved in this case for the jury to find the prisoner guilty of robbery.

In the October sessions following, John Staples was convicted of a similar offence, and executed. (Staples' case, O. B., 1779.)

David Hickman was indicted for robbing John Millard, in St. James's Palace, of two guineas. He obtained the money from the prosecutor by charging him with a similar crime as in the foregoing cases; and by threatening, that if he did not make him satisfaction, he would bring a sergeant and a file of men to take him up before a magistrate. The prosecutor swore that he parted with his money for fear of losing his character, and that he had no other fear. The jury found the prisoner guilty; but as some of the bench thought that this case differed from that of Donolly, it was reserved for the opinion of the judges; who, in November, 1783, were all of opinion that it was robbery. Ashhurst, J., afterwards, Old Bailey, Feb. 1784, 1 Leach, 279, delivered their opinion, that this did not materially differ from the case of Donolly; for that the true definition of robbery is the stealing or taking from the person or in his presence, property of any amount, with such a degree of force or terror, as to induce the party unwillingly to part with his property; and that, whether the terror arose from real or expected violence to the person, or from a sense of injury to the character, the law made no kind of difference: for, to most men, the idea of losing their fame and reputation was equally, if not more terrific, than the dread of personal injury. That the principal ingredient in robbery was a man's being forced to part with his property. And that the judges were unanimously of opinion, that, upon the principles of law and the authority of former decisions, a threat to accuse a man of having committed the greatest of all crimes was a sufficient force to constitute the crime of robbery by putting in fear. (Hickman's case, Old Bailey, July, 1783, 2 East's P. C. 728.)

Obtaining money by threatening to charge a man with an unnatural crime, and to carry him before a magistrate, is a robbery, if there is any constraint on his person; and if the prisoners call a coach to carry the party before a magistrate, and the prosecutor get into it, such is a constraint upon his person. (R. v. Thomas Cannon and Another, R. & R. C. C. 146.)

Fear or loss of character and service on a charge of sodomitical practices is sufficient to constitute robbery, though the party had no fear of being taken into custody or of punishment. (R. v. Egerton, R. & R. C. C. R. 375.)

But parting with property upon the charge of an unnatural crime, will not make the taking a robbery, if it is parted with, not from fear of loss of character, but for the purpose of prosecuting. (R. v. Fuller, Id. 408.)

The intimidation must be on the mind of the person threatened to be accused; and, therefore, it is not robbery to obtain money from a woman under a threat of accusing her husband. (R. v. Edward, 1 M. & Rob. 257.)

The intimidation must be on mind of party threatened.

It is equally a robbery to extort money from a person by threatening to accuse him of an unnatural crime, whether the party so threatened has been guilty of such crime or not. (R. v. Gardner, 1 C. & P. 479.)

2. Indictment for.

If the property be not taken by actual violence, and the owner only deliver it in consequence of prior threats, such delivery must be enforced by terror actually felt at the time, to constitute the crime; otherwise there is neither actual nor constructive violence in the taking, and, consequently, no robbery. (2 East's P. C. 733.)

Guilt of party threatened immaterial.

Where no force, there must be terror in fact

It is not enough that the fear arise after the property is taken. Harman, being on horseback, desired Halfpenny to open a gap for him; and while he was so doing, Harman took the opportunity, unperceived, to pick his pocket of his purse. Halfpenny, turning round, and seeing the purse in Harman's hand, demanded it of him, who then menaced Halfpenny (in the manner before-mentioned), and went away with the purse. On an indictment for robbery, the prisoner was holden guilty of simple larceny only; the property being obtained by stealth, and not by violence or putting in fear; the words of menace being used after the taking. (Harman's case, Hil. 17 Jac. 2; Roll. Rep. 154; 1 Hale, 534.)

Fear after the taking not sufficient.

In the case of Jackson and Shipley, Nottingham Spr. Ass. 1802, before Mr. Baron Graham, it was decided, on a case reserved, that to constitute robbery by taking money from another upon a threat to charge him with an unnatural crime, the money must be taken immediately upon the threat made, and not after the parties have separated, and time for the prosecutor to deliberate and procure assistance, and especially after he had consulted a friend, who was even present at the time when the money was paid, though the prosecutor parted with his money from fear of losing his character. (R. v. Jackson and Shipley, 1 East's P. C., Add. XXI.; and see R. v. Reeve, 2 Leach, 616.)

But, now, the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 7, declares it to be robbery, if any person shall accuse, or threaten to accuse, any other person of any infamous crime, as thereafter defined, with a view or intent to extort or gain from him, and shall, by intimidating him by such accusation or threat, extort or gain from him any chattel, money, or valuable security.

Except in threats to accuse of unnatural crimes.

And sect. 9 declares, that the abominable crime of buggery, committed either with mankind or with beast, and every assault with intent to commit the said abominable crime, and every attempt or endeavour to commit the said abominable crime, and every solicitation, persuasion, promise, or threat offered or made to any person to commit or permit the said abominable crime, shall be deemed to be an infamous crime within the meaning of that act. (Ante, "Larceny," Vol. III.)

Under the 4 Geo. IV. c. 54, s. 3, which made it felony to threaten to accuse a person of an infamous crime with a view to extort money, a charge of making overtures to commit sodomy was held not to be an infamous crime within the act, and that such overtures would not subject the party making them to an infamous crime, or prevent his being a witness. (R. v. Hickman, R. & M. C. C. 34.) But this is remedied by the above clause, which defines the nature of an infamous crime.

II. Indictment for Robbery.

The venue must be laid in the county where the crime actually took place. (2 Leach, 634.) See, as to the venue in robbing the mail, ante, "Post-Office;" see also, as to the venue in cases where the place of committing the offence is doubtful, "Indictment," Vol. III. p. 415, 416.

Indictment for.

The putting in fear need not be laid in the indictment, so that the fact be charged to be done violently and against the will of the party. (R. v. Donolly, ante, p. 376, 377; Fost. 128; 1 Hale, 534.)

The term violently is not absolutely requisite, so that it otherwise appear violence was used. (2 East's P. C. 783.)

3. Punishment for.

The assault must be laid to have been feloniously made. (2 Leach, 564.) Where the indictment stated that the robbery was in a field near the king's highway, and it was not proved that it was near any highway, it was considered that the allegation of the robbery being in a field near the highway was immaterial, for the 3 & 4 Wil. & Mary, c. 2, took away clergy, let the robbery be where it might. (R. v. Wardle, R. & R. C. C. 9.) And so, where the indictment charged that the prisoner robbed A. B. in the dwelling-house of J. S., and the robbery was proved, and that it was in the house, but whose house it did not appear, this was held immaterial. (R. v. Pye, R. & R. C. C. 9, 10, n.)

As to the mode of describing the goods, and the ownership thereof, see "Endictment," Vol. III. p. 435; "Larceny," Vol. III.

The indictment need not conclude against the form of the statute, unless, perhaps, the robbery be of some security or chattel not the subject of larceny at common law.

On the trial, should it appear that any of the circumstances of robbery are wanting, but the taking is proved, the defendant may be acquitted of the aggravated offence, and found guilty of simple larceny. (R. v. Francis, Rep. temp. Hardw. 115; Com. Rep. 478; 2 Stra. 1014, S. C.)

If the property be once taken, the offence will not be purged by the robber delivering it back to the owner. (1 Hale, 533; 1 Haw. c. 34, s. 2; R. v. Peat, 1 Leach, 228.)

III. Punishment for Robbery.

Punishment for.

Robbery is generally inflicted with the heaviest punishment. (See 3 Inst. 68; 2 Hale, c. 48.)

By the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 6, if any person shall rob any other person of any chattel, money, or valuable security, every such offender, being convicted thereof, shall suffer death as a felon; and if any person shall steal any such property from the person of another, or shall assault any other person with intent to rob him, or shall with menaces or by force demand any such property of any other person with intent to steal the same, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for life, or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years, and, if a male, to be once, twice, or thrice publicly or privately whipped (if the court shall so think fit), in addition to such imprisonment." This sentence of death may be recorded. See 4 Geo. IV. c. 48.

See the general clauses of this act, affecting all its provisions, title "Larceny," Vol. III.

The 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 27, repeals the 23 Hen. VIII. c. 1, 3 Wil. & Mary, c. 9, and so much of the 1 Edw. VI. c. 12, as relates to housebreaking, robbing, horse-stealing, and sacrilege, and to the allowance of the benefit of clergy in any case therein mentioned: so far the repeals go to robbery.

By the 22 Geo. II. c. 33, robbery in the navy shall be punished with death, or otherwise, as a court-martial, on consideration of the circumstances, shall find meet.

IV. Principal and Accessary.

Principal and accessary.

All that come in company to rob are principals, though one actually do it. (Hale's Sum. 72.)

If a gang of poachers attack a gamekeeper, and leave him senseless on the ground, and one of them return and steal his money, &c., that one only can be convicted of the robbery, as it was not in pursuance of any common intent. (R. v. Hawkins, 3 C. & P. 392.)

As to accessaries in general, see "Accessary," Vol. I.

V. Rewards.

5. Rewards.

As to rewards for apprehending robbers, see, ante, "Reward."

VI. Laying Hue and Cry on a Robbery.

How hue and cry shall be made, see "Hue and Cry," Vol. III.

Hue and cry.

VII. What shall be done with the Goods of the Person robbed.

If the person robbed do not prosecute the robber; unless his goods be waived in flight, or seized by the king's officers, or lord of the manor, he shall not have them restored. (Kel. 49.)

Restitution of goods taken by robbery.

But if they be not waived in flight, nor seized by the king's officers or the lord of the manor, he may take his goods again wherever he finds them, without the formality of restitution being awarded, if they be not sold in open market; and this, also, although he do not prosecute the robber. (Kel. 49.)

But if he shall prosecute the robber to conviction, he shall have restitution, although they have been waived, and seized, and even sold in open market. (Kel. 48.) See further, "Larceny," (Restitution) Vol. III.

VIII. Assaults with Intent to rob.

This offence has already been noticed, under title "Assault," Vol. I. p. 287. It is provided against by the 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 6.

Assaults to rob.

IX. Demanding Money, &c. with Intent to rob.

This offence will be found treated of under title "Threats," Vol. VI. It is provided against by the statute 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, s. 6, 7.

Threats to rob.

X. Liability of Hundred.

It seems the hundred are now no longer liable in cases of robbery, but only for damages done by rioters. See "Hundred," Vol. III.

Liability of hundred.

abolished.

By 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 81, intituled, "An Act for abolishing capital punishments in cases of Letter-stealing and Sacrilege," reciting the 36 Geo. III. c. 1, 52 Geo. III. c. 143, 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 29, and 9 Geo. IV. c. 55, it is enacted, that "so much of each of the said acts as inflicts the punishment of death upon persons convicted of any of the offences therein and hereinbefore specified, shall be and the same is hereby repealed, and that from and after the passing of this act every person convicted of any of the offences in the said act so specified, or of aiding or abetting, counselling or procuring the commission thereof, shall be liable to be transported beyond the seas for life, or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction for any term not exceeding four years."

6 Wil. 4, c. 4.

By 6 Wil. IV. c. 4, intituled, "An Act to amend an Act of the last Session for abolishing Capital Punishments in Cases of Letter-stealing and Sacrilege," reciting, that by the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 81, "the punishment of death was taken away in cases of letter-stealing and sacrilege; but by reason of a clerical error in copying the same a doubt may be entertained whether persons guilty of such offences are now by law liable to any punishment:" it is therefore enacted, "that the same act shall be read as if, instead of the words 'in the said act so specified,' the words 'in the said acts so specified' had been inserted in the said act of the last session; and that all persons who may hereafter be duly convicted of any of the offences mentioned in the said act of the last session shall and may be sentenced, by the court or judge by or before whom such offenders may be tried, to transportation for life or for any term of years not less than seven, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years, with or without hard labour, and for any period of solitary confinement during such imprisonment, at the discretion of such court or judge."

How 5 & 6 Wil. 4, c. 81, how shall be read.

Persons convicted

What an offence
within act.

If a church-tower be built higher than the church, and have a separate roof, but have no outer door, and be only accessible from the body of the church, from which it is not separated by any partition, this tower is a part of the church, within the meaning of the above act. (R. v. Wheeler and others, 3 C. & P. 585.)

The statute is not confined to goods used for divine service; it extends to articles kept in the church to keep it in proper repair. And such goods will be under the protection of the statute whilst the church is under repair, unless they are brought in merely for the purpose of such repairs. So ruled by all the judges, in R. v. Rourke, R. & R. C. C. 386; 5 Burn's J., 24 ed., S. C.

As to the mode of describing the property and ownership, see "Indictment," Vol. III. p. 426 to 436; "Larceny," Vol. III.; "Burglary," Vol. I.

The allegation of property in the parishioners, rector, or churchwardens, will be sufficiently proved, by evidence, that the church is a parish church; but the property in goods in a chapel must be proved as in ordinary cases. (Jervis' Arch. C. L. 6th ed. 201.)

Upon an indictment for stealing goods from a dissenting chapel, the first count of the indictment described them as the property of the trustees of the chapel, and the second as the property of a person who was employed to take care of the chapel, kept the keys of the chapel, and received a salary for so doing; the first count was not proved, and the judges held that the second could not be sustained, because the goods could not be considered as belonging to the chapel-keeper. (R. v. Hutchinsan, R. & R. 412.)

Where a prisoner was indicted for stealing a bible, a hymn book, and a pair of brass sconces, the property of J. B. and others, which it appeared had been stolen from a methodist chapel at Fakenham, and the bible and hymn book had been presented to the society of methodists there, of which J. B. was one, and also a trustee of the chapel, but the trust deed was not produced; it was held by Parke, J., that as J. B. was one of the society, the property was well laid in him. (R. v. Boulton, 5 C. & P. 537.)

The word chapel in the statute has been construed not to apply to chapels of dissenters. Where the prisoner was indicted for breaking and entering a chapel, which appeared from the evidence to be a dissenting chapel—it was held by Gaselee, J., and Vaughan, B., that the statute applied only to chapels of the Church of England; because where the legislature meant to protect the chapels of dissenters, they expressly mentioned them, as in the stat. 7 & 8 Geo. IV. c. 30, s. 2. (R. v. Warren, 6 C. & P. 335, n.)

Goods in a dissenting chapel, vested in trustees, cannot be described as the goods of a servant who has merely the custody of the chapel and things in it, to clean and keep in order, though he has the key of the chapel, and no other person but the minister has another key. The following cases are for the most part to be found collected and arranged in Harrison's Digest under this title. And see Mr. Hall's Essay on the Rights of the Crown and Subject on the Sea Shore, &c.

Where the public have the right of passing and repassing between the high and low water marks, as well over the water as the land, it seems that the obstruction of such a right will be a nuisance. (Att. Gen. v. Burrige, 10 Price, 350.) The question of the nuisance is a matter of fact. (Id.)

The crown may grant by letters patent to a corporation, a town and borough, being caput portus, as Portsmouth, all the land between the high and low water marks; but this subject-matter of grant, as being jus privatum in the king, must be subject to the jus publicum, or public right of the king and people to the easement of passing and repassing, both over the water and the land. (Id.)

Where a part of the sea-coast or shore, being the property of the crown, and giving jus privatum to the king, is granted to a subject for uses, or to be enjoyed so as to be detrimental to the jus publicum therein, such grant is void as to such parts as are open to such objection, if acted upon so as to effect a nuisance by working injury to the public right, or it is a grant which does not divest the crown or invest the grantee. (Att. Gen. v. Parmeter, 10 Price, 378.)

Buildings, erections, and inclosures between the high and low water marks in the harbour of Portsmouth, interrupting the flux and reflux of the tide, were abated by decree of the court of Exchequer as a nuisance, where made under the sanction and authority of the corporation, having a grant from the crown by charter. (Id.)

The court of Exchequer may decree such an abatement. (Id.)

The king's attorney-general, on the part of the crown, may proceed in such cases for the purpose of protecting either the jus privatum of the king from the purpresture, or the jus publicum of the subject from nuisance, by information on the king's remembrancer's side of the Exchequer, or by English bill, praying a personal decree against the defendants in the suit. (Id.)

As to the public right to bathe in the sea, see "Bathing," Vol. I. 399.

Trespass for breaking and entering the plaintiff's close. Plea of justification, that the close was the sea-shore, and that all the subjects of the king had the right to enter and carry away the sea-weed left by the tide, and that the defendant being such subject entered. Replication, that every subject had not, nor had the defendant the right:—Held that the replication was bad, either because it amounted to a traverse of matter of law, or else, if not, was argumentative and double, as tendering two issues of fact. Held also that the plea was bad, for there is not at common law a general right in the public of entering the sea-shore for the purpose of taking sea-weed. (Howe v. Stowell, 1 Alcock & Napier, 348.) (Irish.)

A custom for the inhabitants of a parish to take from a private close which adjoins the sea, sand drifted there, for manure, amounts to a custom to take profits in alieno solo, and is bad. 2. Such a right cannot be claimed by custom. (Blewitt v. Tregonning, 1 Harr. & W. 431.)

Rights of private individuals on sea shore.

Lands formed by alluvion, that is, by gradual and imperceptible deposit on the shore of the sea, belong to the owners of the adjoining demesne lands, and not to the king jure coronæ. (R. v. Yarborough, Lord, 2 Bligh, N. S. 147; 1 Dow, N. S. 178; 5 Bing, 163; 7 D. & R. 790; 3 B. & C. 91.)

Where the lord of a manor acquired a piece of land which had been formed by ooze and soil deposited by the sea upon the extremity of his demesne lands, and it appeared that the increase could not be observed when actually going on, although a visible increase took place every year, and in the course of fifty years a large piece of land had been thus formed; and upon an inquest finding that the land had been left by the sea, and an issue taken upon a traverse to that finding, the verdict was for the defendant:—Held that the crown was not entitled to judgment. (Id.)

A grant of lands to be recovered from the sea, must be reduced into possession within a reasonable time. (Att. Gen. v. Richards, 2 Anst. 614.)

By act of parliament, reciting that a certain tract of land daily overflowed by the sea, and to which the king in right of his crown claimed title, might be rendered productive if embanked, and that his majesty had consented to such embankment, a part of the said land, called Lipson Bay, was granted to a company for that purpose. On one side of the bay was the northern side of an estate called Lipson Ground, forming an irregular declivity, in parts perpendicular and in parts sloping down to the sea-shore, and overgrown with brushwood and old trees. The company in embanking the bay, made a drain on this side in the same direction with the cliff, cutting through it in parts, but leaving several recesses of small extent between the projecting points. These recesses used to be overspread with sea-weed and beach, and were covered by the high water of the ordinary spring tides, but not by the medium tides:—Held in the absence of proof as to acts of ownership, that the soil of these recesses must be presumed to have belonged to the owner of the adjoining estate and not to the crown, and did not therefore pass to the embankment company by the act of parliament. (Lowe v. Govett, 3 B. & Adol. 862.)

The lord of the manor, by lease and release, bargained and sold certain sea-grounds, oyster-layings, shores, and fisheries, extending from the south at low water mark to north at high water mark, and containing in the whole by estimation 800 acres of land covered with water or thereabouts, as the same are beacons, marked, and stubbed out; since the date of the deed the sea had imperceptibly encroached upon the land, and the high and low water marks had varied in the same proportion:—Held, that so much of the soil of the shore as from time to time lay between high and low water mark, had passed to the grantee under this deed. (Scrutton v. Brown, 6 D. & R. 536; 4 B. & C. 485, S. C.)

A grant of wreck from Hen. II. to the abbey of C. upon all their lands by the sea, confirmed by inspeximus by Hen. VIII., and a subsequent grant by him of the island of B. and its shores belonging to the late abbey of C., supported by evidence, that between forty and fifty years ago the proprietor of the island of B. raised an embankment across a small bay, and had ever since asserted an exclusive right to the soil without opposition:—Held, that although the usage of forty years' duration could not of itself establish such exclusive right or destroy the rights of the public, yet that it was evidence from which prior usage to the same effect might be presumed, and which, coupled with the general words contained in those grants, served to establish such right. (Chad v. Tilsed, 5 Moore, 185; 2 B. & B. 403, S. C.)

So where the lessees of a fishery had publicly landed their nets on the shore at A. for more than twenty years, and had frequently repaired the landing-place, although both the fishery and landing-place had originally belonged to one person; but no evidence was offered in an action for the disturbance of the lessor's rights, to show that he, or those who owned the shore at A. under him, knew of the lessees of the fishery landing their nets there:—Held that it was properly left to the jury to presume a grant of the right of landing to the lessees by some former owner of the shore at A. (Gray v. Bond, 5 Moore, 527; 2 B. & B. 667, S. C.)

Persons occupying lands adjoining the sea, may erect such defences as are necessary for the preservation of their own lands, although such erections may render it necessary for their neighbours to do the like. (R. v. Pagham, Commissioners, 2 M. & R. 468; 8 B. & C. 355, S. C.) Sea walls and banks.

So commissioners of sewers for certain levels for the preservation of certain lands within the levels. (Id.)

And no obligation arises to erect works for the protection of such neighbours, nor to indemnify them against loss. (Id.)

If a sea-bank or wall which the owners of particular lands are bound to repair, be destroyed by tempest without any default of such owners, the commissioners of sewers may order a new one (even in a different form, if necessary,) to be erected at the expense of the whole level. (R. v. Somerset, Commissioners of Sewers, 8 T. R. 312.)

Where the owner of marsh lands was bound by the custom of a sewage-level to repair the sea-walls abutting on his own land, and by an extraordinary flood-tide the wall was damaged, the court refused to grant a mandamus to the commissioners of sewers to reimburse him the expense of the repairs, it appearing by affidavit that the wall had been previously presented for being in bad repair, and was out of repair at the time the accident happened, nor can the other landowners in the level be called upon to contribute to the repairs of such wall. (R. v. Essex, Commissioners of Sewers, 2 D. & R. 700; 1 B. & C. 477, S. C.)

The commissioners of sewers cannot maintain an action of trespass against the commissioners of a harbour for the breaking down a wall or dam erected by the former, as such commissioners, across a navigable river, as the authority to be exercised by them on behalf of the public does not vest in them such a property or possessory interest as will enable them to maintain such action. (Newcastle, Duke, v. Clark, 2 Moore, 666.)

An individual who had suffered loss in consequence of decay of sea-walls, which a corporation is directed to repair under the terms of a grant from the crown, conveying a borough and pier or quay tolls to the corporation for damages. (Lyme, Mayor, &c., v. Henley, 3 B. & Adol. 77; 5 Bing. 91, S. C.)

So as the obligation concerns the public, an indictment would lie for the general default. (Id.)

So when the obligation arises from prescription. (Lynn, Mayor, v. Turner, Cowp. 86; S. P. Anon. Lofft, 556.)

By an act for improving the town of Brighton, and preserving the adjacent coast from the incursions of the sea, the commissioners therein named were empowered to collect any rate or duty which they should think fit to order, not exceeding the sum of three shillings for every chaldron of coals landed on the beach, or in any other manner brought or delivered within the limits of the town. And where a declaration in debt for duties under this statute, alleged that the defendant on divers days and times, between &c., brought and delivered within the town divers large quantities, in the whole amounting to a large quantity, to wit, sixty-eight chaldrons and four bushels of coals, in quantities on each of the said days and times less than one chaldron:—Held that the duty attached, though the defendant did not bring into the town at any one time a quantity amounting to a chaldron:—Held also, that the plaintiff might take judgment for the sixty-eight chaldrons, and enter a remittitur for the residue. What offences the court martial may punish.

By the 22 Geo. II. c. 33, s. 4, no court martial may punish or try any offence committed by any seaman in his majesty's service, which shall not be committed on the main sea, or in great rivers beneath the bridges, or in a haven or creek within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty; except in the case of spies, or of mutiny and desertion, or disobedience, or of offences committed on land in foreign countries.

A purser in the navy is liable, by the 22 Geo. II. c. 33, to be tried by a court martial for fraudulently and unlawfully charging blankets against seamen to whom none had been issued, and of making, in order to such charge, certain false entries in one of the ship's books, that being within the 36th article of war, an offence not capital, committed by a person in the fleet, not before mentioned in the act, and for which no punishment is thereby directed to be inflicted. (Mann v. Owen, 9 B. & C. 595.)

Where they may exercise trades.

By the 22 Geo. II. c. 44, and 3 Geo. III. c. 8, seamen who have been employed in the king's service since the accession of King George the Second, and not deserted, may set up and exercise such trade as they are apt for, in any town or place of Great Britain or Ireland, without molestation (except in Oxford or Cambridge); and if any person be sued thereupon, and the plaintiff be cast, such person shall have double costs.

Convicted of swearing.

By the 19 Geo. II. c. 21, s. 5, a seaman, instead of being committed to the house of correction for default of paying the penalty for swearing, shall be put in the stocks for one hour for every single offence, and for any number of offences of which he shall be convicted at one and the same time, two hours. Repeal of acts.

By the 11 Geo. IV. & 1 Wil. IV. c. 20, intituled "An Act to amend and consolidate the Laws relating to the Pay of the Royal Navy," [29 May, 1830,] after reciting, "whereas it is expedient to revise, amend, and reduce into one act the laws relating to the payment of wages and other monies payable in respect of services done on board his majesty's ships and vessels of war," it is enacted, "that from and after the passing of this act, so much of the 1 Geo. I. c. 25, as relates to the punishment of persons who shall counterfeit the hands of the treasurer, comptroller, clerk of the acts, surveyor or commissioners of the navy, or of the signing or vouching officers of his majesty's navy, ships, or yards, to any bill, ticket, or other papers;" and the 14 Geo. II. c. 38, the 31 Geo. II. c. 10, the 32 Geo. III. c. 33, the 32 Geo. III. c. 67, the 35 Geo. the lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral for the time being; and to this end the captain shall make out a complete list of the names of the men, with their respective numbers on the ship's books, who shall be so desirous of receiving a portion of their pay, and who shall be actually on board at the time of making out such list, which shall be signed by the captain and proper signing officers of the ship; and that the purser shall then draw, for the amount of the said portion of pay so to be issued, a bill of exchange at three days' sight upon the commissioners of the navy, in the accustomed form, or such other form as shall be for that purpose supplied to the ship, which bill shall be certified by the captain, and shall be, when presented at the navy office, assigned for payment to be made by the treasurer of the navy, and the amount thereof shall be charged against the purser; and so soon as cash shall have been obtained by the purser by the negotiation of such bill, the allowed portion of the pay shall be paid by the purser to the parties, in the presence of the captain and a commission or warrant officer entitled to draw bills, each of whom, with the purser, shall certify the payment on the list; and the captain shall, by the first safe and convenient opportunity after such payment, transmit the said list to the commissioners of the navy; and the captain and purser shall likewise certify at the end of each muster book the full amount, in words at length, of the monies which shall have been so paid during the exact period of time of such book, and that the several sums so paid have been therein duly charged against the respective persons so paid; and in case there shall be any balance of money left in the purser's hands, he shall give credit for the amount in the next bill to be drawn by him for monthly payments, so that he shall not be at liberty to draw for more than what, including such balance and any premium to be obtained on the bill, shall be sufficient to answer the next monthly payment."

Absent men.

Sect. 4. "In case any such person shall be absent with sufficient cause at the time of such payment, his name, on his return to the ship, shall be subjoined to the next lists to be made out, in which the cause and dates of his absence and return shall be specified; and in case any individual shall be discharged to another ship, being then entitled to any payment not made, the captain of the ship he leaves shall give him a certificate specifying his rating and the time for which he shall be entitled to such portion of pay, which shall be paid to him at the next payment to be made to the crew of the ship to which he shall be discharged."

Payments when no purser is on board.

Sect. 5. "In case of any such payment being made on board a ship which shall not have a purser on board, the commanding officer shall act as and be deemed to be the purser for all the purposes of such payments; and in such case the payment shall be made by him in the presence of any other commissioned officer of the ship and one warrant officer, or if there shall be no other commissioned officer, then in the presence of any two warrant officers, who shall certify and attest the lists in the manner before required." [See further the 2 Wil. IV. c. 40, s. 18, post, 426.]

Premium on bills.

Sect. 6. "At the foot of each bill the course of exchange shall be truly certified by two resident merchants at the place where the bill shall be drawn; and the purser or commanding officer, as the case may be, shall debit himself and be charged with any premium which such bills may bear, as part of the balance remaining on hand at the conclusion of each payment; and in case the bill shall be at a discount, he shall add the discount to the amount of the bill to be drawn, which discount shall be allowed in his accounts, if the amount be truly certified at the foot of such bill: provided nevertheless, that if the said bills shall be drawn at any port within the foreign or colonial territories of Great Britain where there shall be a resident naval officer, such naval officer is hereby enjoined and directed to give cash for the amount of such bills at par, upon which no premium or discount shall be charged or taken; and in case he shall not have sufficient cash in hand for the purpose, he shall certify the same by indorsement on such bill; or if the ship shall be at a port where there shall be an establishment of clerks of the treasurer of the navy, the bill to be drawn, certified and attested as aforesaid, shall be cashed by such clerks out of the public monies in their hands, and the amount thereof charged against the drawer in manner aforesaid."

Sect. 7. "Whenever any petty officer, seaman, or marine shall be turned over from one ship to another, in any port of the United Kingdom or on the coast thereof, he shall on the arrival of the ship to which he shall be removed at any port where there shall be an establishment of clerks of the treasurer of the navy, and before such ship shall proceed to sea, be paid all the wages due to him upon or by pay lists (being extracts from the muster books in the form heretofore accustomed, or in such other form as shall be found requisite, and as shall be directed by due authority), made out and signed by the captain and proper signing officers of the ship from which he shall be turned over, save and except in urgent cases, when the lord high admiral or commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral for the time being shall otherwise direct, and in such cases he shall be paid whenever the ship shall return to any port where there shall be a commissioner or other authorized officer of the navy to controul such payment: provided always, that no petty officer or seaman who shall be turned over from one ship to another shall be rated in a lower degree than that in which he was rated in the books of his former ship."

Sect. 8. "In case the ship to which any person shall be so turned over shall be then abroad, the captain shall, previous to his removal, cause to be made out in the usual form, or in such other form as shall be authorized by the lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral, a ticket, to be called a foreign remove ticket, containing the name, age, stature, and complexion of the party, the date of his entry and discharge, his number on the ship's books, the particulars of all slops and other charges against his wages, (the total amount of which shall be written in words at length,) and the name of the ship to which he shall be so turned over, which ticket shall be signed by the captain and the other proper signing officers of the ship, and then be delivered to the party, to enable him to receive payment of his wages conformably with the established regulations of the navy."

Sect. 9. "When any petty officer, seaman, or marine shall be sent sick to any hospital or sick quarters at home or abroad, a ticket, to be called a sick ticket, shall in like manner be made out by the captain and sent with him, which, in addition to the particulars to be contained in the foreign remove ticket, shall describe the different effects which shall be sent with him, and his disorder or infirmity, and shall be addressed to the surgeon or agent at such hospital or sick quarters; and upon his being thence discharged back to his own ship, he shall leave the ticket with the said surgeon or agent; but if discharged to any other ship not to rejoin his own ship, the said ticket shall be sent with him, and be paid conformably with the established regulations of the navy; and in case he shall be discharged from the said hospital or sick quarters as unserviceable, a certificate of his discharge shall be delivered to him with the said sick ticket, to enable him to receive his wages, and in the meantime he shall be maintained and subsisted either in such hospital or on board some ship of his majesty, or otherwise, as shall be found convenient: provided always, that all petty officers, seamen, and marines who shall be wounded in action with the enemy shall receive the full amount of their wages and allowances until their wounds shall be healed, or, if declared incurable, until they shall receive a pension or be admitted into the royal hospital at Greenwich; but no other petty officers, seamen, or marines, who shall be discharged from hospitals or sick quarters at home, either to a ship or from the service, shall be allowed wages for more than thirty days of the time they shall remain in such hospital or sick quarters."

Sect. 10. "When a petty officer, seaman, or marine shall, by wounds or infirmity, be disabled or rendered unserviceable, the captain shall represent the same to the commander-in-chief or senior officer, who shall cause the same to be inquired into by a survey, according to the practice of the navy; and if, upon such survey, such petty officer, seaman, or marine shall be found unfit for further service, he shall be discharged, and the captain shall there-

Promotion ticket.

Sect. 14. "No ticket herein directed to be made out, save and except the promotion ticket, shall be saleable or transferrable on any account, but shall, after having been examined at the navy office with the muster book of the ship or other returns, if received, be paid to the party only to whom the same is made out; provided the commissioners of the navy shall be satisfied that the ticket is genuine, and that the party presenting the same is the identical person to whom it is made out."

No ticket, except the promotion ticket, to be transferrable.

Sect. 15. "All tickets, certificates, pay lists, and other vouchers for wages, to be made out as aforesaid, shall be in the forms heretofore established and now in use in his majesty's naval service, or in such other forms as the lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral for the time being, or, under their authority, the commissioners of the navy, shall from time to time authorize; and if any officer or other person shall make out, sign, or issue any ticket, certificate, pay list, or other voucher or document for wages, other than in the form and under the regulations herein prescribed, every person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of fifty pounds, and if belonging to his majesty's naval service shall moreover be liable to such punishment and forfeiture of wages as a court martial shall adjudge."

As to seamen absent when a ship is paid.

Sect. 20. "In cases where petty officers, seamen, or marines may happen to be absent, either upon duty or sick, or with leave of the commanding officer, at the time of the payment of the ship, the commissioners of the navy, upon application from any such person so absent and then being in his majesty's service, or from his captain, in case the ship shall be in any port where a commissioner of the navy shall be or reside, shall cause the pay books of such ship, or extracts therefrom for such persons, to be forwarded without delay to the commissioner of the navy at the port where such ship shall be, in order that payment may be forthwith made to him thereon."

In urgent cases payment may be made before pay books are examined.

Sect. 21. "And whereas it may be expedient to pay the crews of ships on their arrival in port, or previous to sailing from thence, under circumstances which will not admit of the delay which must necessarily occur in previously sending the pay books to the navy office to be examined; be it therefore further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the commissioners of his majesty's navy, in cases of urgency, as they shall see necessary, to cause payment to be made upon such books without the previous examination thereof as aforesaid; but it is nevertheless hereby required and directed that the said books shall, immediately after payment shall have been so made thereon, be transmitted to the navy office, for the purpose of undergoing the necessary examination and adjustment, and in order that any charges omitted to be made, or any over-payments that may have occurred thereon, may be set off or abated or recovered at the first opportunity from the arrears of wages or growing wages of the men in respect of whom such omissions or over-payments may have taken place."

Sect. 22. "If any officer, seaman, or marine shall desert from his majesty's service, he shall thereby lose and forfeit all wages, prize money, and other allowances, benefits, and advantages to which he would otherwise have been entitled, as well in respect of his services in the ship from which he shall have deserted, as of those in all former ships in which he may have served; and no person against whose name the letter (R) shall be placed in the muster book of the ship as denoting a deserter shall, while such (R) so remains, be entitled to receive his wages, prize money, or other allowances: provided always, that it shall be lawful for the lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral for the time being, in such cases as they shall deem fit, to order the (R) placed against the deserter's name in the books of the ship to be removed, and to authorize the payment of the wages, prize money, or other allowances due to him."

Sect. 23. "It shall be lawful for any commission or warrant officer, on being appointed to any ship of his majesty in commission, he being entitled to half pay, and there being no imprest standing against him, upon application to the commissioners of the navy, and on the production of the affidavit usually required from half pay officers, and a certificate of the date of his commencing sea pay, to receive the arrears of half pay which may be due to him up to that date; and every such officer who shall have been on half pay for three months next before his appointment to any ship, and shall have no imprest outstanding against him, shall, on joining his ship, upon like application to the said commissioners, be entitled to receive the amount of three months' personal sea pay in advance: provided always, that in case any such officer shall be again put on half pay, from any cause whatever, before the expiration of three lunar months from the time of such appointment to a ship, the amount of the three months' wages so paid to him in advance, or for such part of the time as he shall not serve, shall be placed as an imprest against his future half pay."

Sect. 24. "It shall be lawful for every flag officer, commission officer, master, (such commission officer or master not being in the command of a ship, or not having accounts to pass,) secretary to a flag officer or commodore, physician, chaplain, second master, and assistant surgeon (not acting as surgeon,) who shall be actually in the naval service of his majesty, and entitled to full pay in the fleet, at the expiration of every three, six, or twelve lunar months, or of any longer period, to draw a bill of exchange, or a set of bills of the same tenor and date, upon the commissioners of his majesty's navy for the net balance of the personal wages due to him, which bill or set of bills shall be made payable to himself or to his order at ten days' sight, and shall state the rate or description and name of the ship to which he shall belong, and his station or rank on board the same, and also the full amount of the personal wages then due to him, and the period for which the same accrued, together with the amount of such charges and deductions as shall appear on the ship's books against him, and the net residue of the personal wages due to him, for which residue, and no more, the bill shall be drawn." [See this extended to inferior classes in the navy by 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 25, s. 1, post, 431.]

Sect. 25. "It shall be lawful for every captain, lieutenant, or master commanding a ship, surgeon, purser, and assistant surgeon acting as surgeon, to draw bills of exchange, in like manner and under similar regulations, for three-fourths, and no more, of their net personal pay; and that it shall also be lawful

[See this amended by the 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 25, s. 2, post, 432.]

Sect. 26. "It shall be lawful for every commission officer, master, secretary, physician, chaplain, surgeon, purser, second master, and assistant surgeon, who shall be sent to a hospital or sick quarters, to draw a bill of exchange upon the commissioners of the navy for the pay or proportion of pay, as by this act allowed, that may be due to him on the day of his being discharged to sick quarters: provided always, that every such bill, in addition to the certificate and approval hereafter mentioned, shall be accompanied by a certificate indorsed thereon, under the hand of the medical officer superintending the hospital or sick quarters to which such officer shall have been so discharged, of the day on which he was received into the same."

Sect. 27. "When any such officer shall be sent to sick quarters, there shall be made out, and he shall take with him, a perfect extract from the books of the ship, containing all the particulars therein entered relating to such officer; and upon his discharge from sick quarters the medical officer superintending such sick quarters shall certify on the back of such extract the period he shall have been therein, and the day of his discharge therefrom, to enable him to receive the balance of his pay in case he shall not be discharged back to his ship."

Sect. 28. "Whenever any such officer shall be discharged, superseded, or removed from one ship to another, having less than three months' pay due to him, he shall take with him a similar extract, to enable him to draw for his pay at the expiration of three months from the date of his last bill, in which bill so to be drawn the periods of his service in each ship for which pay shall be due shall be distinguished."

Sect. 29. "Every bill for personal pay to be drawn as aforesaid (save and except those drawn by flag officers, commodores, and captains,) shall be certified and approved as follows; every bill to be drawn by a commission officer (not commanding a ship), master, chaplain, surgeon, second master, assistant surgeon, passed mate, passed midshipman, and passed master's assistant, schoolmaster, and captain's clerk, shall be certified by the purser, and approved by the captain; every bill to be drawn by a secretary to a flag officer or commodore shall be certified by the purser, and approved by the flag officer or commodore; every bill to be drawn by a physician of a fleet shall be certified by the purser, and approved by the commander-in-chief of the fleet; every bill to be drawn by a purser shall be certified by the master, and approved by the captain or commanding officer; every bill to be drawn by a commanding officer, acting as purser, shall be also certified by the master or acting master; and every bill to be drawn by a secretary's clerk shall be certified by the purser, and approved by the secretary; and the officer by whom any bill shall be approved shall be held responsible that the party drawing the pay has been borne for pay during the period for which the bill is drawn, and is entitled to draw such bill, and that the purser hath previously certified his right to draw for the sum mentioned in the bill; and the purser or officer certifying shall also be held responsible for the correctness of his certificate to the bill."

Sect. 30. "If any officer authorized to draw a bill as aforesaid, shall knowingly and fraudulently draw any such bill for pay when there shall not be pay to the amount so drawn for due and owing to him, every person so offending shall forfeit all pay and other allowances to which he shall be then entitled, and moreover, upon being convicted thereof by court-martial, shall be cashiered, and rendered thereafter incapable of holding any office, civil or military, in his majesty's service : provided always, that no officer whose duty it shall be, according to the rules of the service, to transmit any logs, journals, returns, or other documents, either to the Admiralty office or to the Navy office, shall be entitled to receive any pay that may be due at the time of his discharge, or any half-pay afterwards to accrue due, until he shall have duly transmitted such logs, journals, returns, or other documents, or unless he shall have obtained a dispensing order for that purpose from the lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid for the time being."

Sect. 31. " Whenever any officer who is required to pass accounts to entitle him to the balance of his pay shall have cleared his accounts for the period during which he shall have been on full pay, to the satisfaction of the commissioners of the navy and victualling respectively, and in the manner in which accounts are required to be passed, he shall be entitled to a bill usually called a general certificate, specifying the net balance due to him, which shall be payable by the treasurer of the navy, and be negotiable like other bills."

Sect. 32. " It shall be lawful to and for every boatswain, gunner, carpenter, petty officer, (not entitled to draw bills for pay,) seaman, landman, (boys excepted,) and non-commissioned officer and private of marines, being part of the complement of a ship, or borne on the books as a supernumerary for wages and victuals, to make an allotment of a certain portion, not exceeding one moiety, of the monthly wages to which he may be entitled while such allotment shall continue in force, and which shall be calculated so as to avoid fractions of small sums in the payment thereof, and that such allotments shall and may be made in favour or for the maintenance of the following relatives only, (that is to say,) wife, father, mother, child or children being under the age of fourteen years, or labouring under any bodily infirmity ; which allotments shall be made according to the forms and in the manner heretofore used in the royal navy, or in such other form and manner as shall by the commissioners of the navy be deemed best adapted to answer the intentions of this act ; and that all the monies which shall hereafter be allotted shall, at the expiration of every calendar month, (the first payment to be reckoned from the first day of the month subsequent to the date of the declaration of allotment, and not to include the period between that date and the first of the ensuing month,) be paid to the parties entitled to receive the same ; but that no payment shall be made at any one time for a shorter period than a calendar month, and that whenever any increase or decrease shall take place in the rate of allotment by promotion, disrating, or otherwise, payment of the same shall commence from the ending of the last preceding payment." [See further the 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 25, s. 4, 5, 6, post, 432, 433.]

Sect. 33. " Whenever any person entitled to make an allotment shall declare his intention so to do, the captain shall cause such person to subscribe his name or mark to a declaration or to a list of declarations for that purpose, which the captain shall sign and cause to be signed by the signing officers of the ship, and then transmit to the commissioners of the navy, in order that they may take the necessary measures for causing allotment bills to be made out thereon, and payment to be made of the portion of wages so allotted ; and the captain shall also cause to be noted in the muster book, against the names of such persons, the date of the making of such allotments ; and in case any person having made an allotment shall desert, die, or be discharged sick, or otherwise, the captain shall notify the same to the commissioners of the navy without loss of time for their guidance ; and to the like end, every agent of a hospital or sick quarters to which any such person shall be sent shall make a periodical return of all such to the said commissioners in a form to be furnished to him for that purpose ; and if any such person shall die at or desert from such hospital or sick quarters, the date of his death or desertion shall also be returned ; and in case any captain or agent shall make default therein, he shall be liable to make good out of his pay any loss that shall accrue to the public thereby."

Sect. 43. "If any collector of the customs or excise, or clerk of the treasurer of the navy, or other person authorized to make naval payments, to whom any allotment bill or remittance bill to be made out under this act shall be addressed or presented for payment, shall not then have in his hands sufficient public monies to answer the same, or shall be unable, from any other sufficient cause, to make such payment, he shall forthwith deliver to the party presenting the same a note specifying such cause of his refusal or delay in making payment, dated on the day the demand shall be made, and shall appoint thereon some future day for payment, not later than twenty-eight days from the date of such demand; and if he shall unnecessarily and wilfully refuse or delay payment, or if he shall directly or indirectly accept any fee, reward, or gratuity, or make any deduction or discount whatsoever from any payment made under any allotment or remittance bill, he shall forfeit and pay a penalty of fifty pounds for every such offence."

Sect. 44. "Payment on allotment and remittance bills shall be made only to the party to whom the same shall be expressed to be payable, except in cases where such party shall by illness or bodily infirmity be disabled from appearing personally, in which cases, such disability being certified by the minister and churchwardens of the parish or place where the party shall reside, or by the physician, surgeon, or apothecary attending him or her, and there being no reason to doubt the authenticity or truth of such certificate, payment shall on that occasion be made, on the production of the allotment* or bill, to the order in writing of the party to whom it is made payable: provided always, that in case the officer of the revenue, or clerk to the treasurer of the navy, or other person whose duty it shall be to make payment on any allotment or remittance bill, shall entertain any doubt as to the identity of the party, the authenticity of the vouchers produced, or his or her title to receive payment, such officer, clerk, or other person shall inquire into the same by the oath of the party so applying, which oath such officer, clerk, or other person is hereby authorized to administer for that purpose."

Sect. 45. "In case payment shall not be demanded upon any allotment or remittance bill, during the space of six calendar months from the day of the receipt thereof, by the person by whom it is to be paid, or from the date of the last payment which shall have been made on any allotment, such person shall return the same to the commissioners of the navy; and whenever any such person shall have received notice from the said commissioners of the determination of any allotment, or of its becoming no longer payable, he shall in like manner return the same within two days after the receipt of any such notice, and no payment to be thereafter made shall be allowed to him: provided always, that when any bill made out under the provisions of this act shall for any cause whatever be returned to the commissioners of the navy by the person to whom the same shall have been addressed, before the expiration of the time prescribed by this act, it shall be lawful for the commissioners to cancel such bill, and also, on its being certified on one part of the original bill by the said commissioners or by the treasurer of the navy that reasonable cause had been assigned by the party to whom such bill was payable for so cancelling the same, to cause to be made out another similar bill in duplicate for the like sum of money, which shall be forwarded and paid in the same manner as is provided with respect to the original bill; and if such new bill shall not be paid within the like period as before specified, the same shall be returned and cancelled in like manner, and the sum of money therein mentioned shall then become payable to the party for whose wages or pay it was so made out, or, in case he shall be dead, to his executor or administrator."

Sect. 46. "It shall be lawful for commission and warrant officers entitled to naval half-pay, or to a pension in respect of service or wounds, and for widows of any such officers entitled to a pension as such widows, and for the executors and administrators of every such officer, to receive such half-pay or pension, or arrears thereof, by drawing a bill of exchange upon the commissioners of the navy in the manner hitherto used, provided they shall previously signify their intention so to do by application to the said commissioners; or if any such officers or widows shall be residing near any of his majesty's dock yards where there shall be any clerk of the said treasurer authorized to pay wages, and they shall signify to him, or to the proper clerk of the navy pay office in London, their desire to be paid by extract, such clerk shall take a note thereof, and shall at such periods as may be necessary make out and transmit to the commissioners of the navy lists of the names of such officers and widows, and the particulars of the half pay or pension claimed, with the usual affidavit in cases of half pay, and the usual certificate of life in the cases of pension (which vouchers shall be supplied to the clerk by the party making the application); and measures shall thereupon be taken at the navy office for forwarding to the proper clerk at the dock yard at which payment is desired to be made extracts from the half pay book or list of officers of the navy entitled to half pay, and from the book or list of pensions payable to commission and warrant officers in respect of services or wounds, and from the widows pension list or book (as is used in the cases of payment of wages upon extracts from the ship's books), in order that payment of such half pay and pension may be made accordingly; and in cases when the parties so entitled to receive any payment of half pay or pension shall not express their desire to receive payment by bill of exchange or extract or by remittance, such half pay and pension respectively shall be paid upon the said lists or books to be made out quarterly as has been heretofore used with respect to half pay, or in such other manner as the commissioners of the navy shall deem most convenient for the public service: provided always, that no person residing out of his majesty's dominions shall be entitled to the benefit of payment of half pay or pension either by bill of exchange, extract, or remittance." Sect. 47. "All assignments or sales and contracts made or to be made by any person entitled to any marine half pay, or by any person entitled to an allowance from the compassionate fund, or to any pension as the widow of an officer, of or in relation to such half pay, allowance, or pension respectively, and all assignments or sales and contracts of or relating to any wages, half pay, prize money, pension, gratuities, and other allowance payable in respect of the services of any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, shall be null and void to all intents and purposes."

Sect. 48. "And whereas it is expedient to establish regulations for the prevention of forgery and fraud, which have been heretofore much practised in relation to the pay of the royal navy; be it further enacted, that no will made by any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, before his entry into his majesty's service, shall be valid to pass any wages, prize money, or other monies payable in respect of services in his majesty's navy; and that no letter of attorney made by any such person who shall be or shall have been in the said service, or by the widow, next of kin, executors, or administrators of any such person, shall be valid or sufficient to entitle any person to receive any wages, prize money, or other allowance of money of any kind for the service of any such person in his majesty's navy, unless such letter of attorney shall be therein expressed to be revocable, and that no such letter of attorney shall be valid or sufficient to entitle any person to receive any such wages or other monies; nor shall any will made or to be made by any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, who shall be or shall have been in the naval service of his majesty, be valid or sufficient to pass any such wages, prize money, or other monies, unless such letter of attorney or will respectively shall contain the name of the ship to which the person executing the same belonged at the time or to which he last belonged, nor unless such letter of attorney, if made by an executor

Sect. 49. "Every letter of attorney or will which hath been or which hereafter shall be made by any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, while any such person hath been or shall be a prisoner of war, shall be valid to all intents and purposes, provided it shall have been executed in the presence of and be attested by some commission officer of the army, navy, or royal marines, or by some warrant officer of his majesty's navy, or by a physician, surgeon, or assistant surgeon in the army or navy, agent to some naval hospital, or chaplain of the army or navy, or by any notary public ; but so as not to invalidate or disturb any payment which hath been already made under any letter of administration, certificates, or otherwise, in consequence of the rejection of any such wills by the inspector of seamen's wills for want of the due attestation thereof according to the directions of any former act of parliament."

Exception as to
soners of war.

Sect. 50. "All officers commanding ships shall, upon their monthly muster books or returns, distinguish which of the persons therein named have made any letter of attorney or will during that month, or other space of time from the preceding return, by inserting the date of such letter of attorney or will opposite the party's name, under the heads of 'letter of attorney' or 'will,' or both, as the case may require ; and shall likewise transmit to the treasurer of the navy, at the time such returns are transmitted to the navy office, a list to the same effect of all such persons."

Wills, &c. to be
muster book.

Sect. 51. "Before any letter of attorney or will shall be attempted to be acted upon or put in force, the same shall be sent to the treasurer of the navy, at the navy pay office, London, in order that it may be examined by the inspector of seamen's will and letters of attorney, who, or his assistant, shall, on receipt thereof, duly register the same in a numerical and alphabetical manner in separate books to be kept for that purpose, specifying the date, the place where executed, the name and description of the party making the same, the names and additions of the persons described therein either as attornies or executors, and also of the witnesses attesting the same, and shall mark the same with the corresponding numbers in the ship's books ; and the said inspector shall take due means to ascertain the authenticity of every such letter of attorney and will, and in case he shall have reason to suspect its authenticity, he shall give notice in writing to the attorney or executor, as the case may be, that the same is stopped, and the reason thereof, and shall also report the same to the treasurer of the navy, and shall enter his caveat against such letter of attorney or will, which shall prevent any money from being received thereon until the same shall be authenticated to the satisfaction of the said treasurer ; but if there shall be no reason upon such examination to doubt its authenticity, the said inspector or his assistant shall sign his name thereto, and also put a stamp thereon in token of his approbation thereof, and, as to such letters of attorney, forthwith send to the person therein named as attorney a check specifying the number of such letter of attorney, the name and description of the person granting the same, the name and addition of the person in whose favour the same is granted, the date and place when and where executed, and the names of the witnesses attesting the same, which check shall be a sufficient authority for the attorney to demand and receive payment of and to give acquittances for all such wages, pay, or other allowances of money to which the person granting the same was entitled for his service on board any of his majesty's ships."

Sect. 52. "No letter of attorney of any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, which shall not have been made or executed on board the ship to which the party shall have belonged, in the manner required by this act, shall be passed, stamped, or allowed by the said inspector until a certificate shall have been produced to him, under the hand of the captain, specifying the period of the party's service on board under the command of such captain, and a description of his height, complexion, and age, unless reasonable cause shall be shown to and allowed by the said treasurer or inspector for dispensing with such certificate."

Sect. 53. "The treasurer of the navy shall not be bound to pay regard to any power of attorney, or check of any power, under which any wages may be claimed as due to any officers, seamen, or marines, unless such power or check of power, as the case may be, shall be actually produced at the time payment is claimed, and, in the case of an officer's pay, unless the power or a copy of the power be left with the proper officer of the said treasurer, accompanied with the usual certificates and papers; and in cases of the wages of a seaman or marine being claimed by any master under any indenture of apprenticeship, every such master shall, before he shall be entitled to receive the same, adduce satisfactory proof to the officer of the said treasurer that the indenture to be produced by him was in full force during the period for which such wages are claimed, and that the apprentice was, at the time of the execution of the indenture, under the age of eighteen years, and had not previously used the sea; but in case the indenture shall not be produced at the pay table when the wages shall be demanded, and such proof as aforesaid shall not be given, such wages shall be paid to the apprentice, and not to the master."

Sect. 54. "All wages, pay, and other allowances payable for the service of any commission or warrant officer of his majesty's navy, shall be paid to the officer himself, if present, at the pay table, or to his lawful attorney, upon the production of the usual certificates; but if he shall have assigned or sold his pay, the same shall be paid to the assignee, being duly authorized to receive the same; and if there shall be more assignments than one, they shall be satisfied according to priority of date; but the treasurer of the navy shall not pay regard to any assignment which shall not be presented at the pay table, accompanied by the usual certificates and papers, at the time the wages or pay are appointed to be paid, and unless a true copy of such assignment be left at the same time with the said treasurer, nor shall he be liable to pay under any assignment conveying generally any annual or other periodical wages or allowance to grow due, but only under such assignments of wages, pay, or other allowances due, as shall be made to secure payment of any sum advanced by the assignee, which shall be truly set forth in such assignment, and for the amount of which, and no more, the wages, pay, and other allowances payable to the officer shall be liable."

Sect. 55. "When any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, who shall have belonged to any ship of his majesty, shall have died, leaving a will, no wages, prize money, or other allowance of money shall be paid over to or recovered by his executor or executors except upon the probate of the will, to be obtained in the following manner: videlicet, after such will shall have been so transmitted, registered, and approved as herein-before directed, the inspector shall cause to be issued to the person named therein as executor a cheque in lieu thereof, containing directions to return the same, with his or her signature thereto, upon the testator's death, to the treasurer of his majesty's navy, which cheque shall be in the form heretofore used in such cases, or in such other form as the treasurer of the navy shall deem most expedient and conducive to the purposes of this act, and shall have the requisite certificates in blank subscribed thereto, to be filled up as herein-after mentioned; and in the event of the testator's death, the minister or curate of the parish in which the party named as executor shall then reside shall, upon the application of the executor, examine him, and such two inhabitant householders of the parish as may be disposed to certify their personal knowledge of the holder of the cheque, touching his claim, and that they are satisfied of his being the person therein described as executor; and the said executor shall subscribe his name to the application, and the two householders their names to the certificate for that purpose subjoined to the cheque (the blanks therein being first filled up agreeable to truth), in the presence of the minister or curate, for which respective purposes the said executor and householders shall attend at such time and place as shall be appointed by the minister or curate, who being, upon examination of the several parties, satisfied with their answers, and that the person holding the cheque is the executor therein named, and that the two persons certifying as before required are inhabitant householders of the parish, and having seen the said parties sign the application and certificate respectively (which he is hereby required to do), shall add thereto a description of the height, complexion, colour of eyes and hair, age, and any particular marks about the person of the party claiming as executor, and, after the several blanks shall have been filled up agreeable to truth, shall certify to the several particulars by subscribing his signature thereto; and the said executor shall, before signing the application, pay to the said minister or curate a fee of two shillings and sixpence for his trouble on the occasion; and the said application and certificates being in all things completed according to the directions therein and hereby given, the same shall be transmitted by the said minister or curate by the general post, addressed to the treasurer of the navy, London; and the said original will having been passed in the manner directed by this act, the inspector shall note thereon the amount of the wages due to the deceased, as calculated on the search to be obtained from the navy office, and shall then forward such will to a proctor, in order to his obtaining probate thereof; and in case the executor shall not reside within the bills of mortality, the inspector shall also forward to such proctor a letter addressed to the minister, in the usual or other requisite form, for the purpose of its being transmitted to him with the commission for administering the necessary oath to the party as executor; and such proctor, having received the will and the said letter of the inspector, (in case such letter shall be necessary,) shall immediately sue out the previous commission or requisition, or take such other steps as may be necessary towards enabling the executor to obtain probate, and shall inclose in the said letter a copy of the will and the commission or requisition, with instructions for executing the same, and forward the same to the minister by the general post, agreeably to the address put thereon by the inspector." [See the 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 25, s. 8, post, 437.]

Sect. 56. "When any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, shall die intestate, leaving any wages, prize money, or other allowances of money of any kind due to him in respect of services in his majesty's navy, the same shall not be paid to his representatives, except upon letters of administration to be obtained in the following manner; videlicet, the person claiming administration shall send a letter to the inspector, stating his place of abode, the parish in which the same is situate, his degree of relationship to the deceased, the names of the deceased and of the ship or ships to which he belonged, that he has been informed of the intestate's death, and requesting the inspector to give such directions as may enable him to procure letters of administration to the deceased's effects, or to the like effect, upon receipt whereof the inspector shall send by post, under cover, to the minister of the parish wherein the claimant shall reside, a petition in the form heretofore in such cases used, or in such other form as the treasurer of the navy shall deem most expedient and conducive to the purposes of this act, together with the requisite certificates in blank, to be filled up as hereafter mentioned, and a letter pointing out the steps to be taken thereon as hereinafter in that behalf contained, and shall also send to the claimant a letter advising him of the forwarding of the said petition or paper as aforesaid, and pointing out the measures to be taken by him for substantiating his claim; and upon receipt of the said petition the minister, officiating minister, or curate shall, on the application of the claimant, examine him, and also such two inhabitant householders of the parish as may be disposed to certify their personal knowledge of him, and their belief of his right to administer to the effects of the intestate, according to the degree of relationship set forth at the head of the petition; and the minister or curate being, upon due examination of the claimant and the said two householders, satisfied of the truth of their answers, and having seen the claimant sign the application, and the two householders sign the certificate, (which the minister is required to do,) shall add thereto a description of the height, complexion, colour of eyes and hair, age, and any particular marks about the person of the claimant, and after the blanks in the said petition, certificates, and description for those several purposes shall have been filled up agreeable to truth, shall certify to the several particulars by subscribing his signature thereto, for which respective purposes the said claimant and the householders shall attend at such time and place as the minister or curate shall appoint; and the claimant shall, before signing the petition, pay to the minister or curate a fee of two shillings and sixpence for his trouble on the occasion; and the said paper being in all things completed according to the directions therein and hereby given, the minister shall return the same by the general post addressed to the treasurer of the navy, London; and upon the receipt thereof at the navy pay office, the inspector shall examine the same, and, being satisfied of the claim, he shall transmit to a proctor a certificate thereof (in the form heretofore used, or in such other form as the treasurer of the navy shall deem expedient); and in case the claimant shall not reside within the bills of mortality, the inspector shall at the same time inclose and send to the said proctor a letter addressed to the minister and churchwardens or elders, (as the case may be,) of the parish within which the claimant then shall reside, signifying the transmission of a commission (which the proctor is to obtain) for swearing the claimant as administrator, with the necessary instructions for executing the same; and the proctor shall, upon receipt thereof, take the requisite steps towards enabling the claimant to obtain letters of administration, and shall, in the inspector's letter to the minister, inclose the commission or other necessary instrument, with instructions for executing the same, and shall forward such letter and inclosures by the general post, agreeably to the address put thereon by the said inspector."

Minister or curate to state his reasons.

Sect. 57. "In case the minister or curate shall reject any petition for want of satisfactory proof of the claim, he shall state his reasons for such rejection on the said petition, and forthwith return the same to the treasurer of the navy as aforesaid; and in case no application shall be made to the minister or curate by the claimant, or no effectual steps shall be taken by him to complete the petition and the certificates within the space of two calendar months from the date of the inspector's letter accompanying such petition, the minister or curate shall, at the expiration of that time, return the petition to the treasurer of the navy as aforesaid, with his reason for doing so noted thereon."

Minister to pro-

Sect. 58. "Every minister to whom any such letter, with a commission or requisition for swearing any executor or administrator, shall be transmitted, shall, immediately upon the receipt thereof, take the necessary steps for procuring the execution of the same, and shall transmit the same, when executed, directed to the treasurer of his majesty's navy, London; and if the executor or administrator shall reside at a distance from the place where the wages or other allowances of money are payable, he shall specify the name and residence of the nearest or most convenient collector of customs or of excise; and upon receipt of the said commission at the navy pay office, the same shall be forwarded to the proctor, who, in pursuance thereof, shall forthwith procure the requisite probate or letters of administration, and when obtained transmit the same to the inspector at the navy pay office."

Sect. 59. "When any probate or letters of administration shall have been so obtained, the proctor employed therein shall immediately send the same to the treasurer of the navy, with a copy of the will (in the case of probate), and an account of his charges for the same; and upon receipt thereof the inspector shall issue a check, containing the heads of such probate or letters of administration, and shall note thereon the amount of the proctor's charges and the address of the claimant, which check shall be in the form heretofore used in the navy pay office, or in such other form as the treasurer of the navy shall deem most expedient for the purpose; and so soon as the wages and prize money due to the deceased shall have been calculated in the proper departments, the amount shall be noted on the check, and, after abating the proctor's charges, the balance shall be paid to the party personally, or by means of a remittance bill, in the manner and under similar regulations as are hereinbefore provided with respect to other remittances of wages, and the check shall then be delivered to the party to stand instead of probate or letters of administration, to enable him to receive whatever other sums may become payable to the deceased's estate."

Check to be issued by inspector.

Sect. 60. "If any proctor, registrar, or other officer of any ecclesiastical court shall deliver or cause to be delivered any letters of administration, probate of will, or letters of administration with will annexed, to any other person than the treasurer of the navy or the said inspector, in the manner directed by this act, such proctor or other officer so offending shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of one hundred pounds; and if any agent or agents for prizes shall pay any prize money due to a petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, under any authority whatever, other than the inspector's check directed by this act, such payment shall be null and void, and the agent or agents so paying the same shall forfeit for every and each such offence a sum equal to the amount of the prize money paid."

No proctor to deliver out probate or letters of administration to any other than the treasurer.

Sect. 61. "No registrar, proctor, or other officer of any ecclesiastical court shall, under any pretence, take or receive any more for the stamp, seal, parchment, writing, fees, and trouble attending the suing forth the probate of any will or any letters of administration to the effects of any warrant or petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, whereby any person may be enabled to obtain any wages, prize money, or other allowance of money of any kind in respect of services in the navy, than the several sums specified in the schedule hereunto annexed [by the 2 Wil. IV. c. 40, another schedule of fees is substituted, see post, 425]: provided nevertheless, that if any increase or diminution shall take place in the stamp duties payable on any instrument connected therewith, then the charges shall be increased or diminished to the extent of the change in such duties, but no further: provided always, that in cases of extraordinary trouble or expense, the proctor shall be allowed to make additional charges in proportion thereto, and if the same shall appear reasonable to the inspector he may allow the same, but otherwise the same shall be submitted to the treasurer of the navy, and if he shall disapprove thereof, the same shall be taxed by the proper officer of the court, without fee or reward, unless the charges shall have arisen in consequence of any litigation or suit, in which case a fee of three shillings shall be allowed to the officer for taxation."

Limiting the expense of probate.

Sect. 62. "If any officer, proctor, or other person shall take more than the several sums allowed in the said schedule, [by the 2 Wil. IV. c. 40, another schedule of fees is substituted, see post, 425] every person so offending shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds, with full costs of suit; or if any registrar, proctor, or other officer of any ecclesiastical court shall knowingly or willingly be aiding or assisting in procuring probate of any will or letters of administration, whereby any person may be enabled to claim any wages, pay, prize money, or allowance of money of any kind for the services of any such petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, otherwise than in the manner prescribed by this act, every such registrar, proctor, or other officer shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of five hundred pounds, and shall moreover forfeit his office and be rendered incapable of acting in any capacity in any court of admiralty or ecclesiastical jurisdiction."

Sect. 63. "When the executor or administrator of a deceased petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, shall die before he shall have received the wages, prize money, or other allowances payable to his testator or intestate, it shall be lawful for the inspector to investigate the right of any person claiming payment of the same or to represent according to law the person of such deceased petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, and, being satisfied of such right, to certify the name and place of abode of such person upon the check or certificate, and that in his judgment the claimant is the rightful representative of such deceased petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, and entitled to receive whatever may remain due in respect of his services as aforesaid; and thereupon if the wages, prize money, and other allowances remaining unpaid shall appear to the inspector not to amount nor likely to amount to more than the sum of twenty pounds, then it shall be lawful for the said treasurer, and also for any agent or agents for prizes respectively, to pay to such person all wages, pay, prize money, bounty money, and other allowances of money so due or to become payable, without requiring him to take out fresh letters of administration; but if the same shall amount or appear to the said inspector to be likely to amount to more than that sum, then the same shall only be paid upon fresh letters of administration, to be obtained in the manner hereinbefore directed."

Sect. 64. "And for preventing frauds, which have been frequently practised by persons falsely pretending to be creditors of deceased seamen and marines, be it further enacted, that no letters of administration shall be granted to any person claiming as a creditor of any deceased petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, but that every such creditor shall be entitled to receive the amount of his claim (if just) out of the assets of the deceased, or so far as the same will extend for that purpose, when the just amount of the debt or claim shall have been ascertained and approved as hereinafter provided; (that is to say,) every person claiming as a creditor shall deliver to the said inspector an account in writing, subscribed with his name, stating the particulars of the demand and the place of his abode, and verified by his oath, or, being a quaker, by his affirmation in writing taken before any justice of the peace, which oath or affirmation any such justice is hereby empowered to administer; and if any application for a certificate to obtain probate of the will or letters of administration to the effects of the deceased shall be made, the inspector shall give notice to the applicant of the name and place of abode of the creditor, and the amount of the debt, and shall also cause notice to be given to the creditor of the place of abode of such applicant; but if no such application shall have been made at the time of the delivery of the claim, the inspector or other person authorized by the said treasurer shall proceed to investigate the account of such creditor, for which purpose he is hereby empowered and directed to require from such creditor a production before him of all books, accounts, vouchers, and papers relating to his demand, and satisfactory evidence thereof; and if such creditor shall, by due proof, satisfy the said inspector or other authorized person of the justice of the demand in part or in the whole, then the same shall be allowed as shall appear just; but if all books, accounts, vouchers, and papers shall not be produced, or a sufficient reason assigned for not producing the same, or if the said inspector or other authorized person shall not be satisfied of the justice of the demand, then he shall disallow the same: provided always, that in case such creditor shall be dissatisfied, he shall be at liberty to appeal against such decision to the said treasurer, who shall thereupon inquire into the same by the examination of the parties and their witnesses upon oath or affirmation taken or made before the said treasurer or any justice of the peace, (which oath or affirmation the said treasurer and any justice as aforesaid are hereby severally authorized to administer,) and to allow or disallow the claim, in part or in the whole, as to the said treasurer shall seem fit, and the decision of the said treasurer shall be final and conclusive in the premises: provided always, that no claim of any creditor shall be admitted or allowed unless the same be made within two years next after the death of the party upon whose assets the claim is made, nor unless the same shall appear to have accrued within three years next before the death of such party."

Sect. 65. "If within the space of twelve calendar months from the delivery of the claim no application shall have been made by any person in the character either of executor or administrator, the creditor shall be entitled to receive so much as shall have been allowed to be due to him as aforesaid out of the monies payable in respect of the services of the deceased, so far as they will extend to satisfy the same, and thereupon the inspector shall grant to the creditor a certificate of the allowance of such claim in the form heretofore used, or in such other form as shall by the said treasurer be deemed expedient, and so much of such wages as shall be sufficient to satisfy the claim so allowed shall be paid or remitted to the creditor in the manner herein provided for the remittance of wages to executors or administrators: provided always, that if any prize money or bounty money shall be due to the deceased, the same shall be payable to such creditor only in the manner hereinafter directed; (that is to say,) if the wages and other allowances of money shall not be sufficient to discharge the claim, the proper officer in the navy pay office shall state at the foot of the certificate the amount paid to the creditor, and it shall not be lawful for the creditor to demand or receive from any person any prize money or bounty money due to the deceased except as hereinafter next mentioned; (that is to say,) such prize and bounty money, if the same shall be in the hands of an agent, shall be paid over as in cases of unclaimed prize money, and the creditor, on the production of such certificate to the officer appointed to pay the prize money, shall be entitled to receive from him so much of the deceased's prize money or other allowances as shall be sufficient to discharge his demand, and upon the same being satisfied, the inspector shall retain the certificate as a voucher or document of office: provided also, that if there shall be more creditors than one, they shall be satisfied according to the priority of the allowance of their respective claims, but so as not to deprive any creditor of any priority he may by law be entitled to by reason of any specialty, provided notice in writing of the particulars of such specialty shall have been given to the treasurer of the navy in due time."

Sect. 66. "And whereas by an act of the fifty-fourth year of the reign of his late majesty, for regulating the payment of navy prize money, agents for prizes are prohibited from paying any prize money or bounty money to any person upon any order made within the distance of five miles of the place where the same shall be payable, (such prize money or bounty money being in course of distribution at the time of making such order,) under the penalty therein mentioned; be it further enacted, that if any agent licensed by the treasurer of his majesty's navy, or if any other person, shall insert or cause to be inserted in any order for payment of prize money or bounty money payable in respect of the services of any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, in his majesty's navy, the name of any captured ship, vessel, fortress, or place, the proceeds of which or the bounty money payable in respect whereof shall be then in course of distribution within six miles of the place where such name or names shall be inserted, and where such order shall be intended to be attested under the provisions of the said last-mentioned act, or shall utter any such order with the name or names of any such captured ship, vessel, fortress, or place

Captains to deliver certificates to discharged seamen.

Sect. 67. "When any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, shall be discharged for any cause from any ship of his majesty, the captain shall cause to be made out and sign a certificate describing the period of such discharged person's service on board the ship, his number on the ship's books, and his stature, complexion, and age, which shall be delivered to the party at the time of his discharge; and no petty officer, seaman, non-commissioned officer, or marine shall be entitled to receive his wages, prize money, or other allowances, unless he shall produce such certificate at the time the same are claimed, or unless he shall be identified by one or more of the commission or warrant officers who belonged to the vessel during some part of the period for which he may so claim; and no petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, who shall be discharged from any ship of his majesty into any other such ship, shall be entitled to receive any wages or allowances for the ship to which he shall have last belonged unless he shall enter and be mustered three times in the ship into which he shall be so discharged, or shall appear upon the books of the ship into which he shall next go to have been regularly discharged therefrom; or in case of his having been taken by the enemy, or if the ship in which he shall have last served shall have been lost or destroyed, and he shall have survived, unless he shall return so soon as it shall be in his power to do so, and enter again within a reasonable time on board some ship of his majesty; or in case he shall be discharged from his ship to any naval hospital or sick quarters, unless he shall return to his ship when discharged from such hospital or sick quarters, or be discharged out of the service; or unless in any of the said events reasonable cause be shown to and allowed by the commissioner of the navy comptrolling such payment, and the clerk of the treasurer of the navy making the same, for not producing such certificate, or for non-compliance with any thing herein directed."

Payment of orders under 10*l.* executed by seamen.

Sect. 68. "When any wages not exceeding ten pounds shall be payable by the rules of the navy to any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, it shall be lawful for him to make an order in writing for payment of the same upon the treasurer of the navy, which order nevertheless shall be revocable as in the case of powers of attorney, and the same shall be attested by the captain or any other of the signing officers, or a lieutenant of the ship on board of which such wages were earned, accompanied with a certificate, from one of the signing officers or lieutenants, of the particulars of the service of the drawer of such order; and the said order and certificate shall be examined by the inspector of seamen's wills, and if he sees no cause to suspect the authenticity thereof he shall stamp and pass the same for payment, but otherwise he shall report the same to the treasurer of the navy, and shall enter his caveat, which shall prevent any money from being received thereon until the same shall be authenticated to the satisfaction of the said treasurer; and if the party making such order shall have been discharged from his majesty's service, the order shall be attested in the like manner as is hereinbefore directed with respect to the attestation of letters of attorney, and shall be accompanied by the like certificates of service, and be subject to the like examination and caveat, as is above directed with regard to orders made by persons in his majesty's service: provided always, that the privilege hereby given shall not extend to any person who shall have been discharged from his majesty's service for any other cause than being unserviceable, but every such last mentioned person shall, according to the rules of the navy, wait until the ship from whence he shall have been discharged shall come in course of payment."

Sums not exceed-

Sect. 69. "And in order to avoid the expense which the relatives of deceased officers, seamen, and marines may be otherwise obliged to incur to obtain payment of small sums due for the services of such deceased persons, be it enacted, that in all cases when any monies not exceeding twenty pounds shall be due on account of any wages, prize money, or other allowances payable on account of the services of any deceased petty officer, seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, it shall be lawful for the inspector of seamen's wills, after having by the requisite previous steps, as before directed, ascertained the right of any claimant to probate of the will or to administration of the effects of the deceased, to issue a check or certificate to that effect, in such form as by the treasurer of the navy shall be deemed expedient; and to the same end, in all cases when any monies not exceeding in the whole the sum of thirty-two pounds shall be payable on account of any pay or half pay or pension of any deceased officer of the navy or royal marines, or of any pension to any deceased widow of an officer, or on account of any allowance from the compassionate fund to any deceased person, it shall be lawful for the said treasurer of the navy or for the paymaster of royal marines, as the case may be, after having ascertained in a satisfactory manner the right of any claimant to probate of the will or to letters of administration of the effects of the deceased, and that the deceased has not left any other assets to be administered than the arrears of pay, half pay, pension, or allowance, not exceeding thirty-two pounds as aforesaid, to issue a certificate to that effect, in such form as shall be deemed expedient; and upon such check or certificate of the inspector, and upon such certificate of the treasurer of the navy and paymaster of royal marines respectively, payment of the monies so due, not exceeding the respective sums of twenty pounds and thirty-two pounds as aforesaid, shall be made to the parties named in such checks and certificates respectively, either personally, or, if they shall desire it, by remittance bill in the manner by this act provided with respect to payments by remittance; and all payments made under such checks and certificates, not exceeding the respective sums aforesaid, shall be as effectual and legal as if the same had been made under any probate of a will or letters of administration duly granted by the proper court, and shall be allowed to the said treasurer and paymaster of royal marines, in their respective accounts."

Sect. 70. "And whereas many cases occur of officers of the royal navy and royal marines, and of seamen and marines, entitled to pay, half pay, pension, or prize money, becoming insane or lunatic, in which it is not deemed by their relatives expedient, by reason of the expense and of there being no other monies or estate to administer, to take measures according to law for obtaining a commission of lunacy; and it is expedient that the monies accruing due to them should be advanced for their support; be it therefore enacted, that in any of such cases, when it shall be made appear to the treasurer of the navy or to the paymaster of royal marines, as the case may be, by satisfactory evidence, that any officer, seaman, or marine is insane, lunatic, or otherwise, from his state of mind, incompetent to the management of his affairs, it shall be lawful for the said treasurer or paymaster to pay over to the wife, relative, or other person having the care and maintenance of such incompetent person, such monies as shall become payable, or such portion thereof as the lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid shall think fit, to be applied towards the maintenance and support of such incompetent person; and every payment so made shall be deemed good and valid, and be allowed to the said treasurer and paymaster respectively in their accounts."

Sect. 71. "All pensions to which the widows of officers of the royal navy are or may be entitled under any commission, warrant, or order of his majesty, shall be paid in the same manner as other pensions for services in the royal navy are payable; and that it shall be lawful for the lord high admiral, or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral, or any two or more of them, for the time being, to make such orders, rules, and regulations, and from time to time to alter the same, in relation to the payment of half pay to the officers of royal marines, and of the allowances

Sect. 72. "In all cases in which any wages, pay, half pay, prize money, bounty money, pension, gratuity, or allowance of any kind payable in respect or in consideration of the services of any officer, seaman, or marine in the royal navy, shall not be claimed or demanded by or on the behalf of the person to whom the same was so payable, or, in case of his or her death, by any person legally entitled thereto, within six years next after the period at which the same respectively first became due and payable, or the services in respect of which the same may be payable were performed, the same shall and are hereby declared to be forfeited: provided always, that it shall be lawful for the lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral for the time being, upon sufficient cause being shown for any delay or neglect which may have occurred in making any such claim, to exercise a discretion thereupon, and to authorize the payment of the same, notwithstanding any such forfeiture thereof."

Sect. 73. "All letters and packets addressed to or sent by the treasurer or the paymaster of the navy for the time being shall be sent and received free from the duty of postage, in the same manner and under the same restrictions as the paymaster general of his majesty's forces is by law authorized to send and receive letters and packets free of postage: provided always, that so far as relates to the paymaster of the navy, the provision herein contained shall not continue in force beyond the thirty-first day of December, one thousand eight hundred and thirty."

Sect. 74. "All letters and packets addressed to and sent by the inspector of seamen's wills and letters of attorney for the time being, upon any business or affairs of or relating to the said office of inspector, and all letters and packets in relation to officers and seamen's wages sent, in the execution of this act, by the cashier or other officer in the navy pay office appointed for paying seamen's tickets, and all letters and packets in relation to remittances, half pay, pension, bounty, and allowances from the compassionate fund, sent, in the execution of this act, by the officer or clerk to be nominated by the treasurer of the navy for that purpose, and all letters and packets in relation to widows' pensions sent, in the execution of this act, by the officer or clerk to be nominated by the treasurer of the navy for that purpose, shall be free from the duty of postage; and all such letters and packets which shall be forwarded by the said inspector, cashier, officers, and clerks respectively shall be under cover, with the words, 'pursuant to act of parliament of 11th George 4th,' printed on the same; and the said inspector, cashier, officers, and clerks respectively sending the same shall sign their respective names under such words; and if any such inspector, cashier, officer, or clerk, or any other person, shall send or cause to be sent, under any such cover, any letter, paper, or writing, or any inclosure, other than what shall relate to the public business of the several departments of the navy pay office and navy office, every such person so offending shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds."

Sect. 75. "All letters and packets addressed to the commissioners of the navy or to the commissioners for victualling his majesty's navy, relating solely to the business of their respective departments, shall be free from the duty of postage, and that it shall be lawful for the said commissioners of the navy and victualling respectively to authorize and direct certain persons in each of their offices or departments respectively (not exceeding the number of three in time of peace, and six in time of war, in the navy office, and the number of two in time of peace, and four in time of war, in the victualling office, a list of whose names shall be from time to time transmitted by the respective commissioners aforesaid to the secretary of the general post office in London,) to send letters and packets, relating to the business only of their respective departments, free of postage, all which letters and packets shall be under cover, with the words, 'on his majesty's service,' and 'navy office,' or 'victualling office,' as the case may be, printed on the same; and the said persons so to be authorized as aforesaid shall sign and subscribe their respective names under such words; and all such letters and packets shall be sealed with the seal of the navy and victualling offices respectively; and all the said persons are hereby strictly forbidden so to subscribe and seal any letter or packet, except such only as they shall know to relate solely to the business of their respective offices: and if any such authorized person or any other person shall send, or cause or permit to be sent, under any such cover, any letter, paper, or writing, or any inclosure, other than what shall relate to the public business of their respective departments, every person so offending shall for the first offence forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds, and for the second offence shall be dismissed from his office."

Sect. 76. "If any letter, paper, or thing whatsoever shall be sent under cover to the commissioners of the navy or to the commissioners for victualling his majesty's navy, the same not being actually upon his majesty's service, and relating solely to the business of their respective offices, the said commissioners respectively are hereby required forthwith to forward the same to the postmaster general, with the covers, in order that the contents thereof may be charged with the duty of postage."

As to letters sent to the commissioners not relating solely to the business of their office.

Sect. 77. "All bills, tickets, certificates, pay lists, orders, and other documents upon which any payment is authorized by this act to be made by the treasurer of the navy, shall be allowed and taken, on the passing of his accounts, as good and sufficient vouchers to him for so much money as shall be therein directed to be paid, and shall have been paid by him thereon."

Tickets, &c. to be good vouchers to the treasurer.

Sect. 78. "All bills to be drawn by the commissioners of the navy or the commissioners for victualling his majesty's navy, or any of them, relating to the public service, or in the execution of this act; all bills to be drawn by any commission, warrant, or petty officer of the navy, or any officer of royal marines, or other person, under the authority of this act, and payable by the treasurer of the navy or by the paymaster of royal marines; all orders, tickets, cheques, certificates, vouchers, and other documents made out in pursuance of this act; all receipts for money paid to the treasurer of the navy on account of the public service; and all receipts for wages, allowances of every kind, pensions, bounty, and half pay or prize money, or in respect of payments made by the treasurer of the navy or by the paymaster of royal marines, or by any collector of customs and excise, in the execution of the provisions of this act or under the authority of the same; shall be and are hereby wholly exempted from all stamp duty whatever."

Exemption from stamps.

Sect. 79. "No agent or other person who shall be employed in the receipt of any wages, pay, prize money, pension, or allowances payable in respect of the services of any officer, seaman, marine, or other person in the royal navy, shall be entitled to take or retain more than sixpence in the pound for receiving and paying over any such wages, prize money, pension, or other allowances, and for all his attendance and trouble in relation thereto, over and above the disbursements in respect of postage and public fees and other charges which such agent shall have necessarily paid: provided always, that in the cases only of the accounts of captains and pursers, and officers acting as captains and pursers, it shall be lawful for such agents to charge in manner following; (that is to say,) the sum of three pounds for every one hundred pounds of the amount of the pay of all captains, and officers acting as captains, and so in proportion for a smaller sum; and the sum of three pounds fifteen shillings for every one hundred pounds of the amount of the pay, allowances, and balance bills of all pursers, or officers acting as pursers, and so in proportion for a smaller sum; which respective allowances shall be deemed a full compensation to such agents, over and above all postages and public fees and allowances which shall have been necessarily disbursed by them; and if any such agent or other person shall directly or indirectly charge, demand, receive, or retain, or permit or suffer to be charged, demanded, received, or retained, any allowance or consideration exceeding the allowance hereby authorized, he shall for every such offence forfeit the sum of fifty pounds." [See this enactment explained and amended by the 2 Wil. IV. c. 40, s. 17, post, 426.]

Sect. 80. "And to prevent any unjust or fraudulent arrests of seamen or marines, as well as to prevent credit being improperly given to them while belonging to any ships of his majesty; be it further enacted, that it shall not be lawful for any person to arrest or take out of his majesty's service any petty officer, seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines, or private marine, belonging to any ship of his majesty, by any warrant, process, or writ of execution whatever, to be issued either in the United Kingdom or in any other part of his majesty's dominions, for any debt or alleged debt, unless such debt shall have been contracted by such officer, seaman, or marine at a time when he did not belong to his majesty's service, and unless before the issuing of such process or execution the plaintiff in the suit, or some person on his behalf, shall make affidavit in the court out of which such process or execution shall issue, that the debt justly due and owing to the plaintiff, over and above all costs, was contracted by the defendant at a time when he did not belong to the service of his majesty, a memorandum of which oath shall be marked on the back of such process or execution, and of the warrant issued in pursuance thereof; and if any person be nevertheless arrested contrary hereto, it shall be lawful for the court or any judge of such court, upon complaint made thereof by the party himself or by his superior officer, to examine into the same by the oath of the parties or otherwise, and to make an order for the discharge of every such person so arrested contrary to the intent of this act, and he shall thereupon be discharged out of custody without payment of any fee whatever; and such court or judge shall also award to the party so complaining the costs of such complaint, to be taxed by the proper officer, for the recovery whereof he shall have the like remedy that the plaintiff might have had for his costs in case judgment had been given for him, with costs, against the defendant in the said action."

Sect. 81. "All the clauses, provisions, and regulations herein contained shall, so far as the same can be applied, extend to the non-commissioned officers, drummers, and privates of royal marines, in respect of their services on board any of his majesty's ships."

Provision for
abroad in distress.

Sect. 82. "And whereas by the said act of the thirty-first year of king George the Second, and the said first-mentioned act of the thirty-second year of king George the Third, hereby repealed, certain provisions were established for the care and maintenance of British seamen who, by shipwreck, capture, or otherwise, might be left in distress in foreign parts; and it is expedient that other provisions should be substituted for the due care and subsistence of seafaring persons thus circumstanced; be it therefore enacted, that the governors, ministers, consuls, and other officers of his majesty in foreign parts, and in places where there shall be no such, then any two British merchants there residing, shall and they are hereby authorized, directed, and required to send for and provide for all such seafaring men and boys, being subjects of the United Kingdom, who shall by shipwreck, or by any other means, or from any cause whatever, be driven to or cast away or left or be in distress at any such foreign parts or places, or who shall have been discharged from any of his majesty's ships, and they and every of them are hereby required to provide for and subsist all such seafaring men and boys, and for so doing they shall be allowed so much per day as hath been or shall be in this respect authorized by the lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid, for the amount of which disbursements they shall send bills, together with proper vouchers, to the commissioners of the navy, in order that, after due examination of such vouchers, payment of the amount thereof may be made to them; and the said governors, ministers, consuls, other officers, and merchants shall cause such men and boys to be put or sent on board the first or any ship or vessel belonging to any subjects of his majesty which shall be bound from thence or from the neighbourhood to any part of the United Kingdom, and shall be in want of men to make up their complement; and if there shall be no such ship in want of men within a convenient time, then they shall provide and order a passage home for such seafaring men and boys in the first ship or vessel of his majesty's subjects bound to any part of the said United Kingdom; and every master or other person having the charge of any such ship or vessel shall and he is hereby required to receive and afford a passage, and subsistence during the voyage, to all such seafaring men and boys as shall be so sent on board his ship, not exceeding four for every one hundred tons of his ship's burthen; and every such master, on the production to the commissioners of the navy of a certificate under the hands of any such governors, ministers, consuls, other officers, or merchants, specifying the number and names of the men and boys and the time when they were so received on board, and upon making oath as to the number of days they were subsisted, and that he did not during that period want of his own complement of men, or if he did want any, then the number he so wanted of his complement, and for what time he shall be entitled to receive from the said commissioners an allowance in respect of the subsistence and passage of each such man and boy (exceeding the number so wanting of his complement), according to such rate per day as in that behalf hath been or shall be authorized by the said lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid; and in case any master or other person having charge of any such ship shall neglect or refuse to receive on board his ship, and to subsist and give a passage to, any such seafaring man or boy, in breach of this enactment, every person so offending shall be liable to a penalty of one hundred pounds for each man or boy he shall so neglect or refuse to receive, subsist, or give a passage to, which penalty shall and may be recovered by information at the suit of his majesty's attorney-general in his majesty's Court of King's Bench or Exchequer at Westminster, and that in such information the offence or offences shall and may be alleged to have been committed at Westminster in the county of Middlesex; and the court in which any such information shall be prosecuted shall be and is hereby authorized to issue a commission or commissions for the examination of witnesses abroad, the depositions taken under which shall be received in evidence on the trial of such information."

Sect. 83. "If any person shall forge, or offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, knowing the same to be forged, any ticket, pay list, extract from any ship's books, or any certificate whatever authorized or required by this act, or any inspector's or other cheque, or any letter of attorney, assignment, power, or authority, in order to obtain or to enable any other person to receive any wages, pay, half pay, prize money, bounty money, or other allowance of money due or supposed to be due in respect of the services of any commission, warrant, or petty officer, or seaman, or any commission or non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, or any other person, performed or supposed to be performed in the royal navy; or if any person shall forge, or offer, utter, dispose of, or put off, any purser's or other certificate to a bill of exchange, or any approval of any such bill, respectively required by this act; or if any person shall forge, or utter or put off, knowing the same to be forged, any receipt for wages payable under allotment or otherwise in respect of the services of any person on board any of his majesty's ships, or shall forge the name or handwriting of any officer of the royal navy or royal marines to any receipt for half pay or arrears of half pay, or the name or handwriting of any widow to any receipt for any pension or arrears of pension, or the name or handwriting of any person to any receipt for an allowance from the compassionate fund of the navy; or shall offer, utter, dispose of, or put off any forged

(a) Where an indictment on the 57 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 4, charged the prisoner with having wilfully and knowingly personated and falsely assumed the name and character of Peter M'Cann, a person entitled to prize-money, in order to receive such prize-money, with intent to defraud the commissioners and governors of the royal hospital for seamen at Greenwich, and a second count described the said Peter M'Cann as a person "supposed to be entitled," &c. for services, "supposed to have been performed;" and upon the evidence, it appeared by the prize-list and muster-book, that there was a person of the name of Peter M'Cann, entitled to prize-money, but no person of the name of Peter M'Cann; it was considered by the twelve judges that the variance was fatal. (R. v. Tannett, Kent Lent Ass. 1818; 3 Stark. Evid. 1578, 56.)

All persons aiding and abetting the personating of seamen are principals; and the offence is not confined to the person only who personates the seaman. (R. v. Potts, alias Dangreen, R. & C. C. 353.) The prisoner was tried before Wood, B., at the Kent Lent Assizes, 1818, on an indictment on the 57 Geo. III. c. 127, s. 4, containing, amongst others, the two following counts, viz. :—"The first count charged, that Martha Potts, late of, &c., single woman, otherwise called Martha the wife of Gustoff Dangreen, on the 1st of May, 57 Geo. III., with force and arms, at the parish, &c., feloniously, willingly, and knowingly did procure one John Williams to personate, and falsely to assume the name and character of Thomas Jacobs, a person entitled to a certain allowance of money, for services done on board certain ships of our said lord the king, in order to receive such allowance of money, due and payable for and on account of the services of the said Thomas Jacobs, as aforesaid; and that the said John Williams, by the procurement of the said Martha Potts, otherwise called Martha Dangreen as aforesaid, and then and there, with force and arms, feloniously, willingly, and knowingly did personate, and falsely assume the name and character of the said Thomas Jacobs, a person entitled to a certain allowance of money, for services done on board certain ships of our said lord the king, in order to receive such allowance of money due and payable for and on account of the services of the said Thomas Jacobs as aforesaid, with intent to defraud the commissioners and governors of the royal hospital for seamen at Greenwich, in the county of Kent, against the form of the statute, &c., and against the peace, &c.

The thirteenth count charged, that the said John Williams, late of, &c., afterwards, to wit, on the said 1st of May, in the year aforesaid, with force and arms, at Greenwich aforesaid, in the county aforesaid, feloniously, willingly, and knowingly did personate and falsely assume the name and character of one Thomas Jacobs, a person entitled to a certain allowance of money, for services done on board certain ships of our said lord the king, in order to receive such allowance of money due and payable for and on account of the services of the said Thomas

Sect. 85. "If any person shall fraudulently and deceitfully take a false oath, in order to obtain probate of any will or letters of administration of the effects of any deceased commission, warrant, or petty officer, or seaman, or commission or non-commissioned officer of marines or marine; or if any person shall fraudulently receive or demand any wages, pay, prize money, bounty money, pension, or any part thereof, or any allowance of money whatever, payable or supposed to be payable in respect of the services of any such officer, seaman, or marine, or from the compassionate fund of the navy, or any pension to the widow of an officer, upon or by virtue of any probate of a will or letters of administration, knowing such will to be forged, or such probate or letters of administration to have been obtained by means of a false oath, with intent in any of the said cases to defraud any person whomsoever, every such offender shall be guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for life or for any term not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding four years nor less than two years."

Sect. 86. "If any person shall subscribe any false petition or application to the treasurer of his majesty's navy or to the paymaster of royal marines, falsely and deceitfully representing herself or himself therein to be the widow, executor, nearest or one of the nearest of kindred of any deceased commission or warrant officer of the navy, or commission officer of marines, or of any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, or shall utter or publish any such petition or application, knowing the same to be false, in order to procure, or to enable any other person to procure, a certificate from the said inspector of seamen's wills or from the paymaster of royal marines as hereinbefore respectively provided, thereby to obtain, or to enable any other person to obtain, without probate or letters of administration, payment of any wages, pay, half pay, or pension, or any allowance from the compassionate fund of the navy, or payment of any wages, prize money, or allowances payable in respect of the services of any officer, seaman, or marine in the royal navy, or thereby to obtain, or to

Jacobs as aforesaid, with intent to defraud the commissioners and governors of the royal hospital for seamen at Greenwich, in the county of Kent; and that the said Martha Potts, otherwise called Martha Dangreen, then and there, to wit, at the time of committing the felony aforesaid, with force and arms, feloniously, wilfully, and knowingly was present, aiding, abetting, assisting, comforting, and maintaining the said John Williams to do and commit the felony aforesaid, in form aforesaid; and so the jurors aforesaid, upon their oath aforesaid, do say, that the said John Williams and the said Martha Potts, otherwise called Martha Dangreen, the felony aforesaid, in manner and form aforesaid, feloniously, willingly, and knowingly did do and commit, against the form of the statute, &c., and against the peace, &c. There being no evidence of previous procurement, the jury acquitted the prisoner on the first count and all the other counts in the indictment except the thirteenth, on which they found the prisoner guilty, she being present and asserting that John Williams was Thomas Jacobs. The learned judge respited the judgment to take the opinion of the judges upon this count, doubting whether it was a good one, as the act makes no provision as to aiders, abettors, assisters, comforters, and maintainers, in that part which relates to personating seamen, though, in a subsequent part, as to forging letters of attorney, &c., it provides against those who shall willingly act or assist therein, or, with respect to uttering and publishing, against those who shall aid and assist. The learned judge also doubted whether the doctrine of a principal in the second degree (which seemed to be the idea of this count) could apply to this case; because principals in the second degree, and principals in the first degree, may be charged jointly as doing the act; whereas it appeared to the learned judge difficult to allege that a man and a woman jointly personated one man." J. W. had been convicted of personating J. at a former assizes, and the record of his conviction was produced to prove that fact, on this indictment. The judges unanimously held the conviction right.

enable any other person to obtain, probate of the will or letters of administration of the effects of any deceased petty officer, seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine; or if any person shall receive or demand any wages, pay, half pay, prize money, bounty money, pension, or arrears thereof, or any other allowance due or payable in respect of the services of any commission or warrant officer of the navy, or commission officer of royal marines, or of any petty officer, seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, upon or by virtue of any certificate of the inspector of seamen's wills or paymaster of royal marines respectively as aforesaid, knowing any such certificate to have been obtained by any false representation or pretence; every such offender shall be deemed guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years and not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years nor less than one year."

Sect. 87. "If any person shall forge, or shall utter, offer, or exhibit, knowing the same to be forged, any paper writing purporting to be an extract from any register of marriage, baptism, or burial, or any certificate of marriage, baptism, or burial, in order to sustain any claim to any wages, prize money, or other monies due or payable in respect of the services of any officer, seaman, or marine in his majesty's navy, or to sustain any claim to any half pay payable to an officer of the royal navy or marines, or to any pension as the widow of an officer, or to any payment or allowance from the compassionate fund of the navy, or to any gratuity or bounty of his majesty given to the relatives of persons slain in fight with the enemy; or if any person shall make any false affidavit, or utter or exhibit any false affidavit, certificate, or other voucher or document, in order fraudulently to procure any person to be admitted a pensioner as the widow of an officer of the royal navy, or in order to sustain any claim to any wages, prize money, or other monies, or to any half pay or pension, or arrears thereof, or any allowance from the compassionate fund of the navy, or to any gratuity or bounty as aforesaid, with intent to defraud any person whomsoever; every person in any of the said cases offending shall be deemed guilty of felony, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years and not less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years nor less than one year."

Sect. 88. "In the case of every offence made felony by this act, every principal in the second degree and every accessory before the fact shall be punishable in the same manner as the principal in the first degree is by this act punishable; and every accessory after the fact to any such felony shall, on conviction, be liable to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding two years; and that where any person shall be convicted of any offence punishable under this act for which imprisonment shall or may be awarded, it shall be lawful for the court to sentence the offender to be imprisoned, with or without hard labour, in the common gaol or house of correction, and also to direct that the offender shall be kept in solitary confinement for the whole or any portion or portions of such imprisonment, as to the court in its discretion shall seem meet."

Sect. 89. "If any petty officer or seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, shall obtain or attempt to obtain his pay, or any part thereof, upon or by means of any false or forged certificate purporting to be a certificate of service in or discharge from any of his majesty's ships, or from any hospital or sick quarters, every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and, being convicted thereof, shall be liable to such pains and penalties as persons convicted of wilful and corrupt perjury are by law liable to."

Sect. 90. "If any person shall take a false oath or make false affirmation in any case wherein an oath or affirmation is authorized or required by this act to be taken or made, and for which no punishment is otherwise by this act provided, every such person, being thereof duly convicted, shall be liable to such pains and penalties as persons guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury are by law subject to." 1. Royal Navy and Marines!

Sect. 91. "All pecuniary penalties exceeding twenty pounds imposed by this act shall and may be recovered, with full costs of suit in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster or Dublin, either by information in the name of his majesty's attorney general, or in the court of session in Scotland by his majesty's advocate, or by action of debt in the name of any person who may sue for the same; and that all penalties not exceeding twenty pounds shall and may be recovered before any justice of the peace in any part of the United Kingdom in the same manner in all respects as is provided by two several acts passed in the third and fifth years of the reign of his present majesty, for the recovery of penalties by summary proceeding before justices of the peace; and that one moiety of all such penalties, when recovered, shall be to the informer, and the other moiety shall be paid over to the treasurer of the navy, for his majesty's use." 11 G. 4 & 1 W. 4, c. 20.
Recovery and application of penalties.

Sect. 92. "And for the more speedy and effectual bringing to justice persons who shall commit any offence against the provisions of this act, be it further enacted, that it shall be lawful for the treasurer and the commissioners of the navy for the time being, or any one of them, and they are hereby respectively authorized and empowered, from time to time, in all places whatever, to execute the office and duty of a justice and justices of the peace in causing any person charged with any of the offences mentioned in this act to be apprehended, committed, and effectually prosecuted for the same; and all constables, headboroughs, keepers of gaols and prisons, and all other officers whatever, shall and they are hereby respectively required from time to time diligently to execute and obey all such warrants as shall be made, directed, or given to them, or any of them, by any one or more of the parties aforesaid, touching any of the matters and things hereinbefore contained; and all the laws made or to be made for the ease, safety, and protection of justices of the peace in the execution of their office, shall extend to the treasurer and commissioners of his majesty's navy respectively acting in the execution of this act, and to all constables and headboroughs or other peace officers or persons acting under the warrant or authority of the said treasurer or commissioners, or any of them, as fully and effectually, to all intents and purposes, as if the same were herein and hereby repeated and re-enacted." Treasurer and commissioners of the navy to act as justices.

Sect. 93. "And in order to avoid doubts as to the construction of certain parts of this act, be it further enacted, that by the term 'ship' is meant and intended every description of vessel employed in his majesty's service whose officers and crew shall be in the pay of the royal navy; and that by the term 'captain' is meant and intended the officer, of whatever rank he may be, who shall be in the command of the ship; and that all months herein mentioned shall be deemed to be calendar months, excepting only in the computation of wages, and of the time for which officers shall be allowed to draw their pay, which shall be cast and computed by the lunar month of twenty-eight days, according to the custom of the navy; and that all persons composing the complement of a ship shall be deemed to be petty officers or seamen, non-commissioned officers of marines or marine respectively, excepting such as shall appear by the muster book to be admirals or flag officers, or commodores, captains, commanders, lieutenants, masters, second masters, pilots, physicians, surgeons, assistant surgeons, chaplains, secretaries to flag officers, and their clerks, pursers, boatswains, gunners, carpenters, and commissioned officers of marines." Definition of terms.

Sect. 94. "The lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral for the time being shall cause measures to be taken for providing the several forms of books, bills, certificates, tickets, and other documents authorized or required by this act; and if any case not herein provided for shall arise, it shall be lawful for the lord high admiral or the said commissioners to make such order thereupon as shall be deemed most conducive to the interests of the public service and of the individuals engaged therein, and for carrying the intentions of this act into effect; and

2 Will. 4, c. 40.

By the 2 Wil. IV. c. 40, intituled, "An Act to amend the Laws relating to the Business of the Civil Departments of the Navy, and to make other Regulations for more effectually carrying on the Duties of the said Departments,"—[1st June 1832,]—reciting, "Whereas his majesty, by his royal letters patent under the great seal, bearing date the second day of November one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one, was pleased to constitute and appoint certain persons therein named to be principal officers and commissioners of his majesty's navy, and by other letters patent under the great seal, bearing date the twenty-fifth day of February one thousand eight hundred and thirty-one, was pleased to constitute and appoint certain other persons therein named commissioners for victualling his majesty's navy, and for the care of sick and wounded seamen: and whereas it has been deemed expedient that the number of offices in the civil departments of the navy should be reduced, and to that end that the offices or departments of the principal officers and commissioners of his majesty's navy, and of the commissioners for victualling his majesty's navy, and for the care of sick and wounded seamen, should be abolished: and whereas various duties of the said commissioners being established and regulated by divers acts of parliament, it is requisite that such acts should in some cases be altered, and new provisions made for the due execution of the said duties: be it therefore enacted by the king's most excellent majesty, by and with the advice and consent of the lords spiritual and temporal, and commons, in this present parliament assembled, and by the authority of the same, that in case his majesty shall be pleased to cancel and revoke the said letters patent by which the said several persons were respectively constituted and appointed principal officers and commissioners of the navy, and commissioners for victualling his majesty's navy, and for the care of sick and wounded seamen, as aforesaid, all the interests, titles, authorities, powers, and duties vested in the said respective commissioners by any act or acts of parliament, and every matter relating to them and their respective offices, shall from and after such revocation be and the same are hereby declared to be transferred to the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland for the time being, and shall be vested in and exercised by them in as full and ample a manner, to all intents and purposes, as if they had been named in the said acts instead of the commissioners of his majesty's navy, and the commissioners for victualling his majesty's navy, and for the care of sick and wounded seamen respectively, subject however to the provisions hereinafter established: provided always, that such transfer shall not be deemed to confer on the said commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid any new office within the meaning of an act passed in the sixth year of the reign of her majesty Queen Anne, intituled 'An Act for the Security of her Majesty's Person and Government, and of the Succession to the Crown of Great Britain in the Protestant Line;' nor shall any such commissioner last mentioned, by taking upon himself, under any new letters patent which his majesty may think fit to cause to be issued, the duties of the offices so abolished, be disqualified from sitting and voting in parliament, or thereby vacate the seat in parliament which any such commissioner may then hold; any thing contained in the said act of Queen Anne, or in any other act, or any usage of parliament, to the contrary notwithstanding; but it is nevertheless hereby declared, that from and after the passing of this act no greater number than five commissioners of the admiralty shall be competent at any one time to sit and vote in the Commons' House of Parliament."

Sect. 2. "From and after the revocation of the said letters patent, all manors, messuages, lands, tenements, hereditaments, erections, buildings, and property whatever, heretofore purchased, taken, held, or in any manner occupied by or in the name of his majesty or his royal progenitors, for the use of the naval or victualling departments, or which by an act of the first and second years of the reign of his late majesty King George the Fourth, intituled 'An Act for vesting all Estates and Property occupied by or for the Naval Service of this Kingdom in the principal Officers and Commissioners of his majesty's Navy, and for granting certain powers to the said principal Officers and Commissioners;' or by an act passed in the same session of parliament, for vesting certain lands and hereditaments at Gillingham in the county of Kent in trustees, to be appropriated to the public service in the department of the navy; or by an act passed in the fifth year of the reign of his said majesty, for enabling the commissioners for victualling his majesty's navy to purchase certain premises for completing a victualling establishment at Cremill Point near Plymouth in the county of Devon, and for supplying the said establishment with water; or by an act passed in the sixth year of the same reign, for enabling the corporation of Pembroke to convey to the commissioners of the navy the right of letting the stalls, sitings, and other conveniences in the market established in the town of Pembroke Dock, and the right to the rents, tolls, and fees thereof; or by an act passed in the same year, for enabling the commissioners of the navy to acquire certain portions of the docks and shore ground at Leith for a naval yard; or which by any other act of parliament, or by any deed or deeds, have been conveyed to or vested in the principal officers and commissioners of the navy, or the commissioners for victualling his majesty's navy, according to their respective estates and interests therein and titles thereto, with their appurtenances, and all rights, capacities, powers, authorities, and duties vested in the said commissioners of the navy and victualling respectively by any of the said acts, shall be and the same are hereby declared to be transferred to and vested in the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid for the time being, to be held, enjoyed, and executed by them and their successors in office, in trust for his majesty, his heirs and successors, for the public service; and every clause, covenant, matter, and thing contained in the said acts of parliament and deeds respectively shall extend and be applied to the said last-mentioned commissioners in as full and ample a manner, to all intents and purposes, as if they had been named therein instead of the commissioners of the navy and victualling respectively."

Sect. 3. "From and after the revocation of the said letters patent, all contracts, covenants, and agreements made between the said commissioners of the navy and victualling respectively, or any person on their behalf, and any other person or persons whomsoever, for the supply of any stores, goods, or other things for his majesty's service, or for the performance of any work, or on any other account in anywise relating to the naval and victualling departments respectively, or in which the said commissioners are in any manner interested or concerned, shall in like manner be transferred to and vested in the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid for the time being, and shall be executed and enforced by them in the same manner as if they had been named therein."

Sect. 4. "And whereas by an act passed in the eleventh year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, for amending and consolidating the laws relating to the pay of the royal navy, divers provisions and regulations are established in relation to various duties of the treasurer of the navy and his officers; and it is deemed expedient that such duties should be transferred from the said treasurer, and that other provisions and regulations should be established in lieu thereof; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the commencement of this act, as hereinafter mentioned, all authorities, powers, duties, matters, and things which by the said recited act or by any other act or acts of parliament are conferred upon or vested in the said treasurer, save and except as to the receipt and payment of money, and also except as to the management of Greenwich out-pensions, shall be exercised and performed by or under the immediate directions of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral, in as full and ample a manner as the said treasurer is by any of the said acts empowered to exercise and perform the same; and that all wills, powers of attorney, vouchers, and other documents, and all accounts, prize and other lists, returns, notifications, reports, petitions, certificates, documents, and papers, which by the said last-recited act or by any other act of parliament are required to be addressed, transmitted, or made to the said treasurer, except as aforesaid, shall be addressed, transmitted, and made to the secretary of the admiralty, in order that the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid may cause the necessary steps to be taken thereon, in conformity with the intentions of the said several acts, or otherwise, as by this act is provided."

Sect. 5. "From and after the passing of this act it shall be lawful for the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid for the time being, or any one or more of them, and they and each of them are and is hereby empowered, to administer an oath or oaths in any cases touching or concerning his majesty's naval monies, stores, victuals, or provisions, or the accounts thereof, or in any other matter relating to his majesty's naval service, and also from time to time, in all places whatever, to execute the office and authority of a justice of the peace in as full and ample a manner as any commissioners of the navy or victualling are by any act of parliament now in force, or any justice under any commission is authorized to execute the same; and all keepers of gaols, and all constables and other peace officers, are hereby respectively required from time to time diligently to execute and obey all such warrants as shall be lawfully made, directed, or given to them or any of them by any one or more of the said commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid; and all the laws made or to be made for the ease, safety, and protection of justices of the peace in the execution of their office shall extend to the said last-mentioned commissioners, and to all constables and other peace officers and persons acting under the warrant or authority of any such commissioners, as fully and effectually to all intents and purposes as if they were herein enacted." 1. Royal Navy and Marines.

2 Wil. 4, c. 40.

Sect. 6. "And whereas an act was passed in the third year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, for enabling two or more commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral, when the number of such commissioners is less than six, to do certain acts theretofore done by three or more of the same commissioners: and whereas, considering the additional duty to be performed by the said commissioners, in consequence of the abolition of the said offices as aforesaid, it is expedient to authorize the execution of any of their duties by two commissioners only, even when such commissioners shall be six or more in number; be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act the said last-recited act shall be and the same is hereby repealed, and that from thenceforth it shall be lawful for any two or more commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid, and they are hereby empowered, to exercise and execute all powers, authorities, and duties, and to perform and do all acts, matters, and things appertaining to their office, which by any act or acts of parliament are authorized or required to be executed or done by three or more of them, or by the commissioners of the navy and victualling respectively; and all such authorities, duties, matters, and things executed and performed by two or more of the said commissioners of the admiralty shall be valid and effectual to all intents and purposes." Two commissioners of the admiralty authorized to execute all powers.

Sect. 7. "In all deeds, conveyances, leases, contracts, and other instruments touching any estate, property, matter, or thing relating to the naval service, or to any department under the controul of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid, or whereto they or any of them shall be parties, it shall be sufficient to describe them generally by the style and title of 'The Commissioners for executing the Office of Lord High Admiral of the United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland,' without expressing their names; and that all such deeds, conveyances, leases, contracts, and other instruments wherein the said commissioners shall be so described, and the execution thereof by any two of them, shall be as valid and effectual to all intents and purposes as if they or any of them had been expressly named therein." Their style and title.

Sect. 8. "All bills for payment of money, all allotment bills, and all remittance bills heretofore made out or signed by the commissioners of the navy or victualling, or any of them, or by the treasurer of the navy, except bills for Greenwich out-pensions, or by the paymaster of marines, or any of their clerks respectively, shall, from and after the commencement of this act, as herein-after mentioned, be made out and signed by an officer to be called the accountant general of the navy, or by an officer to be for that purpose appointed by the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid, and shall be in such form, and countersigned and approved in such manner, as the said last-mentioned commissioners shall from time to time order or establish; and that all bills to be drawn by officers of the navy or by any other persons under the authority of an act made in the eleventh year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, for consolidating the laws relating to the pay of the navy, which bills shall in future be made payable at three days' instead of (as provided by the said act) at ten days' sight, and all other bills which have heretofore been usually drawn upon the commissioners of the navy and victualling respectively, shall be drawn upon the said accountant general, and shall be accepted by him or by such other officer as aforesaid, and such acceptance shall be countersigned and approved in manner aforesaid; and all the several bills, so countersigned and approved as aforesaid, shall, when paid by the treasurer of the navy, be deemed good and sufficient vouchers for such payment on the passing of his accounts." As to the drawing and acceptance of bills for naval

accounts, and all bills, tickets, books, documents, and papers, which by any act of parliament are required to be made, given, or transmitted to the commissioners of the navy or victualling, shall be made, given, and transmitted to the secretary of the admiralty, in order that the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid may thereupon cause the necessary measures to be taken for carrying into effect the intentions of the said acts; and that all certificates, tickets, vouchers, and other documents heretofore by any act or acts authorized to be given or made out by the commissioners of the navy or victualling shall be made and given by the secretary of the admiralty, or by such other person as shall for that purpose be directed by the said commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid."

Sect. 10. "And whereas it is deemed expedient that the duties hitherto performed by commissioners at the several dock yards and other naval and victualling establishments at home and abroad shall in future be executed by officers to be called superintendents; be it therefore further enacted, that from and after the revocation of the said letters patent such superintendents from time to time to be appointed shall have full power and authority to do, execute, and perform all and every the duties, matters, and things which by any act or acts of parliament now in force any commissioner of the navy or victualling resident at any naval or victualling yard or establishment, or at any naval hospital, at home or abroad, is authorized or required to do: provided always, that in the absence of such superintendent his duty as to the signing of bills, certificates, and vouchers, and in other respects in which the acts of a commissioner have been required, may be executed by the officer next in seniority to him, such officer noticing, after his signature, the fact of the superintendent's absence."

Sect. 11. "The superintendents so to be appointed shall have and they are hereby invested with full power and authority to administer oaths, and to exercise the duties, powers, and authorities of justices of the peace, in all places whatever, and in all matters relating to his majesty's naval service, and to the stores, provisions, ammunition, and the accounts thereof, and in all other cases whatever in which any commissioner of the navy or victualling is empowered to act as a justice by any act or acts now in force, in as full a manner to all intents and purposes as if such superintendents had been named in any such act or acts, or in any commission of the peace for any such places; and that all the laws made and to be made for the ease, safety, and protection of justices of the peace in the execution of their office shall extend to such superintendents, and to all constables and other peace officers and persons acting under the warrant or authority of any such superintendent, as fully and effectually as any such laws can be deemed to extend to any justice or justices of the peace, and to the persons acting under them."

Sect. 12. "And whereas by the said act of the eleventh year of king George the Fourth, for consolidating the laws relating to the pay of the navy, provision is made for the payment, without probate or administration, in cases of sums not exceeding thirty-two pounds payable on account of pay, half pay, or pension of deceased officers of the navy and marines, and of pensions of deceased widows of officers, and on account of allowances from the compassionate fund: and whereas by reason of the abolition of the office of paymaster of marines, and of the transfer of part of the duties of the treasurer of the navy, it is become necessary to make further provision in such cases, and also in the cases of sums not exceeding twenty pounds due to any deceased persons on account of any prize money, and for the services of deceased non-commissioned officers and marines; be it therefore further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act the investigation of all claims to the effects of any such deceased persons shall be made by the inspector of seamen's wills, in the manner required by the said recited act in cases of similar claims to pay for services in the royal navy; and the said inspector, after duly investigating the claim, and the amount of the deceased's assets, is hereby authorized in any such cases to issue a check or certificate, as is required by the said act with respect to naval pay; and that all payments not exceeding in the whole thirty-two pounds of pay, half pay, pension, or allowances of deceased officers of the navy and marines, and of widows' pensions, and of allowances from the compassionate fund, and all payments not exceeding in the whole twenty pounds of monies due to any deceased person on account of prize money, and for the services of deceased non-commissioned officers, drummers, and privates of marines, to be made under any such certificate, shall be as effectual and legal as if the same had been made under any probate of a will or letters of administration: provided always, that in order to allow time for the production of any will which may have been made by any such deceased person, and to guard against fraud, no check or certificate whatever shall be granted in lieu of letters of administration, under this or the said recited act, until three calendar months shall have elapsed from the time of notice being given to the inspector of the death of the person whose effects are claimed."

2 Wil. 4, c. 40.

Sect. 13. "And for the better investigation of claims to the effects of deceased persons under this or the said recited act, be it further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act the said inspector shall have full power and authority to administer an oath or affirmation to any claimants touching their claims, either as the representatives or the creditors of the deceased, and to the witnesses to be adduced in support of any such claims; and that the certificate of the allowance of the claim shall be in such form as the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral shall authorize."

Inspector may administer oaths.

Sect. 14. "And whereas by the said act of the eleventh year of king George the Fourth, provision is made for limiting the expense of obtaining probates of wills and letters of administration to the effects of deceased officers, seamen, and marines, and it is expedient that the schedule of fees to be allowed in such cases should, on account of inaccuracies therein, be altered; be it therefore further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act the several sums set forth in the table of fees contained in the schedule annexed to this act, and which shall be deemed as part hereof, shall be allowed and taken, in the cases respectively therein mentioned, in lieu of those specified in the schedule of the said recited act; and if any registrar, proctor, or other person shall demand or receive more than the several sums respectively allowed by the schedule annexed to this act, every person so offending shall forfeit the sum of fifty pounds, which shall be recoverable, with costs of suit, and applicable in the same manner as is provided by the said recited act with respect to pecuniary penalties exceeding twenty pounds: provided nevertheless, that if any increase or diminution shall take place in the stamp duties payable in respect of any such probates or letters of administration, or of any instrument connected therewith, the sums to be allowed shall be increased or diminished to the extent of the alteration in such stamp duties; and provided also, that in cases of extraordinary trouble or expense such additional allowance shall be made as shall appear reasonable to the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid." [See ante, 420.]

Fees on probates, &c. contained in the schedule to this act to be taken in lieu of those specified in 11 Geo. 4, c. 20.

Sect. 15. "And inasmuch as a strict adherence to the letter of such inaccurate schedule would have produced a burden upon the relations of deceased seamen not intended by the said recited act, be it further enacted, that all registrars, proctors, and others who may, under the authority of the treasurer of the navy or his officers, have been allowed or have received more or other than the sums set forth in the said inaccurate schedule, shall be and are hereby indemnified and released from all penalties and forfeitures which under the said recited act they may have incurred on any such account."

Proctors and others indemnified for receiving greater fees than allowed by act 11 Geo. 4, c. 20.

Sect. 16. "And whereas by the said recited act of the eleventh year of his late majesty provision is made for the payment of naval half pay and pensions by a mode called an extract, upon notice to be given to the clerk of the treasurer of the navy by the person desiring to be so paid, and provision is also made for the payment of the pensions of officers and others becoming insane to the persons having the care and maintenance of them, and it is expedient to extend the said provisions; be it therefore further enacted, that from and after the passing of this act such mode of payment by extract shall, if required by the parties, be adopted with respect to marine half pay and pensions, and that the notice shall be given to the superintendent of the dock yard at which the party shall be desirous to be so paid; and that in all cases of widows of naval and marine officers entitled to any pension becoming or being insane, or otherwise from their state of mind incompetent to the management of their affairs, it shall be lawful for the treasurer of the navy, under the authority of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral, to pay over to the relative or other person having the care and maintenance of any such widow, such pension, or such portion thereof as the said commissioners shall think fit, to be applied to the maintenance and support of such insane or incompetent person; and every such payment shall be deemed valid, and an effectual discharge to the said treasurer for so much as shall be so paid." [See ante, 401.]

Sect. 17. "And whereas by the said recited act agents employed in the receipt of wages in respect of services in the royal navy are prohibited from taking more than sixpence in the pound for receiving and paying over the same, and for all their trouble in relation thereto: and whereas certain officers are permitted to receive part and others the whole of their pay by drawing bills for the same, although it is required of them to pass documents and accounts annually or on quitting their ships, so that no pay may be received by the agent, out of which he can deduct the allowance of sixpence in the pound, or be in any manner compensated for his trouble in transacting the business of the officer in his absence, or for passing his accounts, and it is therefore necessary to explain and amend the said act in this respect; be it therefore further enacted and declared, that such prohibition shall not be deemed to extend to prevent any agent from charging or receiving from any commission or warrant officer (save and except in the cases of passing accounts, for which especial provision is made in the said act,) such reasonable compensation as such agent may be fairly entitled to charge, or as may be agreed upon between them, for any trouble or pains of such agent in transacting for any such commission or warrant officer any business or affairs not relating to the receipt of pay, prize money, or other allowances." [See ante, 414.]

Sect. 18. "And whereas by the said recited act it is enacted, in cases of monthly payments of pay to the seamen of the navy, in the absence of the purser, or in ships not having a purser, the commanding officer shall act and be deemed to be the purser for all the purposes of such payments: and whereas it is found expedient that in certain ships not having pursers the duty of purser shall be performed by the clerk of the ship instead of the commanding officer; be it therefore enacted, that from and after the passing of this act, in all such cases as aforesaid, the payment shall and may be made by the clerk so appointed to do the duty of purser, in the presence of the commanding officer and of another commissioned officer, if there be one belonging to the ship, and if not, then in the presence of the commanding officer and the person acting as master or one of the mates of the ship, entitled to draw bills, which officers shall attest the lists as required by the said act." [See ante, 390.]

Sect. 19. "And whereas by three several acts of parliament relating to the receipt of naval prize money, passed in the fifty-seventh and fifty-ninth years of his late majesty king George the Third, and in the first year of his late majesty king George the Fourth, certain provisions are established with regard to the licensing, by the treasurer of the navy, of agents to receive the pay and prize money of petty officers, seamen, and marines; be it further enacted, that all such licences to agents, and to the representatives of deceased agents, as by the said several acts or by any other act are authorized to be granted by the treasurer of the navy, shall, from and after the commencement of this act, as hereinafter mentioned, be granted by an officer to be for that purpose appointed by the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral, which commissioners shall have full power and authority, from time to time as they shall see requisite, to revoke such licences, in case of neglect in any such licensed agent duly to account for and pay over all monies received by him, or of any deceitful, fraudulent, or dishonest conduct practised by any such agent towards any person or persons on whose behalf he shall have been employed, or towards any person claiming through or under them; and that all such licensed agents shall from time to time give such notice in writing to the secretary of the admiralty, of their change of abode, as by the said act of the fifty-ninth year of king George the Third is required to be given to the treasurer of the navy: provided always, that every such agent so to be licensed shall enter into bond with sureties to his majesty, as required by the said act of the first year of his majesty king George the Fourth, in such form as to the said commissioners shall appear requisite."

Sect. 20. "And whereas an act was passed in the tenth year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, for transferring the management of Greenwich out-pensions, and certain duties in matters of prize, to the treasurer of the navy; and it is expedient that such management and duties, so far as regards matters of prize only, should be placed under the care of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid; be it therefore further enacted, that from and after the commencement of this act, as hereinafter mentioned, the several duties in matters of prize, and all the powers and authorities relating thereto respectively, which by the said last-recited act were vested in the treasurer of the navy, shall be and the same are hereby transferred to and vested in the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid; reserving always to the said treasurer the duty of making all payments and receiving all monies as by the same act is directed and provided in that behalf."

Duties in matters of prize transferred to admiralty, except as to payments and receipts.

Sect. 21. "So much of the said last-mentioned act as relates to the form of remittance bills shall be and the same is hereby repealed; and that from henceforth remittance bills for Greenwich out-pensions, and the certificate and receipt to be required on payment thereof, shall be in such form as the treasurer of the navy for the time being shall from time to time authorize and direct; and that remittance bills for prize money, of which the management is by this act intended to be transferred to the said commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral, shall, from and after such transfer, be made in the same manner and subject to the same regulations in all respects as are provided with regard to payments relating to naval and marine pay and pensions, or in such other manner and form as the said commissioners shall from time to time authorize and direct; and in case of such payments being made upon remittance bills by any officer of the revenue, repayment thereof shall be made to the respective departments of the revenue in the manner provided by the said recited act of the eleventh year of king George the Fourth with respect to other remittance bills, an account of which bills shall be forwarded, if for out-pensions to the treasurer of the navy, and if for prize, to the admiralty office, in order that such account may be examined by the proper officer of the respective departments, and, if found correct, that measures may be taken for causing repayment to be made by the said treasurer to the respective departments of the revenue accordingly; and in all cases of remittance bills for prizes made out and not paid, owing to the death of the party, or other cause, such bills shall be returned to the admiralty office to be cancelled."

Sect. 22. "All monies which previously to the transfer of the management of out-pensions and duties in matters of prize to the treasurer of the navy, by the said recited act of the tenth year of king George the Fourth, were, under any other act or acts of parliament, made payable to the treasurer of Greenwich Hospital, or for the benefit of that establishment, on account of undistributed prize or bounty money, or of unclaimed or forfeited shares of such monies, or on any other account, which are now outstanding in the

Sect. 24. "And whereas by an act passed in the first year of his present majesty's reign, intituled 'An Act to consolidate and amend the several Acts relating to the office of Treasurer of his Majesty's Navy,' various regulations are established for the government of the commissioners of the navy and victualling respectively, and of the treasurer of the navy, in regard to the soliciting of monies wanted for the service of the navy, and to the accounts, custody, and disposal of such monies; and it is necessary to alter the same regulations, and to make further provision in regard to the same; be it further enacted, that from and after the revocation of the said letters patent all monies wanted for the service of the navy shall be solicited by the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid, and shall be for naval services generally, and that in the letter soliciting the same the said commissioners shall specify the general balance of public monies remaining in the treasurer's hands; and that one account only of the monies issued from the exchequer to the governor and company of the Bank of England shall be raised in the books of the said governor and company, and shall be entitled generally for naval services, a corresponding account with which shall be kept by the said treasurer; and upon receipt of all such monies from the exchequer the said treasurer shall certify the amount to the said commissioners: provided always, that no monies paid into the Bank of England on account of the treasurer of the navy, or for naval services, shall be paid thereout, except upon drafts for naval services, to be drawn by the treasurer or one of his cashiers, upon several accounts to be raised in the Bank books by the treasurer, or the person duly authorized by him, in the joint names of the said treasurer, and of his respective cashiers; and provided also, that nothing in the said recited act or in this act contained shall be deemed to extend to prohibit the said treasurer (by himself or by the person authorized by him) from raising sub-accounts, in the names of the treasurer and any of his cashiers, in the books of the said governor and company, as has for the safety and convenience of the public service been heretofore the practice, so that no monies are paid out of the Bank except upon drafts as herein is directed."

Sect. 25. "From and after the passing of this act the annual accounts required by the said last recited act to be made up by the treasurer of the navy shall be an account of naval services generally, and shall commence on the first day of April and end on the thirty-first day of March in every year; and after the same shall have been duly examined in the office of and certified and approved by two of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral shall be transmitted by the said commissioners to the commissioners for auditing the public accounts, as is provided by the said recited act."

Sect. 26. "The treasurer's accounts for the first three months of the present year shall be made up to the thirty-first day of March, and shall be examined and passed in the manner directed by the said recited act of the first year of his present majesty."

Sect. 27. "The monthly accounts required by the said act to be made up at the dock yards shall, from and after the revocation of the said letters patent, be signed by the pay clerk, and shall be certified by the superintendent of the yard, or in his absence by the officer next in seniority to him, and shall then be transmitted in duplicate to the said treasurer and to the secretary of the admiralty respectively."

Sect. 28. "The annual inspection of public monies required by the same act to be made, shall in future be made on the first day of April in each year, or that day being Sunday, on the following day, in the manner thereby directed, by the superintendent at the dock yard, and by one of the commissioners of the admiralty at the navy pay office; and the amounts thereof respectively shall be certified to the commissioners for executing the said office of lord high admiral, who shall within three months next after the first day of April in each year cause to be made out, and transmit to the commissioners for auditing the public accounts, certificates of the amounts of the balances thereupon found; and upon the death, resignation, or removal of any treasurer of the navy, a similar inspection of the public monies remaining in charge of his several cashiers and clerks shall be made so soon after as conveniently may be, and at farthest within seven days afterwards; and the amounts of the respective balances found shall be in like manner thereupon certified to the said commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral, and certificates thereof shall be by them, within the like period of seven days, transmitted to the commissioners for auditing the public accounts, for the purpose mentioned in the said recited act."

Sect. 29. "From and after the passing of this act all allotment and remittance bills, and all other bills for payment of money mentioned in or authorized by this act or the said recited act of the eleventh year of king George the Fourth, to be made out or drawn, and all discharges for the same, and all receipts or discharges to be given to the treasurer of the navy, or any of his officers, in respect of any naval or marine pay, pension or prize money, or in respect of payments under ten pounds on account of any civil pension or allowance charged on the ordinary estimate of the navy, or of any monies heretofore paid by the paymaster of royal marines, and which are now payable by the said treasurer, shall be wholly freed and exempt from stamp duties."

Sect. 30. "The commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral shall, after the expiration of the present year, cause to be made up, on or before the thirtieth day of November in each succeeding year, an account, to be signed and attested by the accountant general of the navy, of the naval receipt and expenditure of the year ending on the thirty-first day of March preceding, distinguishing the expenditure under the several heads of naval service, as expressed in the Appropriation Act or Acts for that year; and the account, when so made up and attested, shall be compared with the vouchers by the commissioners for auditing the public accounts, who are hereby required, on or before the thirty-first day of January following, if parliament be then sitting, and if not, then within one week after parliament shall be assembled, to lay before the House of Commons a copy of the said account, certifying thereon as to the correctness of the said account as compared with the vouchers, and noting under each head whether the expenditure has exceeded or fallen short of the sums voted by parliament for the naval service

Sect. 31. "And whereas by the uniform practice of the navy, the several payments hereinafter specified have been vouched by the attestation of witnesses to such payments only, without requiring from the party receiving the same any acquittance for the amount so paid, and certificates of the amounts of such payments so attested have been received as vouchers in proof thereof; be it therefore enacted, that certificates founded upon the books of his majesty's ships, and extracts therefrom, and of the ordinary at each port, the books of each dock and victualling yard, the half pay lists, the lists of savings of provisions, the list of Greenwich out-pensions, the pay lists of naval hospitals, and the account containing the payments of chaplains' bounty, shall, when duly attested by the several officers or other persons whose duty it shall be to attend and attest such payments, be received by the said commissioners of audit as sufficient vouchers in proof of the several payments in such certificates respectively charged, conformably with the practice which has hitherto prevailed."

Sect. 32. "If any person shall forge or falsely make any certificate to be given under the authority of this act by the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral, or any of them, or by any superintendent, of the purchase or sale of any naval or victualling stores, or shall utter or publish any false or altered certificate of any such purchase or sale, knowing the same to be false; or if any person shall take a false oath, or make a false affirmation, or give false evidence before any commissioner or commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid, or before any superintendent or inspector of seamen's wills, touching any matter which the said commissioners or any of them, or any superintendent or inspector, are or is authorized to inquire into; every such person, being duly convicted of any such offence or offences, shall be liable to suffer such punishment, pains, and penalties as persons guilty of wilful and corrupt perjury are by law subject to."

Sect. 33. "The petition for probate of will or letters of administration of the effects of any deceased petty officer or seaman, or non-commissioned officer of marines or marine, or for obtaining a check or certificate in lieu of probate or letters of administration, in cases of claims where the deceased's assets shall not exceed thirty-two pounds and twenty pounds respectively, shall be addressed to the inspector of seamen's wills, and shall be forwarded to the secretary of the admiralty; and if any person shall subscribe, transmit, utter, or publish any false petition, or application to the said inspector, knowing the same to be false, in order to obtain or to enable any other person to obtain any check or certificate in lieu of probate or letters of administration as aforesaid, every person so offending shall be deemed guilty of felony, and being convicted thereof shall be liable, at the discretion of the court, to be transported beyond the seas for any term not exceeding fourteen years nor less than seven years, or to be imprisoned for any term not exceeding three years nor less than one year."

Sect. 34. "And whereas by an act of the thirty-ninth and fortieth years of his late majesty king George the Third, for the better preventing the embezzlement of his majesty's naval, ordnance, and victualling stores, certain rewards of twenty pounds and five pounds are directed to be paid in the respective cases therein mentioned, for the discovery of offences relating to such stores, and it is expedient that the amount of the said rewards should be reduced; be it therefore further enacted, that upon convictions of persons for any offence touching his majesty's naval, ordnance, or victualling stores, to be discovered after the passing of this act, the payment of rewards shall be in the discretion of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid, or of the master general and principal officers of the ordnance, as the case may be; and that instead of the rewards of twenty pounds and five pounds respectively payable under the said act, the rewards following shall be paid; (that is to say,) any sum not exceeding ten pounds upon convictions in prosecutions by indictment, and not exceeding fifty shillings upon summary convictions in the respective cases mentioned in the said act; and that no reward shall be payable in cases where the fine inflicted on the offender shall amount to twenty pounds, unless such fine shall fail to be paid as provided in the said act; and that it shall be lawful to mitigate the pecuniary penalty of ten pounds, in cases of summary convictions, to any sum not less than forty shillings."

Sect. 35. "From and after the commencement of this act, as herein-after mentioned, an act made in the first year of the reign of his majesty king George the First, to prevent disturbances by seamen and others, and to preserve the stores belonging to his majesty's navy royal, and for other purposes therein mentioned (save and except so much thereof as continues two several acts made in the eleventh year of king William the Third and the fifth year of queen Anne); and an act made in the first year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Fourth, to authorize the paymasters of royal marines to issue pay not exceeding a certain sum to the representatives of deceased officers and private men, without probate or administration; and also an act made in the eighth year of the reign of his said late majesty king George the Fourth, for more conveniently paying the widows of officers of the royal marines; and also an act made in the tenth year of the reign of his said majesty to facilitate the public business in certain cases in the navy and victualling departments; and also so much of an act made in the eleventh year of his said late majesty, to amend and consolidate the laws relating to the pay of the royal navy, as relates to the paymaster of royal marines; and so much of the same act as empowers petty officers, seamen, non-commissioned officers, and marines to make orders in writing upon the treasurer of the navy, for payment of wages not exceeding ten pounds, and as authorizes the inspector of seamen's wills to send and receive letters and packets free from the duty of postage, shall be and the same are hereby repealed: provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend or be construed to deprive the treasurer of the navy of the privilege of sending and receiving letters and packets free of the duty of postage."

Sect. 2. "And whereas by the said recited act certain officers therein mentioned, who have not accounts to pass, are authorized to draw bills quarterly for the balance of their personal pay, and certain other officers are thereby authorized to draw bills only for three fourths of their pay: and whereas it is expedient to extend the authority to draw for the whole of their pay to the several officers hereinafter mentioned; be it therefore further enacted, that from and after the thirtieth day of September one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four it shall be lawful for every captain, commander, lieutenant, or master commanding a ship, surgeon, purser, and assistant surgeon acting as surgeon, in the several cases to be approved by the said commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid for the time being, and under such regulations, limitations, and restrictions as the said commissioners shall from time to time establish, to draw a bill upon the accountant general of the navy periodically for the net personal pay which shall be then due to any such officer: provided always, that all bills for personal pay to be drawn under the authority either of the said recited act or this act shall, from and after the commencement of this act, be drawn for such periods of time and up to such periodical days in the year as the said commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid shall from time to time fix and establish for that purpose." [See ante, 396.]

Sect. 3. "And whereas by the said recited act an advance of two months' pay is authorized to be made to volunteer seamen and landmen on the first fitting-out of the ship in which they shall be appointed to serve: and whereas it is expedient to extend that benefit to the several persons herein-after mentioned; be it further enacted, that from and after the thirtieth day of September one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, mates, boatswains, gunners, carpenters, second masters, and petty officers shall be entitled to receive a similar advance of two months' personal sea pay at such times, in the same manner, and under the same regulations, as volunteer seamen and landmen are allowed to receive the same." [See ante, 389.]

Sect. 4. "And whereas by the said recited act the persons in whose favour allotments of pay are authorized to be made are limited to certain relatives of the party making the allotment as therein mentioned, and it is expedient to extend the said act in this respect; be it therefore further enacted, that from and after the thirtieth day of September one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four the party entitled to make any allotment of his pay shall be at liberty to make the same to or in favour of the following other relatives and persons; (that is to say,) a brother, sister, grandfather, grandmother, mother-in-law, and child or children of the age of eighteen years or upwards, and to a trustee or trustees for the support of any child or children under that age." [See ante, 397.]

Sect. 5. "In all cases whatever of allotment to be made, either under the said recited act or this act, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid from time to time to establish and fix the amount of pay to be allotted, not exceeding in any case one moiety of the monthly wages of the party making the allotment."

Sect. 6. "Whenever any person who shall have made an allotment of his wages under this or the said recited act shall be found to be in debt to the public on the ship's books or otherwise, it shall be lawful for the said commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral to cause payment under such allotment to be stopped until such person shall have been cleared of the debt owing by him."

Sect. 7. "And whereas by the said recited act petty officers, seamen, and non-commissioned officers of marines and private marines, who shall not have made any allotment of their pay, are empowered to remit the whole or any part of the pay due to them (except for the last six months) to the respective relatives therein mentioned: and whereas it is expedient to extend the said act in respect to such remittances; be it therefore further enacted, that from and after the thirtieth day of September one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four it shall be lawful for any petty officer, seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines, or marine, notwithstanding he may have made an allotment of his pay, to cause to be paid by remittance in the manner thereby provided any further portion of his pay which may remain due to him, except for the last six months, and that any such remittance of wages may be made payable either to any of the relatives mentioned in the said recited act, or to any child or children of the age of eighteen years or upwards of the party making the allotment, or if under that age then to a trustee on the behalf of such child or children; or any such petty officer, seaman, non-commissioned officer of marines, or marine, may, if he shall think fit, authorize any such part of his pay to be invested for his benefit in such savings' bank and under and subject to such rules and regulations as the said commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral aforesaid shall from time to time fix and establish for that purpose, consistently with the safety and convenience of the public service, and the benefit of the party desiring the investment to be made." [See ante, 399.]

Sect. 8. "And whereas by the said recited act, in order to avoid the expense which the relatives of deceased officers, seamen, and others may otherwise be put to in obtaining payment of small sums due to such deceased persons, provision is made for the payment thereof without probate or letters of administration in the several cases therein mentioned, under a certificate or check to be issued by the inspector of seamen's wills, which officer by an act passed in the second year of the reign of his present majesty, for amending the laws relating to the civil departments of the navy, is also empowered to issue a similar certificate or check in other cases as therein mentioned: and whereas it is expedient to extend the said provision to cases not provided for by either of the said acts, and to consolidate the law upon this subject; be it further enacted, that from and after the thirtieth day of September one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, in the case of the death of any commissioned, warrant, or petty officer, seaman, commissioned or non-commissioned officer of royal marines, or private marine, or of any widow entitled to a pension on the establishment of the navy, or of any person entitled to an allowance from the compassionate fund, or of any person having been employed in any of his majesty's dock yards, naval, victualling, or medical establishments, or in any of the civil departments of the navy, or of any person entitled to any prize money, bounty, grant, or other money in the nature of naval prize, and respectively leaving assets to be administered which shall not in the whole exceed the sum of thirty-two pounds, it shall be lawful for the inspector of seamen's wills in the admiralty office, after having satisfied himself by due investigation of the right of any claimant to probate of the will if the deceased shall have left a will, or, in case of intestacy, to letters of administration, and also on due proof, to perform their duties, and to be amenable to naval

By the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 24, intituled "An Act for the Encouragement of the voluntary Enlistment of Seamen, and to make Regulations for more effectually managing his Majesty's Navy," [21st August, 1835,] after reciting, "whereas it is expedient to limit the duration of the service of seamen in his majesty's navy, and to increase the inducements to seafaring men voluntarily to enter into the same;" it is enacted, "that no person shall be liable to be detained against his consent in the naval service of his majesty for a longer period than five years, to be computed from the day of his being entered into the same, unless he shall have voluntarily entered for a longer term, and except as hereinafter provided; and that at the expiration of such period of continuous service he shall, upon his application for that purpose, be entitled to be discharged; and if the ship on board which he shall be serving be in any port of the United Kingdom he shall be forthwith discharged; and in cases of men serving on board ships absent from the United Kingdom, the lord high admiral, or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral, shall cause the necessary orders and instructions to be given to all admirals and other officers in command of his majesty's ships, that about the time when the period of their respective services shall expire every person entitled to his discharge, on signifying to his captain or commanding officer his wish no longer to continue in the service, shall be discharged forthwith, if he desire it, or shall be sent by the earliest convenient opportunity in some ship of his majesty to some port of the United Kingdom, to be there discharged: provided always nevertheless, that if the admiral or commanding officer of the fleet or squadron under whose command he shall be shall, in consequence of any special emergency, deem it hazardous to the public service forthwith to discharge him, then such admiral or commanding officer shall have power to detain him in the service for a further period of six calendar months, or until such emergency shall have ceased; and in every such case the person so detained shall be entitled to receive for such extra service one fourth in addition to the pay of his rating: provided also, that if any seaman shall be under lawful arrest at the period at which he shall be so entitled to his discharge, then such discharge shall not take place until such arrest shall have ceased, or, in case he shall have been put under arrest in order to be brought to trial for any offence, until he shall have been tried for such offence, and have undergone the punishment to which he may be adjudged for the same by sentence of court-martial: and provided further, that nothing in this act contained shall be construed to exempt any person so entitled to his discharge from the performance of the duties of his station until he shall have been actually discharged; and that every such person, so long as he shall be in the service, shall be amenable and subject to the discipline of the navy, and to the several provisions of the laws in being relating to the government of his majesty's ships, vessels, and forces by sea."

Sect. 2. "Every such seaman who may have served the said term of five years, whilst any proclamation of his majesty calling for the services of seafaring men shall have been in force, shall, upon being discharged from the navy, be entitled to receive from the captain or commanding officer of the ship from which he shall be so discharged a certificate of his service therein, containing a description of his age, person, and place of birth, upon the production at the admiralty office of which and of similar certificates as to his service in any other of his majesty's ships in which he may have served during such period of five years, (all which certificates the captains of such ships are hereby required to give him on his discharge from the same respectively,) and upon a comparison of the dates and particulars to be expressed in such certificates with the muster books of the several ships in which he shall have served, provided the particulars shall be found correct and the certificates be found genuine, a protection from service in the navy for the space of two years shall be issued to every such seaman gratis, under the hands of two or more of the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral and the seal of the office of admiralty, in such form as the said commissioners shall think fit: provided always, that if any such seaman shall be discharged, except upon his own application, before the term of his service shall amount to five years as aforesaid, a protection shall be granted to him for the space of one year only."

Sect. 3. "And in order to prevent as far as may be frauds and impositions with respect to protections, be it further enacted, that if any person shall forge or counterfeit any certificate of service in his majesty's navy, or any instrument purporting to be a protection from such service, or shall fraudulently utter or publish any forged certificate of such service, or any forged instrument purporting to be a protection from such service, knowing the same to be forged, or shall fraudulently alter any certificate or protection which shall have been duly granted or issued; or if any person shall forge or fraudulently alter any extract from a baptismal register, or shall knowingly utter any false or fraudulently altered extract from a baptismal register, or any false affidavit, certificate, or other document, in order to obtain from the admiralty office a protection from his majesty's naval service for himself or any other person; or if any person, being in the possession of a protection, shall lend, sell, or dispose thereof to any other person, in order fraudulently to enable such other person to make an unlawful use of the same; or if any person shall produce, utter, or make use of as a protection for himself any protection which shall have been made out or issued for any other individual; every person in any such manner offending shall be deemed guilty of a misdemeanor, and such protection shall thenceforward be null and void."

Sect. 4. "And for the encouragement of seamen and others to enter into his majesty's naval service, be it further enacted, that every seaman, seafaring man, or other person who within six days after any proclamation of his majesty calling for the services of seafaring men shall have been published in any port of the United Kingdom or of any of his majesty's dominions, shall at such port enter himself in his majesty's naval service with any officer authorized to receive volunteers for the royal navy, shall, in addition to the advantages given to volunteers by an act of the eleventh year of his late majesty king George the Fourth, to amend and consolidate the laws relating to the pay of the royal navy, be entitled to receive double the amount (according to his rating) of the bounty offered by any such proclamation; and that in the cases of seaman serving in merchant vessels which shall be at sea at the time when any such proclamation shall be issued, every such person who shall enter himself with an officer of the navy within six days after the first arrival of any such ship at any such port as Seamen in service at time of issuing a proclamation calling for services of seafaring men to continue, and be paid the usual bounty.

Sect. 5. "The seamen who shall at the time of the issuing of any such proclamation as aforesaid be serving in the fleet shall not be entitled to be discharged, but shall continue to serve therein for a period of five years, in case their services shall be so long required; and in consideration of their being so required to continue in the service for such further period they shall be entitled to receive and shall be paid the same amount of bounty as shall by any order in council or proclamation of his majesty then in force be offered to seamen of their respective classes, and shall also be entitled to their discharge at the expiration of that period, in the same manner and under regulations similar to those established by this act with respect to volunteer seamen."

Seamen after five years' service, agreeing to continue, to be entitled to a fresh bounty.

Sect. 6. "And as an encouragement to seamen to continue in the naval service, be it further enacted, that every seaman belonging to the fleet whose period of five years' service shall expire during the time when any such proclamation as aforesaid shall be in force, and who previous to the expiration of such service shall signify to his commanding officer his desire to continue therein for a further period of five years, and shall be allowed to re-enter accordingly, shall upon such re-entry be entitled to be paid the single bounty offered by his majesty's proclamation to volunteers of his class and rating; and every such volunteer shall at the expiration of such second period of five years be entitled to his discharge, under and subject to the like regulations as are hereinbefore provided with respect to persons entitled to their discharge after five years' service."

Pensioners volunteering to receive their pensions in addition to their pay.

Sect. 7. "Whenever any seaman in the receipt of a pension for wounds or prior services, and being able-bodied, and fit for the naval service, shall, when any such proclamation as aforesaid shall be in force, voluntarily enlist, and shall be received to serve in the navy, he shall, in addition to the pay and other advantages to which he may be entitled, be allowed to receive such pension during the time he shall continue in such further service and in the faithful discharge of his duty."

Provisions in favour of volunteers extended to colonial seamen, who on their discharge shall be sent to their homes.

Sect. 8. "All the provisions contained in this act in favour of volunteers shall be extended to the seamen belonging to the British colonies who shall freely enter themselves to serve in the navy; and that all such colonial seamen, after being discharged at the expiration of five years' service, in case they shall be desirous to return to their native colony, shall either be conveyed thither free of expense, or be allowed a gratuity in money sufficient to cover the cost of their return thereto, as the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral shall think fit."

Act not to diminish the authority of the admiralty in the discharge of seamen.

Sect. 9. "Provided always, that nothing in this act contained shall extend to control or diminish the authority vested in the lord high admiral and the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral to discharge, as he or they shall think fit, or to authorize the discharge of any seaman from his majesty's naval service; and that if any seaman shall be desirous of being discharged from the naval service before the expiration of the period of five years for which he shall be engaged or shall be bound to serve, and shall provide one able seaman or two able-bodied landmen to serve in his stead for a period of five years (if their services shall be so long required), every such seaman shall, upon the approval of such substitutes by the proper officer of the admiralty, and upon their being actually received into the service on board any one of his majesty's ships of war, be forthwith discharged from the navy, and shall be entitled to the same protection as if he had completed a period of five years' service."

Seamen may obtain their discharge on providing substitutes.

Sect. 10. "This act may be altered, amended, or repealed by any other act or acts to be passed during the present session of parliament."

Act may be amended this session.

II. Seamen in Merchant Service.

The recent statute of 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 19, has consolidated the various Merchant's service. prior statutes on the subject of merchant seamen, and enacted several new provisions. Amongst these will be found that of empowering justices of the peace to adjudge summarily upon claims for wages of merchant seamen not exceeding twenty pounds, which claims were formerly enforceable only by action in the superior courts or suit in the admiralty court. By the thirty-eighth section, also, a remedy before two justices of the peace is given in case of assault and battery on board a merchant ship, and new provisions are made as to the apprenticeship of youths to the merchant service. The act also establishes a register of all the British merchant seamen of the United Kingdom, and contains a variety of other new and important provisions for the encouragement and protection of this useful class of persons.

The recent statute of 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 52, also contains some important provisions relative to the support and relief of these persons and their widows and children, in case of their death.

The 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 34, repeals the laws relating to the contribution out of merchant seamen's wages to the support of Greenwich Hospital.

We will proceed to set forth the enactments of these statutes, accompanying them with notes and observations.

By the 4 & 5 Wil. IV. c. 52, intituled "An Act to amend an Act of the Twentieth Year of His Majesty King George the Second, for the Relief and Support of sick, maimed, and disabled Seamen, and the Widows and Children of such as shall be killed, slain, or drowned in the Merchant Service; and for other purposes," [13th August, 1834,] after reciting, "whereas by the 20 Geo. II. c. 38, a body corporate and politic was created by the name of 'The President and Governors for Relief and Support of sick, maimed, and disabled Seamen, and of the Widows and Children of such as shall be killed, slain, or drowned in the Merchant Service,' and divers powers and privileges were thereby granted to the said corporation, and regulations made for the management thereof; and various provisions were by the said act made for the relief and support of maimed and disabled seamen, and the widows and children of such as shall be killed, slain, or drowned as aforesaid: and whereas the 37 Geo. III. c. 73, was passed: and whereas it is expedient to repeal some, and to extend and comprise in one act of parliament others of the provisions of the said two recited acts;" it is enacted, that from and after the thirty-first day of December one thousand eight hundred and thirty-four, from which day (except as hereinafter is expressly provided) this act shall commence and take effect, the whole of the said recited act of the twentieth year of the reign of his said late majesty king George the Second, except so far as the same relates to the incorporation and perpetual succession of the said body corporate and politic, or to the powers and authorities thereby vested in the said president and governors for receiving, possessing, and applying such sums of money as should be contributed, devised, or bequeathed to it, and for purchasing and holding lands and erecting an hospital, or to the rules and method thereby provided for supplying the places of the president and assistants or committees and governors or members thereof so often as vacancies shall occur, and making and altering the bye laws, constitutions, and ordinances of the said corporation; and so much of the said recited act of the thirty-seventh year of the reign of his said late majesty king George the Third as relates to the payment and appropriation to and for the uses and purposes therein mentioned of the wages of deceased seamen and other persons engaged in British merchant ships trading to the West Indies, and to the penalties and forfeitures thereby imposed, so far as the same are payable or recoverable on account of any infraction of the provi-

Sect. 2. "The said president and governors and their successors shall and may and they are hereby authorized and empowered to provide, in such their hospital as aforesaid, for the reception of such seamen as shall be rendered incapable of present or future service by sickness, wounds, or other accidental misfortunes, and those who shall become decrepit or worn out by age, or shall provide for such seamen by allowing them certain pensions, or otherwise as to the said president and governors and their successors shall seem meet and most for the advantage of the said charity; and also to relieve the widows and children of such seamen as shall be killed, slain, or drowned in the said service; and also to relieve the widows and children of such seamen as shall die after having contributed during a term of twenty-one years to the funds of this corporation, provided such children are not of the age of fourteen years, or if of that age or upwards, not capable of getting a livelihood by reason of lameness, blindness, or other infirmities, and are proper objects of charity; and also to relieve the widows and children (such children being proper objects of charity as aforesaid) of such seamen as at the time of their death shall have been receiving or have been entitled to receive pensions, under and by virtue of this act, from the fund hereby to be created, as decrepit or worn-out seamen: provided that no widow shall be entitled to any benefit under this act who shall not have been the wife of such seaman or pensioner before he became entitled to relief under the provisions of this act: provided nevertheless, that no seaman in the said service shall be entitled to any of the provisions or benefits of this act, on account of any hurt or damage he may have received on board any ship or vessel, unless he shall produce or cause to be produced a certificate to the said president, assistants, and committees, of the hurt or damage he hath received, from the master, mate, boatswain, and surgeon, or so many of them as were in the ship or vessel to which such seaman belonged at the time of his receiving such hurt or damage, or of the master and two of the seamen if there be no other officer, or in case the master shall die, or be killed or drowned, then of the person who shall take upon him the care of the ship or vessel, and two of the seamen on board the same, under their hands and seals, thereby signifying how and in what manner such seaman received such hurt or damage, whether in fighting, defending, working, loading, or unloading the said ship or vessel, where and when he entered, and how long he had served on board the same; and the parties so signing and sealing such certificate shall and are hereby required to make oath of the truth of the contents thereof before some one of his majesty's justices of the peace, if given in Great Britain or Ireland or other his majesty's dominions, or the chief officer of the customs of the port or place where there is no justice of the peace, or before the British consul or resident in any foreign country where such certificate is executed (who are hereby respectively authorized and required to administer the same without fee or reward); and in case of sickness, whereby such seaman shall be rendered incapable of service, a certificate signed, sealed, and authenticated in like manner, signifying that he was healthy when he entered on board such ship or vessel, and that such sickness was contracted on board the same, or on shore in doing his duty in the service of the ship, and not otherwise, and expressing the time and place he entered on board such ship or vessel, and how long he had served therein; and that no widow, child, or children of any seaman killed, slain, or drowned in the said service, shall be relieved or entitled to any allowance by virtue of this act unless she or they, or some person on her or their behalf, shall produce a certificate, signed, sealed, and authenticated in like manner, signifying how and in what manner such seaman lost his life in the service of the said ship or vessel, the time and place he entered on board, and how long he had served therein; and that no widow, child, or children of any seaman in the said service shall be entitled to any relief by virtue of this act unless she or they shall produce or cause to be produced a certificate under the hands and seals of the minister and churchwardens and overseers of the poor of the parish, township, or place, or any two of them, or under the hands and seals of the minister and overseers of the poor of the parish, township, or place, or any two of them, where there are no churchwardens, or if in Scotland by the minister and elders, or if in Ireland by a justice of the peace for the parish, township, or place where such widow, child, or children shall at the time reside, and if such widow, child, or children are some of the people called Quakers, then by any two reputable persons of that persuasion of the parish, township, or place where such widow, child, or children have a legal settlement, or do inhabit and reside, to be attested by two or more credible witnesses, that such widow was the lawful wife and real widow, and that such child or children was or were the lawful child or children of such deceased seaman as aforesaid, and that such child or children is and are under the age of fourteen years, or if of that age or upwards, not capable of getting a livelihood by reason of lameness, blindness, or other infirmities, and is or are proper objects of charity; and that no seaman shall be provided for by a pension or otherwise, as decrepit or worn out, unless such seaman shall have served in the merchant service for the space of five years, and shall have during that time contributed and paid the monthly duty out of his wages, in and by the act of the twentieth year of the reign of king George the Second hereinbefore recited, or in and by this act, required to be henceforward paid and deducted as the case may happen, for the uses and purposes in and by this act provided."

Sect. 3. "If any person shall forge, counterfeit, erase, or alter, or shall procure to be forged, counterfeited, erased, or altered, or shall unfairly or unduly obtain, any certificate in order to entitle him or her to any of the pensions, allowances, or benefits of this act, and shall produce or cause such certificate to be produced for that purpose, such certificate shall, upon discovery thereof, be null and void, and such person so applying for relief or provision shall be for ever incapable of receiving any of the benefits of this act, and shall be subject and liable to the like punishment as an incorrigible rogue is subject and liable to, and shall be punished accordingly as such."

Sect. 4. "The said president, with any five or more of the said assistants or committees for the time being, shall make a full court of assistants or committees, and shall meet from time to time upon Wednesdays weekly in or near the city of London, or at such other time or place as they shall think fit to appoint; and such court shall have power, when assembled as aforesaid, in the name of the said corporation and on their account, to apply the monies arising and to be received by virtue of this act, or otherwise belonging to and vested in the said corporation, for the relief and support of such seamen, their widows and children, as are hereinbefore described, and in case there shall be any surplus thereof, or any sum or sums of money shall be contributed and given for the purpose of this act by any well-disposed persons, to lay out the same in parliamentary securities, or to dispose of the same in the purchase of such lands, tenements, or hereditaments as are allowed to be purchased and held by the said corporation by the said recited act of the twentieth year of the reign of his said late majesty George the Second, and with and under their common seal to enter into any covenants or contracts for the purposes aforesaid, as they shall think fit for the better promoting and carrying into effect the provisions of this act; and to appoint and choose, and at their pleasure to remove, displace, and supply, any officers, servants, and other person and persons to be employed for the purposes herein mentioned and intended, or other the affairs of the said corpo-

Sect. 7. "The master, owner, or commander of every such merchant or private ship or vessel is hereby empowered and required to deduct and detain out of the wages, shares, or other profits payable or accruing to such seaman or other person employed on board such ship or vessel (other than such persons as are hereby excepted), the said monthly duty, and shall pay the same, together with the amount of the duty due and owing from himself to such officer or officers as shall on that behalf be appointed by the said president and governors, or the trustees to be appointed at any of the out-ports in manner hereinafter provided, and their successors, for the collecting, recovering, and receiving the said duty of one shilling per month, if such seaman or other person shall have or be entitled to any such wages, shares, or profits."

Sect. 8. "It shall and may be lawful for the said president and governors, and their successors, at a full court of assistants or committees, to appoint such person or persons as they shall think fit to be receiver or receivers of the said duties of two shillings and one shilling per month at the port of London, and also depute and appoint the collectors or other officers of the customs of his majesty, his heirs and successors, in the several out-ports of Great Britain and Ireland, with the concurrence of the commissioners of the said customs, or such other persons as they shall think fit, to collect and receive the same (except in such out-ports and where separate trustees shall have been appointed by virtue of this act); which said receivers, as also the collectors and officers of the customs, are hereby empowered and required to collect, receive, and pay over the said duties according to such instructions and directions as shall be from time to time sent to them in writing by the said president and governors and their successors; and for the care and pains therein of the said collectors and other officers of the customs to be appointed to collect, recover, and receive the said duty, it shall and may be lawful for the said president and governors and their successors, at such court of assistants or committees as aforesaid, to make such allowance to them out of the said duties as they shall judge reasonable, so that the same do not exceed the sum of five pounds per centum on the gross amount thereof."

Sect. 9. "Every master, commander, or owner of any merchant ship or other private ship or vessel navigating the same, or such other person as shall have the care thereof, shall keep a book by way of muster roll or account of the ship's company, signed by himself, in which shall be entered his own christian and surname, and the christian and surnames of all the officers, seamen, and other persons employed in such ship or vessel, and over against each name the age, place of birth, and quality of such seaman or other person, and the time and place when he entered into the service of such ship or vessel; and such master, commander, or owner, or other person having the care of such ship or vessel shall continue to keep such book by way of muster roll during the whole course of the voyage, and shall from time to time enter therein when and where any such master, officer, seaman, or other person shall be discharged from or shall leave or desert such ship or vessel, and when and where any other officers and men shall be shipped on board, describing them in like manner as the persons who first entered on board are directed to be described, and when and where any of them received any hurt or damage, or were killed, slain, or drowned, or otherwise happened to die, in case there should be any such, together with a statement of the amount of wages due to them at the time of death or desertion, and of what clothes or other effects such deceased man shall have left on board; which said account shall be in the form, and shall contain a true and correct return under their respective heads of the several particulars expressed in the schedule marked (A.) and to this act annexed; a duplicate of which account shall, if required, be signed by the said master, commander, or other person having the care of the ship or vessel as aforesaid, and shall be delivered to the collectors or receivers of the said duties so appointed as aforesaid, at whatever port in Great Britain or Ireland any such ship or vessel shall report or discharge her cargo; and every such duplicates for vessels not belonging to such port of discharge shall be forwarded by such receiver to the said president and governors, to be by them transmitted to the trustees of the port to which the vessel shall belong; and in case any such master, commander, or other person shall neglect to keep such muster roll or account, or

Sect. 22. "All and every the trustees for the several out-ports who now are or shall be appointed under and by virtue of the act of the twentieth year of the reign of his said late majesty king George the Second, or of this act, shall and they are hereby required to transmit annually, within sixty days after every thirty-first day of December in every year, to the said president and governors, a true and correct account of the receipts and expenditure during the year of such their several trusts, conformable to a form or plan to be prescribed and forwarded by the said president and governors, under the penalty of twenty pounds, to be recovered and recoverable before a magistrate or justice of the peace as other penalties given by this act; and that such account of the receipts and expenditure of such trustees, together with an account of the receipts and expenditure of such president and governors, shall be annually laid before the honourable the House of Commons."

Sect. 23. "Nothing herein contained shall be construed to extend to oblige the receivers or collectors of the said duty appointed by the trustees of any of the said respective out-ports to send the duplicates of the muster rolls hereby directed to be delivered to the receivers and collectors of the said duties in the manner herein-before mentioned, to the said president and assistants or committees, for any vessels belonging to the ports where such payment shall be made, but such duplicates shall be delivered by such collectors or receivers to the said respective trustees, and to be by them filed and preserved for their use and inspection."

Sect. 24. "No seaman or other person employed on board any merchant ship, steam packets, or other private ship or vessel shall be entitled to receive any provision or benefit by virtue of this act, at the port of London or elsewhere, unless he be subject or liable to the said duty hereby imposed, and shall pay the same when and where the same shall be required of him by virtue of this act."

Sect. 25. "Those seamen who shall have been longest in the said service, and contributed most towards the said duties, shall be first provided for as worn out or decrepit."

Sect. 26. "And whereas it may happen that seamen or other persons employed on board ships or vessels may by accident in loading or unloading the same, or otherwise by doing such duty on shore as well as on board such ships or vessels, receive such hurt or damage that it may endanger their lives to send them to the port to which the ships or vessels respectively belong; be it therefore further enacted, that in case any seaman or other person employed on board any merchant ship or private ship or vessel shall, in doing his duty on shore, or on board any such ship or vessel while in a port other than that to which the said ship or vessel shall belong, break an arm or leg, or be otherwise hurt or maimed, so that it is necessary that immediate care should be taken of him, it shall and may be lawful for the said president and governors at the port of London, and the respective trustees for the out-ports, as the case may be, and they are hereby required, to provide proper relief for every such seaman or other person that shall be so hurt or maimed at their respective ports, until he shall be so well recovered from such hurt or damage as to be removed and sent with safety to the port to which the ship or vessel in which such seaman was at the time of the accident employed shall belong; and the expense of relieving and maintaining such seaman until he be so removed as aforesaid, and also the expense of removing him, not exceeding twopence per mile, shall be re-paid to the said president and governors at the port of London, or to the trustees, if any, for the respective out-port at which the accident shall have happened, by the trustees of the port to which such ship or vessel shall belong." 2. Merchant's Service.

Sect. 27. "In case any seaman or other person shall serve five years or more on board merchant or other ships or vessels belonging to different ports and shall have paid the monthly duties for that entire period, and shall have become decrepit and worn out, and adjudged either by the said president and assistants or committees, or by the trustees at any of the out-ports, a proper object of relief, such person shall be provided for and relieved at the port where he shall have contributed and paid the greatest part of the said duties for the last five years of his service, any thing herein contained to the contrary notwithstanding." 4 & 5 Wil. 4, c. 52. Disabled seamen having served and paid five years to be provided for where they have contributed most.

Sect. 28. "And whereas it may happen that seamen or other persons employed in the merchant service within the limits of this act may be shipwrecked, or taken by the enemies of his majesty, and on their return from shipwreck or imprisonment may be returning with passes to the places of their respective abodes; be it further enacted, that it shall and may be lawful for the said president and governors or the respective trustees, if they think fit, to relieve any such seaman or other person in such manner as they shall think proper." Seamen who have been shipwrecked, or made prisoners by the enemy, may be relieved.

Sect. 29. "And whereas there may be some circumstances wherein some of the respective certificates hereinbefore mentioned cannot be obtained; be it therefore enacted, that in all cases where the certificates directed to be produced by this act for the purpose of entitling the parties producing the same to relief and support cannot be obtained, such other certificates as shall be satisfactory to the said president and governors or trustees respectively shall be received and allowed so as to entitle the party producing the same to the pensions or other relief provided by this act." Where regular certificates cannot be obtained, others may be admitted.

Sect. 30. "All and every sum and sums of money which shall be due for wages to any seaman, mariner, or other person hired or engaged on board any British merchant ship in any port or ports in Great Britain or Ireland, who shall have died on board during the voyage, shall, within three months after the arrival of such merchant ship in any port or ports of Great Britain and Ireland, be paid to the trustees of the said port to be appointed in pursuance of this act, or to the receiver or collector or other authorized agent of the said president and governors, where there are no such trustees, to and for the use of the executor or executors, administrator or administrators of the seaman, mariner, or other person so dying; and in case no claim shall be made on the said trustees by the executors or administrators of such seamen, on account of such wages, within one year after the same shall have been paid over as aforesaid, that then the said trustees of the said port shall remit the same to the collector or receiver of the said president and governors, or other their authorized agent at the port of London, in such manner and at such times as the said president and governors shall direct, to and for the use of the executor or executors, administrator or administrators of the seaman, mariner, or other person so dying; and in case no claim shall be made on the said president and governors by the executors or administrators of such deceased seaman, on account of such wages, within one year after the same shall have been first paid over to any collector, receiver, or agent of the said president and governors, then it shall be lawful for the said president and governors to direct such wages to be paid over (but without interest for the same) to the widow, or if there be no widow claiming, then to the lawful issue respectively, or such persons as by virtue of the statutes of distribution of intestate's effects shall be entitled to the same; and if any master or commander of any such merchant ship shall neglect or refuse to pay over or tender to the said trustees, or the receiver or collector at the port aforesaid, all and every such sum and sums of money within the time hereinbefore limited, he shall forfeit and pay for every such offence double the amount of the sum or sums of money so due to any seaman, mariner, or other person for wages aforesaid."—[See the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 19, s. 25, post, 462.] Wages of deceased seamen to be paid to trustees of port on ship's arrival, to use of executor, &c.

lawfully demanded of the said receiver, collector, or other authorized agent of the said president and governors at the port of London by any legal representative, or widow or issue, or other person hereby authorized, as the case may be, within the term of two years after the first payment thereof to any collector or agent of the said president and governors, shall be forfeited, and shall go and be paid to the use of the said president and governors, or to the trustees of the port, if any, to which such ship belongs, by such receiver, collector, or other authorized agent of the said president and governors at the port of London aforesaid."

Sect. 32. "And whereas by an act passed in the last session of this present parliament, intituled 'An Act for incorporating the Members of a Society commonly called The Seamen's Hospital Society, and their Successors, as therein is mentioned and provided; and for the better enabling and empowering them to carry on the charitable and useful Designs of the said Society,' a certain society was incorporated by the name of the Seamen's Hospital Society: and whereas the said society was instituted for the charitable relief of sick and distressed seamen in the port of London, and for the providing them with medical and surgical aid, lodging, support, and clothing until convalescent: and whereas it is expedient to provide some permanent funds for enabling the said society to carry on their said charitable designs; be it therefore enacted, that the said president and governors, and their successors, or their treasurer or other officer for the time being on their behalf, shall and do, from and after this act shall take effect, from time to time pay over to the said seamen's hospital society, or their treasurer for the time being, the amount of five pounds in every one hundred pounds, and in the same proportion for any greater or less sum, on the net amount to be collected and received by the said president and governors and their successors, and by their receiver, collector, or other authorized agent at the port of London for the aforesaid duties of two shillings per mensem and one shilling per mensem hereby made payable, so far as the same shall be derived from the duty imposed upon seamen, or in respect of the wages of seamen, in such ships or vessels as shall belong to the said port of London, such payments to be made to the said seamen's hospital society, or their treasurer for the time being, every three months; (that is to say,) on the day of , on the day of , on the day of , and on the day of , in every year; and the first of such payments to be made on such of the said days as shall happen next after this act shall take effect; all such payments to be applied by the said seamen's hospital society according to the directions of the aforesaid act of the last session of this present parliament."

Sect. 33. "It shall and may be lawful to and for the said receiver or collector or other authorized agent of the said president and governors at the port of London aforesaid, and he is hereby authorized, to deduct and receive from the gross amount of such sum or sums of money as shall be derived from the unclaimed wages of deceased seamen, so received by him in respect of such wages of deceased seamen as aforesaid, the sum of five pounds per centum as, for, and in satisfaction of all expenses and trouble he may be put to in the receipt, collection, or transmission thereof."

Sect. 34. "All penalties and forfeitures given by this act shall be paid and applied in manner following; (that is to say,) one third part thereof to and for the person or persons who shall inform and sue for the same, and the other two third parts thereof to the said president and governors, on account of the trustees of the port to which such ship or vessel in respect of which the forfeiture shall arise belongs; and such penalty or forfeiture shall be recovered by bill, plaint, or information in any of his majesty's courts of record at Westminster, or such of them as do not exceed the sum of twenty pounds, upon information, on the oath of one or more witnesses, before any one or more of his majesty's justice or justices of the peace in any part of the kingdom of Great Britain or Ireland, who shall not reside more than ten miles from the place of abode of the person or persons complained of; which justice or justices is and are hereby authorized and required to issue out his or their warrant or warrants to bring before him or them every person charged with any offence under this act, and, in case he or they shall refuse or neglect to pay such penalties or forfeitures as aforesaid, to issue his or their warrant or warrants to levy the same by distress and sale of the offender's goods, and, in case no distress can be found, to commit the offender or offenders to the common gaol of the city, town, or place within the jurisdiction of such respective justice or justices, there to remain for the space of three calendar months, or until he or they shall pay the same."

Sect. 35. "If any action shall be brought or suit be commenced against any person or persons for any thing done in pursuance of this act, or in relation to the premises or any of them, every such action or suit shall be laid or brought within two calendar months next after the grievance committed in the county or place where the fact was done, and not elsewhere; and the defendant or defendants in such action may plead the general issue, and give this act, and a tender of amends before action brought, or the special matter, in evidence at any trial to be had hereupon, and that the act or matter was done in pursuance and by the authority of this act; and if the same shall appear to have been so done, or if any such action or suit shall not be brought within the time before limited, and shall be brought in any other county or place than as aforesaid, or the jury shall not consider the aggrieved party entitled to more than the amends tendered, then the jury shall find for the defendant or defendants; or if the plaintiff or plaintiffs shall become nonsuit, or suffer a discontinuance of his, her, or their action or actions, or if a verdict shall pass against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, or if upon demurrer judgment shall be given against the plaintiff or plaintiffs, the defendant or defendants shall have double costs, and shall have such remedy for recovering the same as any defendant or defendants hath or have for costs in other cases at law."

Sect. 36. "This act shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, and shall be judicially taken notice of as such by all judges, justices, and others."

By the 5 & 6 Wil. IV. c. 19, intituled "An Act to amend and consolidate the Laws relating to the Merchant Seamen of the United Kingdom, and for forming and maintaining a Register of all the Men engaged in that Service," [30th July 1835,] reciting, "Whereas the prosperity, strength, and safety of this United Kingdom and of his majesty's dominions do principally depend on a large, constant, and ready supply of seamen, as well for carrying on the commerce as for the defence thereof; and it is therefore necessary to aid by all practicable means the increase of the number of such seamen, and to give them all due encouragement and protection, and to this end to amend and consolidate the laws relating to their regulation and government:" it is enacted, that from and after the 31st day of July, 1835, from which day this act shall commence and take effect, an act passed in the second year of the reign of her late majesty queen Anne, for the increase of seamen, and better encouragement of navigation, and security of the coal trade; and also an act passed in the second year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Second, for the better regulation and government of the seamen in the merchant service; and also an act passed in the second year of the reign of his late majesty king George the Third, for making perpetual the last-mentioned act, and for extending the provisions thereof to his majesty's colonies in America; and also an act passed in the thirty-first year of the reign of his said majesty king George the Third, for the better regulation and government of seamen employed in the coasting trade of this kingdom; and also an act passed in the forty-fifth year of the reign of his said late majesty, for amending the last-mentioned act; and also an act passed in the thirty-

Sect. 2. "It shall not be lawful for any master of any ship or vessel belonging to any subject of his majesty of this United Kingdom trading to parts beyond the seas, or of any British registered ship of the burthen of eighty tons or upwards employed in any of the fisheries of the United Kingdom, or in trading coastwise or otherwise, to carry to sea on any voyage, either from this kingdom or from any other place, any seaman or other person as one of his crew or complement (apprentices excepted), without first entering into an agreement in writing with every such seaman, specifying what monthly or other wages each such seaman is to be paid, the capacity in which he is to act, and the nature of the voyage in which the ship is intended to be employed, so that the seaman may have some means of judging of the probable period for which he is likely to be engaged; and the said agreement shall contain the day of the month and year in which the same shall be made, and shall be signed by the master in the first instance, and by the seamen respectively at the port or place where such seamen shall be respectively shipped; and the master shall cause the same to be, by or in the presence of the party who is to attest their respective signatures thereto, truly and distinctly read over to every such seaman before he shall be required to sign the same, in order that he may be enabled to understand the purport and meaning of the engagement he enters into and the terms to which he is bound."

Sect. 3. "In the cases of ships as aforesaid bound to parts beyond the seas, except as hereinafter provided, every such agreement shall be in the form and shall contain true entries under their respective heads of the several particulars set forth in the schedule to this act annexed and marked (A.), so far as the same can be ascertained; and that the owners and the master of every such ship, or one of them, shall, on reporting his ship's arrival at her port of destination in the United Kingdom, deposit or cause to be deposited with the collector or comptroller of the customs at such port a true copy of such agreement, attested by the signature of the master, to the intent that every person who may be interested in any such agreement may at all times have the means of knowing the terms and conditions thereof; and that in the cases of ships employed in fishing on the coasts of the United Kingdom, and of ships regularly trading from one part of the United Kingdom to another, and of ships regularly trading or making regular voyages to any of the islands of Jersey, Guernsey, Alderney, Sark, and Man, or to any port on the continent of Europe between the river Elbe inclusive and Brest, the agreement to be entered into as aforesaid shall be in the form and shall contain the true entries under their respective heads of the particulars set forth in the schedule to this act annexed and marked (B.), so far as the same can be ascertained; and that the owner or one of the owners of every such ship employed in fishing or in trading in any of the cases last mentioned shall to the like intent, within ten days next after the expiration of every six months ending on the 30th day of June and the 31st day of December in each year, deposit with the collector or comptroller of the customs of the port to which the ship shall belong, a true copy of every agreement which shall have been entered into with any person composing part of the crew thereof within the preceding six months, attested by the signature of such owner; and all copies of agreements so required by this act to be deposited as aforesaid shall, when the same shall have been so deposited, and shall be required to be produced in evidence on the part of any seaman, be received and taken as legal proof of the contents of the agreement."

Sect. 4. "If any master of any such ship as aforesaid shall carry out to sea any seaman (apprentices excepted) without having first entered into such agreement as is hereby required, he shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of ten pounds for or in respect of each and every such seaman he shall so carry out contrary to this act; and if any master shall neglect to cause the agreement to be distinctly read over to each such seaman, as by this act he is enjoined, he shall for every such neglect forfeit and pay the sum of five pounds; and if any master shall neglect to deposit with the collector or comptroller of the customs a copy of the agreement hereby required to be made and deposited as aforesaid, or shall wilfully deposit a false copy of any such agreement, he shall for every such neglect or offence forfeit and pay the sum of fifty pounds."

Penalty for default.

Sect. 5. "No seaman, by entering into or signing such agreement as aforesaid, shall forfeit his lien upon the ship, nor be deprived of any remedy for the recovery of his wages which seamen are now lawfully entitled to against either the ship, the master or the owners thereof; nor shall any agreement made contrary to or inconsistent with the provisions of this act, or any clause whereby a seaman shall consent to forego the right which the maritime law gives him to wages in the case of freight earned by ships subsequently lost, or containing any words to that effect, be valid or binding on any seaman signing the same; and that in cases in which it may be necessary that the agreement should be produced to sustain a claim on the part of a seaman no obligation shall lie upon the seaman to produce the same, nor shall any seaman fail in any suit or proceeding for the recovery of his wages for want of the production of any such agreement, or of any deposited copy thereof as aforesaid, or for the want of any notice to produce the same; any law or usage to the contrary notwithstanding."

Seamen not to be deprived of legal remedies.

No agreement contrary to the act to be valid.

Seamen not bound to produce agreement.

Sect. 6. "In case a seaman shall at any time, after having signed an agreement as hereinbefore mentioned, neglect or refuse to join the ship on board of which he shall have engaged to serve, or shall refuse to proceed to sea in her, or shall absent himself therefrom without leave, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace in any of his majesty's dominions at home or abroad near to the place where such ship shall happen to be, upon complaint of the fact made upon oath by the master, mate, or owner thereof, and such justice is hereby required, by his warrant (a) to cause such seaman to be apprehended and brought before him; and in case such seaman shall not give a reason to the satisfaction of such justice for his neglect, refusal or absence, as the case may be, upon due proof of such neglect, refusal, or absence it shall be lawful for any such justice to commit (b) such seaman to the house of correction, there to be kept to hard labour for a period not exceeding thirty days: provided always, that in case such seaman, on being apprehended and brought before the said justice, shall consent to join the ship and proceed on the voyage for which he shall have agreed, it shall be lawful for the said justice at the request of the master, instead of committing such seaman, to cause him to be conveyed on board the said ship, or to be delivered to the master for the purpose of proceeding on the voyage, and also to award to the master such costs incurred in the apprehension of the seaman as to such justice shall seem reasonable, not exceeding in any case the sum of forty shillings, which shall be chargeable against and may be abated from the wages to grow due to such seaman."

Sect. 7. "If any seaman, after having signed such agreement as aforesaid, or after the ship on board which he shall have agreed to serve shall have left her first port of clearance, and before the period for which he shall have agreed to serve shall be completed, shall wilfully and without leave absent himself from the ship (a), or otherwise from his duty, he shall (in all cases not of absolute desertion, or not treated as such by the master,) forfeit

(a) Mr. Wordsworth in his useful little work on this statute, makes the following note and collection of cases on this provision. Formerly in ships of one hundred tons and upwards, employed in the coasting trade, if a seaman neglected or refused to proceed on the intended voyage, he forfeited to the owners all the wages due to him at the time,—but the forfeiture for desertion afterwards, and before the completion of the voyage, and cargo delivered, or before he had received a discharge in writing from the master, was only one month's wages to the use of Greenwich Hospital, 31 Geo. 3, c. 39, s. 3 and 4. And in all cases of a seaman wilfully absenting himself from the ship without leave, he forfeited to the use of Greenwich Hospital two days' pay for each day's absence, 2 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 5, and 31 Geo. 3, c. 39, s. 4. Absence occasioned by the power of a foreign country in which the ship may happen to be, without any fault on the part of the seaman, does not work any forfeiture. (Beale v. Thompson, 4 East, 546. Smith, 144. 3 B. & P. 405.) So also, where the plaintiff was a foreigner. (Ichason v. Broderick, 4 East, 566. 1 Smith, 153.) So also the forfeiture may be waived, as where it is provided by a ship's articles, that any of the crew who shall absent themselves from the ship without leave, shall forfeit their wages: if, after one of the crew has so absented himself, the master receives him back again, and allows him to work like the others, the forfeiture is waived, and the wages are recoverable. (Miller v. Brant, 2 Camp. 590, per Lord Ellenborough.) To entitle the master to deduct a month's wages for the benefit of Greenwich Hospital, under the 2 Geo. 2, c. 36, ss. 6 & 9, it is incumbent on him to show that the seaman quitted his ship without leave in writing: and such a deduction cannot be set off by the master, in an action for wages by the seaman, unless the master has previously debited himself to Greenwich Hospital for the amount in a book kept according to the direction of the statute 2 Geo. 2, c. 36, s. 3. (Frontine v. Frost, 3 B. & P. 302.) If there be a clause in ship's articles, that the seaman may leave at the end of three months, if the ship is in port or in perfect safety, of which the captain is to be the sole judge, and the ship be in port in safety after three months, the seamen may leave the ship without the permission of the captain. (Neave v. Pratt, 2 N. R. 408.) This being the case of a private ship of war, and not of a merchant vessel, the forfeiture depended upon the particular contract of the parties, and not upon any legislative enactment. If seamen go on shore on the ship's duty, and when the boat is about to return, request to be permitted to remain on shore to get some victuals, which is refused and the boat goes without them, if they afterwards go and offer to return to their duty on board the ship, it is not desertion. (Sigard v. Roberts, 3 Esp. 71.) A sailor, under articles providing for a forfeiture of his wages in case of breach of any of his engagements, among which is that of serving faithfully during the voyage, can recover nothing, if he is left ashore in the course of it owing to his own fault in being absent, though he had no intention of deserting. (Sherman v. Bennett, M. & M. 489.) By a clause in the ship's articles of a south sea whaler, the seamen serving on board were to lose their wages, if they did not return with the ship to the port of London. After serving twenty-seven months, some of the seamen were with the consent of the captain exchanged into another ship for others belonging to that ship: held, that if these seamen had lost their wages under the articles, they could at any rate receive a reasonable compensation for their services under the count for work and labour. (Hillyard v. Mount, 3 C. & P. 93.) Semble, that a regulation in the seaman's articles, of a merchant ship, that "every seaman committed to custody for the preservation of good order, shall forfeit his wages, together with every thing belonging to him on board the ship," is in point of law a good and proper regulation. (Rice v. Haylett, 3 C. & P. 534.) If seamen have incurred a forfeiture of their wages, and in a time of distress, when the ship is aground, the captain call on those seamen to assist in getting her off, this is no waiver of the forfeiture; but if the captain continues them in their work after the peril is over, it is otherwise. (Train v. Bennett, 3 C. & P. 3., M. & M. 82.) Where the second mate of a vessel was ordered, with three other seamen to take the ship's boat and convey the captain on board, who had gone on shore at the Mauritius, out of his wages to the master or owner of such ship the amount of two days pay for every twenty-four hours of such absence, and in a like proportion for any less period of time, or, at the option of the said master, the amount of such expenses as shall have been necessarily incurred in hiring a substitute to perform his work; and in case any seaman while he shall belong to the ship shall without sufficient cause neglect to perform such his duty as shall be reasonably required of him by the master or other person in command of the ship, he shall be subject to a like forfeiture in respect of every such offence, and of every twenty-four hours continuance thereof; and in case any such seaman, after having signed such agreement, or after the ship's arrival at her port of delivery, and before her cargo shall be discharged, shall quit the ship without a previous discharge (d) or leave from the master thereof, he shall forfeit to the master or owner one month's pay out of his wages: provided always, that no such forfeitures shall be incurred unless the fact of the seaman's temporary absence, neglect of duty, or quitting the ship shall be duly entered or recorded in the ship's log book, which entry shall specify truly the hour of the day at which the same shall have occurred, and the period during which the seaman was absent or neglected his duty, the truth of which entry it shall be incumbent on the owner or master in all cases of dispute to substantiate by the evidence of the mate or some other credible witness."

Sect. 8. "In all cases where the seaman shall have contracted for wages by the voyage or by the run, and not by the month or other stated period of time, the amount of forfeitures to be incurred by seamen under this act shall be ascertained in manner following; (that is to say,) if the whole time spent in the voyage agreed upon shall exceed one calendar month, the forfeiture of one month's pay, expressed in this act, shall be accounted and taken to be a forfeiture of a sum of money bearing the same proportion to the whole wages as a calendar month shall bear to the whole time spent in the voyage, and in like manner a forfeiture of two days pay or less shall be accounted and taken to be a forfeiture of a sum bearing the same proportion to the whole wages as the same period of time shall bear to the whole time and on their getting on shore, they refused to return with him, but remained there all night, and he was obliged to get back to his ship in another boat, and redeem his on the following morning, when such mate was taken before a magistrate at the Mauritius, and committed to prison for a month; held, that this was such an act of disobedience as to warrant the captain to detain his property on board the vessel by way of forfeiture; and consequently, that trover could not be maintained against the captain for such detention. (Weatherpen v. Laidler, 8 Moore, 37.) If a seaman's claim for wages is resisted on the ground that he would not do his work, which by the ship's articles is to cause forfeiture of wages, it is a good answer to this defence to show that the refusal to work was caused by the misconduct of the captain, which went to induce the men to incur such forfeitures. (Train v. Bennett, 3 C. & P. 3; M. & M. 82.) The legislature has also punished with the forfeiture of wages, the offence of neglecting or refusing to assist the master in defending the ship against the attack of pirates, 22 & 23 Car. 2. c. 11, s. 7. (Abb. 472.) So also it seems, that neglect of duty, drunkenness, or any cause sufficient to justify a master in discharging a seaman during the voyage, would also deprive the seaman of his wages. (The Exeter, 2 Rob. A. R. 261.) So also if the cargo be embezzled or injured by the fraud or negligence of the seamen, so that the merchant has a right to claim a satisfaction from the master and owners, they may, by the custom of merchants, deduct the value thereof from the wages of the seamen, by whose misconduct the injury has taken place. (Molloy, Bk. 2, c. 3, s. 9, 2 Shower, 167. 1 Ld. Raym. 650. Abb. 472.) This can be considered only as affecting the particular individual guilty of the embezzlement, and not the whole crew. And an innocent person is not, it seems, liable to contribute a portion of his wages to make good the loss occasioned by the misconduct of others. (Thompson v. Collins, 1 N. R. 347.) If there be a want of sufficient provisions on board the ship, it is a sufficient justification for his leaving the vessel, and will not deprive him of his right to his wages. (The Castille, 1 Hag. A. R. 59, and see The Eliza, Id. 186.)

spent in the voyage; and if the whole time spent in the voyage shall not exceed one calendar month, the forfeiture of one month's pay shall be accounted and taken to be a forfeiture of the whole wages contracted for; and if such time shall not exceed two days, the forfeiture of two days' pay shall be accounted and taken to be a forfeiture of the whole wages contracted for; and the master is hereby authorized to abate the amount of all forfeitures hereinbefore enacted out of the wages of any seaman incurring the same."

Sect. 9. "Every seaman who shall absolutely desert (a) the ship to which he shall belong shall forfeit to the owner or master thereof all his clothes and effects which he may leave on board, and all wages and emoluments to which he might otherwise be entitled, provided the circumstances attending such desertion be entered in the log book at the time, and certified by the signature of the master and mate or other credible witness; and that an absence of a seaman from the ship for any time within the space of twenty-four hours immediately preceding the sailing of the ship without permission from the master thereof, or for any period however short, under circumstances plainly showing that it was his intention not to return thereto, shall be deemed an absolute desertion; and in case any such desertion shall take place in parts beyond the seas, and the master of the ship shall be under the necessity of engaging any seaman as a substitute for the deserter at a higher rate of wages than that stipulated in the agreement to be paid to the seaman deserting, the owner or master of the ship shall be entitled to recover from the deserter by summary proceeding, in the same manner as wages are by this act made recoverable, any excess of wages which such owner or master shall pay to such substitute beyond the amount which would have been payable to the deserter in case he had duly performed his service pursuant to his agreement."

Sect. 10. "If any person shall, either on shipboard or on shore, harbour or secrete a seaman who shall have signed an agreement to proceed on a voyage to parts beyond the seas, and shall have deserted or absented himself without leave from his ship, knowing or having reason to believe him to be a deserter or to be absent without leave, every person so offending shall for every such seaman so harboured or secreted forfeit and pay the sum of ten pounds; and that no debt exceeding in amount five shillings, incurred by any seaman after he shall have signed any such agreement as aforesaid, shall be recoverable until the voyage agreed for shall have been concluded; nor shall it be lawful for any keeper of a public house or of a lodging house for seamen to withhold or detain any chest, bed or bedding, clothes, tools, or other effects of any seaman, for any pretended debt alleged to have been contracted by any such seaman; and in case any such chest, bed, bedding, clothes, tools, or other effects as aforesaid shall be withheld or detained contrary to this act, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace in any part of his majesty's dominions, upon complaint upon oath to be made by any such seaman or on his behalf, to inquire into the matter, and if he shall see right by warrant under his hand and seal to cause any such property or effects so withheld or detained contrary to this act to be seized and delivered over to the seaman."

Sect. 11. "The master or owner of every ship shall and he is hereby required to pay to every seaman entering into such contract as aforesaid his wages, if the same shall be demanded, within the respective periods following; (that is to say,) if the ship shall be employed in trading coastwise, the wages shall be paid within two days after the termination of the agreement, or at the time when any such seaman shall be discharged, whichever shall than coastwise, then the wages shall be paid at the latest within three days

5 & 6 Wil. 4, c. 19.

(a) Mr. Wordsworth in his treatise on this statute, p. 23, has the following note on this subject. The payment of wages is generally dependent upon the payment of freight,—if the ship has earned freight, the seamen have in like manner earned their wages, but this general principle does not apply with respect to seamen entering into the navy, whose wages in that event become at once due and payable, 5 & 6 Wil. 4, c. 19, s. 46. And as in general, if a ship destined on a voyage out and home has delivered her outward-bound cargo, but perishes in the homeward voyage, the freight for the outward voyage is due, so in the same case the seamen are entitled to receive their wages for the time employed in the outward voyage and the unloading of the cargo, unless by the terms of the contract the outward and homeward voyages are consolidated into one. (Anon. 1 Ld. Raym. 639, 739. Abb. 447. And see further on this subject, Anon. 2 Shower 283. Buck v. Rawlinson, 1 Bro. P. C. 102. Edwards v. Child, 2 Vern. 727.) It has of late years been usual to stipulate by express terms in the agreement, that in case the ship shall by danger of the sea, or any other accident whatsoever, be disabled, or lost during the voyage for which she is destined, so that she does not return to or arrive at the port of London, the seamen shall not receive or claim any further wages than the impress money paid to them in advance, notwithstanding the ship shall at any time before her being so disabled or lost, have broke bulk, or delivered any goods at any port or place whatsoever. And there is no instance of a claim made by the seamen against the terms of this clause in the articles. (Abb. 449.)

As to what was deemed the port of discharge, with reference to the seamen's wages, see Appleby v. Dods, 8 East, 300. If the owners of a ship abandon an intended voyage after the seamen have been hired, the seamen are to be paid for the time during which they may have been employed on board the ship. (Wells v. Osman, 2 Ld. Raym. 1044.) In a case of shipwreck, where the parts of a stranded ship were sold for more than sufficient to pay the wages of the seamen, no part of the cargo having been saved, and the seamen having exerted themselves very laboriously to save the parts of the ship, and not having departed until they were dismissed by the master, the court of admiralty admitted their claim to the wages. (The Neptune, 1 Hag. 227.)

Wages—loss of vessel. — A seaman entered into articles of agreement to serve on board a ship “bound from the port of London to the South Seas to procure a cargo of sperm oil, and to return therewith to the port of London, where the voyage was to end;” and he was to receive in lieu of wages, a 95th share of the net proceeds of the cargo. By the 6th article of the agreement, it was stipulated that “no one of the said officers and crew shall demand or be entitled to his share of the net proceeds of the said cargo until the arrival of the said ship or vessel at London, and her said cargo shall be there sold and delivered, and the money for the same actually received by the owner; nor unless he shall have well and truly performed the above-mentioned voyage according to the true intent and meaning of these articles.” The vessel sailed upon the voyage, and procured a cargo; but on her voyage home was disabled and condemned in a foreign port. The cargo was transhipped, and, with the exception of a small portion sold for repairs, was delivered in London, and the freight upon it paid. The seaman accompanied the cargo in the vessel to which it was transhipped, but died before it reached London. Held that the representatives of the seaman were not entitled to his share of the proceeds of the cargo under the agreement, but only to a quantum meruit for his services on board the second vessel. As to the time of payment of seamen's wages. This in many cases depended upon the arrival of the ship at her intended port of discharge, see above, and the 8 Geo. 1, c. 24, s. 7; 2 Geo. 2, c. 28, s. 7; 12 Geo. 2, c. 30; 37 Geo. 3, c. 73. Abb. 453. And by the 7th section of the 2 after the cargo shall have been delivered, or within ten days after the seaman's discharge, whichever shall first happen; in either of which last-mentioned cases of payment being delayed the seaman shall at the time of his discharge be entitled to be paid on account a sum equal to one fourth part of the estimated balance due to him; and in case any master or owner shall neglect or refuse to make payment in manner aforesaid he shall for every such neglect or refusal forfeit and pay to the seaman the amount of two days pay for each day not exceeding ten days during which payment shall without sufficient cause be delayed beyond the period at which such wages or part wages are hereby required to be paid as aforesaid, for the recovery of which forfeiture the seaman shall have the same remedies as he is by law entitled to for the recovery of his wages: Provided always, that nothing in this clause contained shall extend to the cases of ships employed in the southern whale fishery, or on voyages for which seamen by the terms of their agreement are compensated by shares in the profits of the adventure."

Such payment of wages to be deemed valid notwithstanding bill of sale, &c.

Sect. 12. "Every such payment of wages to a seaman shall be valid and effectual in law notwithstanding any bill of sale or assignment which may have been made by any such seaman of such wages, or of any attachment or incumbrance thereon; and that no assignment or sale of wages made prior to the earning thereof, nor any power of attorney expressed to be irrevocable for the receipt of any such wages, shall be valid or binding upon the party making the same."

Masters to give seamen their certificates on their discharge.

Sect. 13. "Upon the discharge of a seaman from the ship in which he shall have served he shall be entitled to receive from the master a certificate of his service and discharge, specifying the period of service and the time and place of the discharge of such seaman, which certificate shall be signed by the master; and if any master shall refuse to give such certificate to any such seaman without having reasonable cause for his refusal, he shall for every such offence forfeit and pay to him the sum of five pounds."

Penalty for default.

For obtaining immediate payment of wages of seamen in certain cases.

Sect. 14. "If after a seaman shall have been discharged from any ship or vessel three days he shall be desirous of proceeding to sea on another voyage, and in order thereto shall require immediate payment of the wages due to him, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace in any part of his majesty's dominions, on application from such seaman, and on satisfactory proof that he would be prevented from employment by delay, to summon [see form, post] the master or owner of such ship or vessel before him, and to require cause to be shown why immediate payment of such wages should not be made; and if it shall appear to the satisfaction of such justice that there is no reasonable cause for delay he shall order payment to be made forthwith, and in default of compliance with such order such master or owner shall forfeit and pay the sum of five pounds."

Summary mode of recovering wages not exceeding 20*l*.

Sect. 15. "And whereas seaman, in cases of dispute, may be exposed to great inconvenience, expense, and delay in obtaining payment of their wages; for remedy thereof be it enacted, that in all cases of wages not exceeding twenty pounds, which shall be due and payable to a seaman for his service in any ship as aforesaid, it shall be lawful for any justice of the peace in any part of his majesty's dominions residing near to the place where the ships shall have ended her voyage, cleared at the Custom House, or discharged her cargo, or near to the place where the master or owner upon whom respectively the claim is made shall be or reside, upon complaint on oath to be made to such justice by any such seaman or on his behalf, to summon such master or owner to appear before him to answer such complaint, and upon the appearance of such master or owner, or in default thereof on due proof of his having been so summoned, such justice is hereby empowered to examine upon the oath of the parties and their respective witnesses (if there be any) touching the complaint and the amount of wages due, and to make such order [see Form, post] for payment thereof as shall to such justice appear reasonable and just; and in case such order shall not be obeyed within two days next after the making thereof it shall be lawful for such justice to issue his warrant [see Form, post] to levy the amount of the wages awarded to be due, by distress and sale of the goods and chattels of the party on whom such order for payment shall be made, rendering to such party the overplus (if any shall remain of the produce of the sale) after deducting thereout all the charges and expenses incurred by the seaman in the making and hearing of the complaint, as well as those incurred by the distress and levy and in the enforcement of the justice's order; and in case sufficient distress cannot be found it shall be lawful for the said justice to cause the amount of the said wages and expenses to be levied on the ship in respect of the service on board which the wages are claimed, or the tackle and apparel thereof; and if such ship shall not be within the jurisdiction of such justice, then he is hereby empowered to cause the party upon whom the order for payment shall be made to be apprehended and committed to the common gaol of the county, there to remain without bail until payment shall be made of the amount of the wages so awarded, and of all costs and expenses attending the recovery thereof; and the award and decision of such justice as aforesaid shall be final and conclusive as well on every such seaman as on the owner and master of the ship." [Notwithstanding this enactment the seaman may proceed in the admiralty court, subject however to not settling his costs of suit, as is provided for by the next section. It will be seen that the statute does not admit of an appeal against the magistrate's decisions, but as the right to a certiorari is not expressly taken away, that right exists.]

Sect. 16. "If any suit for the recovery of a seaman's wages shall be instituted against the ship, or the master or owner thereof, either in the high court of admiralty or in any vice-admiralty court, or against the master or owner in any court of record in his majesty's dominions, and it shall appear to the judge in the course of such suit that the plaintiff might have had as effectual a remedy for the recovery of his wages by complaint to a justice of the peace as herein-before provided, then and in every such case it shall be lawful for such judge and he is hereby required to certify to that effect, and thereupon no costs of suit shall be awarded to the plaintiff."

Sect. 17. "Whenever any ship whatever belonging to any subject of the United Kingdom, except in cases of wreck or condemnation, shall be sold at any port out of his majesty's dominions, the master in all such cases (unless the crew in the presence of the British consul or vice-consul, or in case of there not being any such consul or vice-consul, then in the presence of one or more British resident merchants at such port, shall signify their consent in writing to be there discharged,) shall and he is hereby required, besides paying them the wages to which they shall be entitled under the agreement, either to provide them with adequate employment on board some other British vessel homeward bound, or to furnish the means of sending them back to the port in his majesty's dominions at which they were originally shipped, or to some port in the United Kingdom, as shall be agreed upon, by providing them with a passage home, or depositing with the consul or vice-consul such a sum of money as shall be by him deemed reasonably sufficient to defray the expenses of their subsistence and passage; and if the master shall refuse or neglect to do so, such expenses when defrayed shall be a charge upon the owner whose ship shall be so sold, except in cases of barratry (a), wreck (b), or condemnation, and may be recovered against such owner as so much money paid and expended on his account, together with full costs, at the suit of the consul or other person defraying such expenses, or of his majesty's attorney general on behalf of his majesty, in case the same shall have been allowed to the consul out of the public monies."

Sect. 18. "And whereas it is necessary that due provision should be made for the preservation of the health and lives of the seamen employed in the merchant service; be it further enacted, that every ship sailing from the United Kingdom to any place out of the same shall have and keep constantly on board the same a sufficient supply of medicines suitable to accidents and diseases arising on sea voyages, which shall be renewed from time to time as shall be found requisite; and in case any default shall be made in providing or keeping supplied such medicines as aforesaid, or in case any of the seamen shall receive any hurt or injury in the service of the ship, (a) the expense of providing the necessary surgical and medical advice, and attendance and medicines which the seaman shall stand in need of until he shall have been cured or shall have been brought back to some port of the United Kingdom, shall be borne and defrayed by the owner and master of the ship, or one of them, without any deduction whatever on that account from the seaman's wages."

Sect. 19. "And whereas it is expedient that a register should be formed and maintained of all the mariners and seafaring men of the United Kingdom, be it therefore enacted, that as soon as conveniently may be after the passing of this act there shall be established in the port of London an office, to be called 'The General Register Office of Merchant Seamen,' which shall consist of a registrar and such assistants and clerks with such salaries and allowances as shall be fixed and regulated from time to time by the lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office of lord high admiral of the United Kingdom for the time being, and that such office shall be kept at the custom house of the said port, and daily attendance shall be given thereat during the usual hours of business there; and the said registrar, his assistants and clerks, shall be under the control and directions of the said lord high admiral or the commissioners for executing the office aforesaid for the time being."

Sect. 20. "For the more readily carrying this act into execution all letters and packets addressed to and sent by the said registrar upon any business relating to the register office created by this act shall be free from the duty of postage; and that all letters and packets which shall be forwarded by the said registrar in the execution of his duty as such registrar shall be under a cover, with the words, 'Pursuant to Act of Parliament of the Fifth Year of King William the Fourth,' printed thereon, and the said registrar shall sign his name under such words, and every such cover shall be sealed with the seal of his office; and if the said registrar or any other person shall send or cause to be sent under any such cover any paper, letter or writing, or any inclosure, other than what shall relate to the public business of the said office, every person shall for every such offence forfeit and pay the sum of one hundred pounds."

Sect. 21. "And whereas by an act of the last session of Parliament, intituled An Act to amend An Act of the Twentieth Year of His Majesty King George the Second, for the Relief and Support of sick, maimed, and disabled Seamen, and the Widows and Children of such as shall be killed, slain, or drowned in the Merchant Service, and for other Purposes, a certain book by way of muster roll is for the purposes of the said act required to be kept on board merchant ships, which book is to contain such entries and statement of accounts as by the said act is required: and whereas it is expedient for the better effectuating the objects of this act that a due return should be made to the said registrar of merchant seamen of many of the particulars in the said act specified; [see 4 & 5 Wil. Masters of ships in home trade to return similar lists.

Sect. 23. "In case any ship as aforesaid shall be lost or sold while absent from the United Kingdom, then an account containing a similar return as required in the several and respective cases before mentioned, which shall be made out up to the period of such loss or sale, shall by the persons who shall at that time have been respectively owner and master thereof, or by one of them, be delivered or transmitted to the said registrar in the port of London so soon as he shall be enabled to make such return after the loss, and within twelve calendar months at farthest after the sale of the ship."

Return to be made in case of ship lost or sold abroad.

Sect. 24. "The said several accounts and returns by this act required to be deposited with or delivered to the collector or comptroller as aforesaid shall by such officers of the customs be transmitted from time to time to the said registrar for the purposes of this act; and every such owner or master of any ship as aforesaid who shall refuse or wilfully neglect to deliver or cause to be delivered any such list or account as by this act is required, shall for every such refusal or neglect forfeit and pay the sum of twenty-five pounds."

Lists to be certified, and transmitted to the registrar.

Penalty on the master for neglect.

Sect. 25. Parish boys may be put out apprentices in the sea service (a).

Sect. 26. "And whereas the giving due encouragement to such of the youth of the United Kingdom as shall voluntarily betake themselves to the sea service, and obliging others to do so who by reason of their own or their parents' poverty are destitute of the means of obtaining subsistence and employment, will not only greatly tend to the increase of able and experienced seamen, as well for the service of the royal navy as for carrying on the commerce of his majesty's subjects, but will likewise provide them with employment, and thus materially diminish the burthen of expense cast upon parishes by their maintenance; be it therefore enacted, that it shall be lawful for the overseers of the poor or other persons having the authority of overseers of the poor of any parish, township, or place in the United Kingdom, or in whom the duty of overseers or guardians of the poor shall or may be vested, and they are hereby empowered, to bind by indenture and put out any boy having attained the age of thirteen years, and of sufficient health and strength, who or whose parent or parents is or are chargeable to or maintained by any such parish or township, or who shall beg for alms therein, with his consent but not otherwise, an apprentice in the sea service to any of his majesty's subjects being the master or owner of any ship registered in any port of the United Kingdom, for so long time and until such boys shall respectively attain the age of twenty-one years, which binding shall be as effectual in the law to all intents and purposes as if such boy had been bound by virtue of any statute now in force respecting the binding of parish apprentices, or as if such boy were of full age and had bound himself an apprentice, and notwithstanding the residence of the master or owner to whom he may be bound shall be more than forty miles distant from such parish or place: provided always, that every such binding shall be made in the presence of two justices of the peace acting for the county, riding, division, city, borough, or place within which such parish or township shall be situate, which justices shall execute the indenture in testimony of their having been satisfied that such boy hath attained the age and is of sufficient health and strength as required by this act; and to the end that the period when the service under such indenture shall expire may the more certainly appear, the age of every such boy shall be inserted in his indenture, the same being truly taken from a copy of the entry of his baptism in the register book of the parish in which he was born (where the same can be obtained), which copy shall be given and attested by the offi-
